Green Tomato Preserves.—For nine pounds of tomatoes take four and a half pounds of sugar, one pint of vinegar, the rind of three lemons cut in small pieces and a teaspoonful of whole cloves. Cut the tomatoes in halves, or if large, cut in quarters; put on to cook in the syrup made by boiling the sugar and vinegar together with the spice. Boil slowly a long time, or until the syrup is very rich and the tomato thoroughly cooked; then place in self-sealing bottles.

A Simple Apple Pudding.—Peel six large tart apples, cut them into quarters; remove the core, lay the apples in a bowl of cold water. Place the peel and core in a saucepan, barely cover with water, place them over the fire, cover and cook till tender, then inclose them in a piece of cheesecloth, press out all the liquid, return the liquid to the fire and when it boils put in the apples. Cook five minutes, carefully remove the apples to a pudding dish, boil the liquid fifteen minutes, then measure it. Add to one cup of liquid one cup of sugar; boil until the sugar is dissolved (about two minutes); pour it over the apples. When cold mix one pint of flour with one and a half teaspoonfuls baking powder, half teaspoonful salt; mix the yolk of two eggs with one and a half cups of milk, add it to the flour and mix all together. Add last the beaten whites, pour this latter over the apples and bake in a medium hot oven from twenty to thirty minutes. Serve with hard sauce.

REV. DRURY LACY, D. D.

The Rev. Drury Lacy, D. D., whose portrait we present this week to our readers, was born in Prince Edward county, Virginia, at Ararat the country seat of his father, Rev. Drury Lacy, on the 3rd of August, 1802, and died at Jonesboro, Moore county, N. C., then the residence of his son, Rev. Wm. S. Lacy, on the 1st of August, 1884. He was buried in Raleigh, N. C., where so many years of his useful life had been spent, on the day he would have rounded out his 82nd year, the 3rd of August, 1884. For more than fifty years he had lived and labored in North Carolina, had devoted himself to the interests and welfare of her people, and had been honored and beloved by them as few men in the State have been. He was loyal to his native State, but not less so to the State of his devotion. On one occasion in the Synod of North Carolina, being twitted with his devotion to Virginia, and the matter under discussion being assailed because of his advocacy, and he a Virginian, he electrified the body, as with his rich resonant voice, and in his frank natural way he spoke out: "Moderator, brethren, hear me. It is true I was born in Virginia, and I am proud of it. You are North Carolinians because you were born here, and can't help it. I am a North Carolinian by choice. Moderator, I love Virginia, I am not ashamed to own it. I love Virginia as I love my mother," bowing his head reverently as he said this—and then raising himself to his full stature, erect, manly, beaming, he added, "and I love North Carolina as I love my wife." 'Tis needless to say his loyalty to the Synod or the State was never again questioned.

His father was the Rev. Drury Lacy, at one time Vice-President of Hampden-Sidney College in connection with Rev. John Blair Smith as President, and acting as President, for eight years. He was well known and widely influential, often a member of the General Assembly, and moderator of that venerable court in 1809. Having lost his left hand in his boyhood, and having a silver cap covering the stump, and having an unusually rich, melodious and penetrating voice, he was called by his brethren, "Lacy with the silver hand and the silver voice."

The subject of this sketch was left an orphan in his thirteenth year, and was fitted for college by his brother, Rev. William S. Lacy, who continued the classical school at Ararat that had been taught by his father. He was graduated from Hampden-Sidney College at the age of twenty, and taught at Ararat, succeeding his brother who removed to Tennessee. He married in 1824, Miss Williana Wilkinson, a lady of great refinement and delicacy of feelings and manners, accomplished in literature, and with more than usual culture in music. Mr. Lacy taught school and conducted a small farm until his conversion in 1828, under the preaching of Rev. A. Nettleton, when he at once entered Union Theological Seminary, walking from his home, three miles distant, daily to his recitations. He was licensed in April, 1831, by West Hanover Presbytery; laboring efficiently in mission fields, was ordained Evangelist by East Hanover Presbytery in April, 1833, laboring as home missionary in Amelia county and the adjacent counties. Through his labors chiefly, three churches were built in these fields. He accepted a call to New Bern, N. C., and entered upon his pastorate there January, 1834, leaving in December, 1836. He became pastor of the church in Raleigh in 1837, and continued till called to the Presidency of Davidson College in June, 1855. These eighteen and a half years of pastoral labor in Raleigh were fruitful of great good not only in the city itself, but in the whole State. He was much sought as a preacher on special occasions, at communion services and at protracted meetings, and thus preached in Hillsboro, Chapel Hill, Greensboro, Oxford and many other places in Orange Presbytery. The capital of the State being Raleigh, the officials of the State Government, the Justices of the Supreme Court, and the members of the State Legislature were much in attendance upon his ministry, and among his warmest friends were members of other communions, who would attend the Presbyterian Church while in Raleigh. Many men of influence in the State traced their conversion to his preaching—among them such eminent and useful men as Rev. Dr. Samuel B. McPheeters, Rev. Dr. Charles Phillips, Judge J. G. Shepherd, Hon. Giles Mebane, and others.

From 1855 to 1861, he was President of Davidson College and Professor of Mental and Moral Philosophy. In 1862, he was again an evangelist and labored in Orange Presbytery. He received that year a commission as chaplain in the Confederate service, and did duty in the field and in the hospitals at Wilson and Raleigh. At the close of the war, without means, he engaged with his sons in teaching a school for boys in Raleigh, and then with his wife in 1868 in teaching a school for girls. This school was afterwards incorporated into the Peace Institute. In this institution, Dr. Lacy lived, Mrs. Lacy being Lady Principal—he having no other connection with the school. But his presence was a benediction and his apartments a delightful retreat frequented by the young ladies at their times of leisure and specially when sad or homesick. During this part of his life he preached at Oakland, Pittsboro and Haywood and his ministry was blessed in the nurture and growth of feeble churches. After the death of his wife in 1880, he made his home with his son, Rev. Wm. S. Lacy in Jonesboro, preaching as his infirmities would permit, with great acceptance. The infirmities of advancing age, did not affect his mental faculties, and he kept abreast with the work of the Church, and in sympathy with all of passing interest. His death was sudden, and exceeding sweet, as at sunset, he lay down to rest, and passed quietly away.

In personal appearance Dr. Lacy was tall and of remarkably attractive and imposing presence. His eye was a fine blue-gray, kindling and lighting and melting. His face was fair and his color and freshness abode even to advanced age. His voice was remarkably rich and strong, full of power, tenderness and pathos. He was a fine singer, and his deep bass like soft thunder was always welcome in any circle of song, sacred or secular. His manners were exceedingly warm and cordial. He was a friend-winner everywhere, and was always gaining new friends and cementing old friendships. One writer felicitously said of him "He always kept his friendships in repair." He was so gracious and courtly in manner and speech, he was so manifestly sincere and true, so winning and lovable, that every one was drawn toward him, and he was greatly and most ardently and devotedly beloved. As a preacher, he was warm, impetuous, forcible, often, culminating in truest eloquence. He wrote his sermons fully and with care, but his manuscript proved but little obstacle, and it was often not known that he read. His enunciation was almost perfect. His reading of the Scripture or of the hymn was admirable and most impressive. His eye scarcely rested on the page, but scanned the audience, and it seemed as if he were reciting the passage or the psalm. His ministry was much blessed.

His personal magnetism gave him great power as President of Davidson College. He drew to him the affection and confidence of the young men. His manliness, simplicity and sincerity, his open hearted, transparent and profound interest in them, won their admiration and love. He was a faithful pastor, a loving father to them. He did not love to teach, nor were the duties of the executive of an institution agreeable to him, and he often felt that he had made a mistake in accepting the Presidency. But his influence was most beneficent, his administration most successful and his teaching sound and thorough.

His first wife died in 1846, and in 1849, he was again married to Miss Mary Ritchie Rice, eldest daughter of Rev. Benjamin Holt Rice, D. D. She was in every way a wife worthy of her honored husband—a woman of strong mind, of noble endowments, of high culture and attainment, of admirable executive ability, eminently practical and wise, and with ripest Christian character. For more than thirty years they lived together, mutual helpers in all good work.

Of the issue of the first marriage two children survive, Mrs. B. L. Dewey, of Charlotte, N. C., and the Rev. Wm. S. Lacy, D.D., of Norfolk, Va. Of the second marriage all the children are living: Mrs. F. W. Vanwagener, of East Orange, N. J., the Hon. Benjamin Rice Lacy, of Raleigh, N. C., and Dr. John Holt Lacy, of Solomonville, Arizona.

THE INDIA FUND.

One day recently a friend in handing five dollars to Mr. McClure to be sent with the remittances through this office for the relief of sufferers from the Famine in India said to him that if the suffering was much diminished the money might be applied to the support of Presbyterian Missions in that land. If that appears good Rev. Mr. Wynkoop will be pleased to act upon the suggestion. In acknowledgement of the second remittance, Mr. Wynkoop, says, under date Allahabad, India, Sept. 7th, 1897: "Yours of 2nd August reached me by last mail, (prompt mail service is it not?) The enclosed Bill of Exchange realized 68 rupees. The balance of your first remittance I sent to some good missionaries, who were in great need of money for medicines to give to the half starved people suffering from the disease which is always near famine."

In this connection the following telegram to the Associated Press will be of interest to our readers and especially to all contributors to the Famine Fund:

At the final meeting to-day, (London, October 7th,) of the committee of the Indian famine fund at the Mansion House, the lord mayor, Sir George Faudel Phillips, announced that the total subscriptions amounted to $549,300. For every pound collected 19s 11 1-2d had been remitted to India, demonstrating that the expense of the administrators of the fund had been most minute.

There are still a million and a half of persons receiving relief. However, the necessity of relieving sufferers from the famine is rapidly decreasing, and the relief work in most of the provinces of India will be closed in a few weeks.

The total of the subscriptions from Great Britain, the United States, the British colonies and India, the lord mayor concluded, amounted to nearly $1,500,000, and the total cost of the famine was over $10,000,000.

The lord mayor, replying to the address of thanks of the Secretary of State for India, referred gratefully to the efforts of Mrs. Hauser, of Chicago, as having been the initiator of the plan for sending large quantities of clothing to the sufferers in India from the famine plague, adding that the clothing so collected was distributed with remarkable success.

We feel thankful that the friends, readers and supporters of the PRESBYTERIAN have sent so much for this fund, through this office. It is our privilege and our pleasure to serve our constituents in administering or forwarding funds for especial and worthy causes. We hope that Presbyterians throughout our Synod will make us more able to do what we are willing to do by prompt payment of overdue subscriptions and by increasing our list of subscribers. We do not ask this for ourselves merely, but that we may the better serve the Synod.

Let us, as the needs of India are so nearly met, turn our attention to the pressing and always present needs at home and abroad as represented by the causes and committees of our General Assembly. The famine relief in India should make us think of the multitudes of souls perishing with worse than famine, "that soul-destroying monster sin." There is great destitution in the Home Mission fields of our Assembly, our Synods and our Presbyteries. It was right to send relief for the bodies of the people of India. Is it not more important to send food and medicines for the souls that are perishing? Let us now pray and give and work for the souls that are perishing at home and abroad.

THE HEARTS of all Sunday-school workers, and all lovers of the Sunday-school work on this continent, will be filled with deepest sorrow at the announcement of the death of Mr. William Reynolds, whose name associated with those of D. L. Moody and B. F. Jacobs forms a trio to whom the Sunday Schools of this country are indebted beyond any power to estimate.

Mr. Reynolds died in Louisville, Ky., in his sixty-seventh year. He was on a visit to Louisville in prosecution of his work as a member of the International Executive Committee of Sunday-schools. On Sunday night he made an earnest address in the First Christian church, and soon thereafter complained of feeling ill. He became rapidly worse on Monday and on Tuesday, calmly as a child, drops to sleep, he passed away.

Mr. Reynolds was born in Pennsylvania, but spent his life from his sixth year in Peoria, Ill., to which his parents had removed. He received admirable religious instruction from his parents. His father was a Presbyterian deacon and his mother was remarkable for her earnest piety. He united with the Presbyterian Church in his 28th year and at the time of his death was a ruling elder in its service. From his first entrance upon the Christian life Mr. Reynolds exhibited ardent zeal in the Master's service and most remarkable talent for organizing and directing religious work. In 1861 he was elected President of the Y. M. C. A. of Peoria. During the war as a member of the Christian commission he spent much of his time in the hospitals of the Federal army, and here among war's sad scenes he had quickened, doubtless, that zeal which was so natural to him. After the war he took much of his time from the affairs of secular business to devote to organizing Sunday School Associations for States and counties, and latterly he devoted his whole time to Sunday-school work. He was for some years President of the International Sunday-school Convention representing the United States and British North America provinces. He was well-known and most highly esteemed in North Carolina, organized the State Sunday school Association and frequently visited it, and always was the very life and soul of its deliberations.

AT THE 82d annual meeting of the Netherland Bible Society which was recently held in Amsterdam it was stated that 77,801 Bibles and parts thereof were distributed by that society during the past year, among which were 12,074 in the Indian languages. The Testament printed in the Malay language was in great demand and in twelve months over 5,000 copies were sold. The British and Foreign Bible Society states that up to the present time the Bible has been published in the following languages; In 40 European, 41 Asiatic, 14 African, 10 Australian or Oceanic and 3 American, together 108 languages. The number of translations of single parts amounts to four times as many. Although the Bible has never been completely translated into Chinese, parts thereof, however, were translated into 16 different Chinese dialects.

THE RETIREMENT OF JUSTICE FIELD. The retirement of Justice Stephen J. Field from his place in the Supreme Court of the United States as Associate Justice is a notable event. He was appointed in 1863 by President Lincoln to represent the great and growing legal and land interests of the Pacific States. He was taken the place of Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of California. He has been longer than any other man a member of the Supreme Court of the U. S. A., and has outlived three Chief Justices and sixteen Associciate Justices holding during his term of office. His record is unsullied and great and his retirement is with universal respect and regret. He is one of a family of great men, brothers, including Cyrus W. Field, the inventor, David Dudley Field, the great lawyer, and Henry M. Field, editor of The Evangelist, a leading Presbyterian weekly of New York.

SOME FRIENDS have expressed hearty appreciation of the great service the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN is rendering the Synod in gathering historical material and putting it where in days to come it will prove invaluable. No other Synod is being so served and we really think the Presbyterians of North Carolina should appreciate this service, and manifest that appreciation by aiding the publisher directly in this work as they may be able, and by endeavors to largely increase the circulation of this paper.

We propose in the coming months to render the Album even more attractive and useful than in the past, by portraits and sketches, along with those of contemporaries, of Rev. Neill McKay, D. D., Rev. Adam Gilchrist, Rev. Evander McNair, D. D., Rev. John A. Gretter, Rev. D. B. Black, Rev. R. Burwell, D. D., Rev. James Phillips, D. D., Rev. Charles Phillips, D. D., Rev. C. H. Wiley, D. D., Rev. R. B. Anderson, D. D., Rev. John M. Sherwood, Bartholomew Fuller, Rev. T. L. DeVeaux, Rev. J. M. Atkinson, Chief Justice W. N. H. Smith, Rev. J. M. Sprunt, D.D., and many others—we write as names occur to us—overlooking many prominent ones of course. Some of these sketches are on hand and will appear in due course of time.

The beaming face of Dr. Lacy looking down upon them will this week, call up and revive delightful associations to many of the life-long readers and friends of the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN.

THE UNION SEMINARY MAGAZINE, September—October, 1897, is again at our hand. We welcome it. R. L. Wharton, editor-in-chief appears in graceful salutatory. Other editorials are: Hymnology Enthusiasm. The Literary Department contains articles; A Model Missionary—The Apostle Paul, by Dr. W. S. Currell; The Seminary Course of Study, by Prof. T. C. Johnson, D.D.; The Lord's Supper, by Rev. Dr. L. B. Turnbull, D. D.; New Sayings of Jesus, by Prof. W. W. Moore, D. D. The Missionary Department has: Southern Brazil as a Mission Field, and Home Missions in Alabama by Rev. S. R. Gammon and Rev. Dr. John Barbour, respectively. There are besides Local and Alumni Notes and Criticisms and Reviews. Published at Hampden Sidney, Va. $1 per year.

THE PRESBYTERIAN AND REFORMED REVIEW for October, 1897, is full of good things from its page 593 to 839, a good sized volume. It has six original articles and as many departments of criticisms, essays and reviews by the foremost thinkers and writers of the Presbyterian and Reformed churches of this country. This Quarterly is published by MacCalla & Co., Philadelphia at $3.00 a year or 80 cents a copy. The mighty men like Dr. Green and the young men of great powers and promise are here side by side. The thinkers of our Church cannot afford to be without this publication.

DAVIDSON NOTES.

Conclusion of the Otts' Lectures—Alumni Championship Cup—Largest Number of Students Ever in Attendance.

The concluding lecture of the series will be delivered by Dr. Dabney this evening. The attendance of the students has been very large, and the attention close and interested. It is an exercise in applied logic by no means suited to a kindergarten to follow the Doctor in his reasoning, and all who have attended the course seem to feel that their thinking powers have been stimulated, as well as their faith in one of our fundamental doctrines more deeply grounded. Dr. Dabney's style is clear, his manner confident, earnest, and animated, and his mode of presentation remarkably picturesque and interesting. His argument is often enlivened by historical instances and telling anecdotes. Davidson College is to be congratulated on having secured such a lecturer on such a theme, and we hope the lectures when published will have the extended circulation they deserve.

The enrolment of new students has not yet ceased, and the number of students at the college has reached 177. The highest catalogue enrolment of any previous year was 176 year before last. This will be considerably exceeded by this year's numbers before the close of the session.

The Alumni of the College, under the leadership of Mr. John R. Schenck, of Charlotte, with the assistance of the faculty, have offered a very handsome silver cup to the winning foot-ball team among the college classes. The series of championship games begins this week, ending about the close of November. The name of the class which wins the championship is engraved on the cup each year. If any class wins the cup for three successive years, the cup becomes the permanent property of the class, and is withdrawn from future competition. Dr. Munroe's Medical School is counted one of the classes in this competition, making five contestants for the championship.

Rev. Mr. Taylor, a missionary from China, gave an interesting talk on life and work in China last Sunday evening. The church was crowded, and the audience attentive.

is a most desirable article to have in any household where the PRESBYTERIAN is taken. It holds the successive issues together in most convenient form, costs no labor and requires no special pains in its adjustment. What a fine Synodical Album a year's gathering would thus constitute!

MECKLENBURG PRESBYTERY.

1st. We find that Rev. T. C. Croker is a minister of the Gospel in the M. E. Church in good and regular standing, and that his record is good.

2d. That according to his statement he has been convinced by personal investigation and study of the Word of God, that the Calvinistic view of the doctrine of God's Decrees, the Final Perseverance of the Saints, and kindred points are the true view, and are Scriptural doctrines on the subjects.

3d. That as he is not at present familiar with our theological terminology, he desires to be taken under our care with a view to a future and full examination as a condition precedent to his becoming a member of this Presbytery in good and regular standing as a duly ordained minister of the Gospel.

D. S. Craig, a member of Union church, was received under the care of Presbytery as a candidate for the ministry.

Permission was granted to Licentiate S. W. Moore to labor outside the bounds of Presbytery until the spring meeting. Rev. L. H. Baldwin was permitted to remain outside the bounds until the spring meeting.

From Gastonia church in regard to appointing agent for the N. C. From Rutherfordton church for the pastoral services of Licentiate W. R. Minter were placed in his hands and accepted. A complaint of F. B. McWhorter against the session of Philadelphia church was referred to a commission. Special committee on examinations for Licensure made the following report which was adopted:

That candidates for Licensure be urged to apply if possible at regular meetings of Presbytery.

That the Examining Committee, provided in the manual, be urged to meet together during the interval between each stated meeting of Presbytery and prepare an examination in the several departments, or appoint one of their number to prepare such an examination to be used in the examination of any candidates that may apply for licensure at the next regular meeting of Presbytery.

That examinations in departments I., III., and IV., may be given candidates at the close of their college course or as soon thereafter as possible, and each examination if approved, shall be final as to their trials for licensure.

1. That we concur with Concord Presbytery in petitioning Synod at its next regular meeting in Salisbury to transfer Stanly county to our Presbytery.

2. Ruling Elder D. W. Oates was put on the committee in the place of Jno. E. Oates, deceased.

3. That Rev. M. McG. Shields hold a meeting and administer the communion at Little Brittain church on the second Sabbath of November.

4. That Rev. R. P. Smith be re-elected evangelist for one year at the same salary as the past year, four months of his time to be given to Asheville Presbytery and that Asheville Presbytery be urged to raise $200 of his salary and that one-half of his salary be apportioned to our churches to be raised by spring meeting, and after that, his salary be added to the regular Home Mission apportionment.

5. The Presbytery commends the cause of the evangelization of North Carolina as conducted by the Synodical Committee and urges the churches to raise the full apportionment for this cause.

Revs. J. R. Howerton, D. D., and Jno. W. Stagg, resigned as members of the Home Mission Committee, and Revs. A. A. Little and M. C. Arrowood were substituted.

Church and Christian Education: The committee reported progress in the matter of establishing an Industrial school for girls, and the matter was continued in the hands of the committee.

Publication and Colportage: The committee reported recommending that Rev. T. C. Croker be employed for two months at a salary of $40 per month, as colporteur—one month in Rutherford, Polk and Cleveland counties, three weeks in Union and Anson counties, and one week in Gaston county.

Trustees; R. A. Dunn and Geo. E. Wilson were re-elected trustees of Davidson College for four years.

The usual vote of thanks was adopted.

Philadelphia church was chosen as the next place of meeting, and Tuesday night before the first full moon in April, as the time.

Presbytery adjourned to meet in the Second Presbyterian church, Charlotte, N. C., at 10 a. m, of the 21st inst.

WHAT IS TRUE FRIENDSHIP.

REV. W. S. M'TAVISH, B.D., DEFSERONTO.

Dec. 15.—Pro v. xxvii. 9, 10, 17-19.

Bacon said that friendships in the world were very few, and Dr. Todd was of the opinion that they would become less numerous because our modern life was becoming more and more artificial. We do not sympathize with this notion, for the fact is, that as long as we are constituted as we are, we must make friends; our hearts yearn for sympathy; we naturally long for some one in whom we can confide.

It is a singular fact that some of the warmest friendships have been between persons who in many respects were dissimilar. It is no unusual thing for men of high degree to condescend to others of low estate, and to make fast friendships with them. Daniel Webster and John Trout were firm and intimate friends. There did not seem to be much in common between Jonathan and David, nor between David and Hushai, nor between Solomon and Zabud, nor between Elijah and Elisha, and yet how true were the friendships exemplified among them! Paul and Timothy were very unlike in many respects; the one energetic, impulsive, determined: the other gentle, affectionate, sensitive, and yet Paul felt that he had not among all his acquaintances anyone who would more worthily fill the office of a friend.

What are some of the marks of true friendship?

(1) There must be honesty. He who would be a true friend must be agreeable without flattery, and sincere without rudeness. Luther says: "He who loudly scolds, praises; and he who excessively praises, scolds. They are not believed because they exaggerate." And Cowper, in his bright, interesting poem on friendship, expresses himself thus:

"But will sincerity suffice?
It is, indeed, above all price,
And must be made a basis;
But every virtue of the soul
Must constitute the charming whole
By shining in their places."

(2) There must be courage—courage to speak of faults, to warn against danger, to stimulate to right action, and to defend when assailed. Happy is the man who has such a friend. As Shakespere has it: "Happy are they that hear their detractions and can put them to mending." Christ was a true friend to Martha, for while He loved her He had the courage to tell her that she was worrying too much over her household duties. He loved Peter but He felt it necessary more than once to rebuke or warn him. Happy is he who can say regarding his friend:

"Do you think he ne'er reproves me?
What a false friend he would be.
If he never, never told me all the faults that he must see."

(3) There must be sympathy. "A friend loveth at all times." He loves in the day of prosperity and in the day of adversity; in the day when other friends are true and in the days when they forsake. A man whose heart is cold and unsympathetic can scarcely become a true friend. He may make a wise counsellor, he may be able to give valuable suggestions, and he may deal frankly and honestly with us, but there is still a great defect in his friendship. The man who can say, "Tears, idle tears, I know not what they mean," is not the stamp of man we want near us when sorrow enters our home, or when the black angel of death spreads his desolating wings over our dwelling. We want then a friend whose heart beats in sympathy with ours.

The highest type of friendship has been exhibited by Jesus Christ. Cowper says:

The noblest friendship ever shown
The Saviour's history makes known,
Though some have turn'd and turn'd it;
And whether being crazed or blind,
Or seeking with a biased mind
We not, it seems, discerned it."

—Canada Presbyterian.

The teaching of Christ not only dignified labor, but has, by precept and by example, made it a duty. life of leisure devoted exclusively pleasure is discouraged, and a life useful ness set as the high ideal to which we are to attain. We certainly bring nothing into the world with and if, in the course of years, we not add to the general stock of ngs useful, we certainly have been rely drags on our fellowmen. La- is ordinarily thought of as an fortunate necessity, to be avoided possible, and a matter of compul- n because a few short months of ire cessation would exhaust the ply of those things necessary to existence.

Shall we labor from necessity, or we find a more inspiriting motive? God has endowed us with one of his attributes—the ability for creation. Labor is the exercise of that faculty. From the child making mud pies to the engineer constructing a palace, the ability to change matter to new designs is exercised. For this reason the primary arts of agriculture and manufacture appeal to us in an especial manner.

God has further given us the privilege of using those things we may create for the good of others. In his works of creation we have found scarcely a thing for which we cannot trace a use, and we may in like manner make each effort of our own contribute to the advancement of our race. This is what religion does for our daily tasks. If labor is the exercise of Godlike faculties, and the use of the proceeds of labor is to advance the interests of humanity, we shall not only take new interest in our work, but make it tell to the fullest extent of our ability.—Christian Press.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

"Anthony Hope" sailed from London for America on the 9th inst.

News comes from India that Henry Savage Landor, the well known artist, traveller and writer and grandson of Walter Savage Landor, was arrested and terribly tortured while on an exploring tour in Thibet.

Fleming H. Revell Company have nearly ready several very important works on missions. The most important of them (it is indeed probably the most important book on missions issued during recent years) is "Christian Missions and Social Progress," by Rev. James S. Dennis, D. D., author of "Foreign Missions After a Century." It is truly a monumental work and will surely find a place in the library of every one interested in missions.

There are six hundred copies of the first edition of the Shorter Catechism in the library of the British Museum. A fac-simile of this edition has been reproduced by photographic process, which with an historical introduction and bibliography will be printed on antique paperand bound in buckram. The volume will be issued during the current month by the Publication Committee, 14 Paternoster Square, London.

Mrs. Katherine Hodges, who died in Chicago on September 30th, was prominent in newspaper work as well as the author of many books, among which are histories of New York and Colorado. Fifty years a Queen and Wife of Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher.

The Maryland Historical Society have decided in favor of Cecilius Calvert as the subject of the first of the two statues of famous Marylanders to be placed in the Hall of Statuary at the Capitol at Washington.

The following letter written by Thomas Moore to the editor of the Philadelphia Portfolio in 1816, the original of which is now in the possession of Senator Geo. F. Hoar, will be of interest to many in connection with the discussion which has arisen in regard to Mr. Moore's name being omitted from the roll of poets inscribed on the walls of the Congressional Library:—"This life is just long enough to commit errors in, but too short to allow us time to repair them, and there are few of my errors I regret more sincerely than the rashness I was guilty of in publishing those crude and boyish tirades against the Americans. My sentiments, both with respect to their national and individual characters are much changed since then, and I should blush, as lover of liberty, if I allowed the hasty prejudice of my youth to bind me now to the bright promise which America affords of a better and happier order of things than the world has ever yet witnessed. If you but continue to be as good republicans as we of Europe seem determined to be good royalists, the New and the Old World need soon have no other distinction than the hemisphere of freedom and the hemisphere of slaves."

MAGAZINES.

The October number of St. Nicholas opens with "The Little Princess" and is followed through with an exceedingly interesting table of contents in prose, verse and illustration. Some of its attractive serials end, having given unbounded pleasure to many readers. Our meeting Helen Keller and Tommy Stringer has been a very pleasant but truly a touching and pathetic one. Every household should have this capital magazine. Price $3 a year. The Century Co., New York.

The Ladies' Home Journal for October greets us in its usual timely way. After walking down Leisurely Lane, we meet The New Tenants of the White House, then going on we find ourselves Inside of a Hundred Homes. If space allowed we would like to note others, but an outlay of ten cents for this number will give any one that pleasure. Price for the year $1. Address The Curtis publishing Co., Philadelphia.

BOOKS.

The Bookman for October. The contents are embraced under the headings Chronicle and Comment, Poetry, The Reader, Paris Letter, In Kedar's Tents, New Books, Novel Notes, The Bookman's Table and The Book Mark. Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.

Wayside Courtships, by Hamlin Garland. D. Appleton & Co., New York. $1.25. Those familiar with Mr. Garland's works will need nothing more than an announcement of this book but to the readers of fiction who enjoy keen delineations of life we recommend it. These are no idle tales. but pictures drawn from every phase of life, and depict not only the romance of youth, but the deeper life of maturer years. The scenes are laid mostly in the West, abounding with the vigorous life of that people and in their range from humorous to pathetic touch every cloud of nature.

Seven Years in Sierra Leone. This is "the story, told by Dr. A. T. Pierson, of William A. B. Johnson's service as a missionary of the C. M. S., in Regent's Town, Sierra Leone, Africa, from 1816 to 1823." The author takes an old and out of date biography of the subject and makes a new, tender and thrilling recital of the events and study of the work of this remarkable man and missionary. These words of the preface characterize the source and will describe the excellence of this book. "Some twenty or more years ago I came across an anonymous memoir of William A. B. Johnson, now out of print. It was a stray copy, and in more than one sense it was a rare book. It impressed me then as on the whole, the most remarkable story of seven years of missionary labor that I ever read, and now, after a score of years of research into missionary history and biography that judgment is unhesitatingly reaffirmed." That is strong language, but the present work is its confirmation and is on its own merit excellent. Fleming H. Revell Co., New York and Chicago have issued this work in 250 pages, cloth binding, for one dollar.

The Seminary Bicycle. A sixteen page tract by William Nast Brodbeck, D. D., is issued by Eaton and Mains, New York. It is a plea for proper observance of the Sabbath, especially in the use of the bicycle. It calls attention to the temptation and danger of profaning the Sabbath by using the bicycle for unnecessary riding.

"In Trust With the Gospel" is a twenty-four page tract issued by our Committee at five cents per copy. This is the Baccalaureate Sermon by Dr. Russell Cecil, of Selma, Ala., to the graduating class of Columbia Seminary, S. C., in May, 1897. It is clear and strong and should be read by our people, especially our ministers. It calls us all to "ask for the old facts."

"The Gist of Japan," by Rev. R. B. Peery, A. M., Ph.D., does not pretend to be an exhaustive treatise of an exhaustless topic: it does pretend to cover the subject; and whosoever is eager to know the "gist" of those matters Japanese in which Westerners are most interested—the land, the people, the coming of Christianity, the difficulties and prospects of her missions, the condition of the native Church—will find it set down in Dr. Peery's book in a very interesting, reliable, instructive and condensed form. It is a valuable addition to popular reading about the Land of the Rising Sun.

CHANGES OF ADDRESS.

Correspondents will please note the following changes of address:

Rev. R. P. Smith, from Hendersonville to Gastonia, N. C.

Rev. D M. McIver, from Swann's Station, N. C., to Bolivar, Tenn.

NORTH CAROLINA.

First Church, Wilmington:—On last Sunday, the congregation of the First Presbyterian church unanimously voted a vacation of four and a half months to their pastor, Rev. Dr. P. H. Hoge, that he may make a tour of Europe and the Holy Land. Dr. Hoge will leave in January and return about the first of June. It is understood that Rev. R. E. Caldwell of Winston. will be in the company of tourists.

Westminster, Greensboro:—On last Sabbath morning four persons were received into this church; one upon profession of faith and three by certificate. On the previous Sabbath five infants were baptized. S. O. Hall, pastor.

Valdese:—A mission school has been opened under the care of the Home Mission Board. The school started with over fifty pupils and with good prospects for a larger attendance.

Gastonia:—Regular quarterly communion was held at this church October 3d. There were three additions on profession of faith, two of whom were baptized. This makes twenty-nine additions, nine infant baptisms, and two baptisms of adults since the beginning of the present pastorate, seven months ago.

Murphy:—This lovely little village of some five hundred inhabitants is situated in the extreme southwestern part of the "Old North State," one hundred and twenty-four miles from Asheville on the Southern railway. They have also the Marietta and North Georgia connecting here. For a little less than a year there has been a small band of Presbyterians—seventeen in number—organized into a church. Rev. J. B. Cochran is their pastor. Recently, October 3d-12th, Synod's evangelist, Rev. Wm. Black visited that point and for nine days preached with great acceptance the Word of God. Large congregations attended morning and evening. As a result more than one hundred confessed Christ. Among these, several were already members of the church. Eight were received into the Presbyterian church. Eight or ten others have expressed a desire to do the same. The Methodist church being the largest in the place reaped the greatest harvest. More than fifty will identify themselves with that branch and the Baptists will get the rest. It is worthy of note that all save one or two of the seven lawyers of the town were reached by the plain Gospel story. Quite a number of heads of families promise to erect family altars. The writer was present part of the time to help in the song service, and brings away many pleasant memories of the people there. Bro. Cochran is an earnest, efficient man and is doing a good work. A. K. P.

A later account from another correspondent says: Our little band of fifteen resident members will have seventeen added to them, and perhaps several more who have not yet decided to what church to go. Several of the most prominent men of the town made profession of faith, including every lawyer there. Brother Black retains his influence over the members of his former profession. Rev. A. K. Pool assisted him in the singing services. A collection of $86.86 was taken up for the cause. Brother Black is now at Old Concord church, Iredell county.

Fayetteville Church:—Is enjoying the ministrations of Rev. Thomas Drew, D. D., of Virginia. From the large congregations attending and the deep interest that is evident we hope for a great work of grace. Dr. Drew will remain with us during the week.

Evangelistic Notes:—The Superintendent has been able to visit the Presbyteries of Mecklenburg and Fayetteville which met the same week. At both meetings the cause of Home Missions was briefly presented and a collection taken up amounting to $27.30 at Mecklenburg and $32.25 at Fayetteville. The churches entertaining the Presbyteries, Providence and Jackson Springs, united in the contribution. Last Sunday as his own pulpit was occupied, the Superintendent took the opportunity of visiting St. Paul's church, eighteen miles from Fayetteville. The congregation here subscribed $43 to the cause which is in addition to the regular collection which had been taken up.

A. J. McKELWAY,
Superintendent.

Reidsville Church:—Our church has adopted the same plan as our sister church, the First Presbyterian church in Greensboro, of having the sermon at half past ten o'clock, to last one hour and then a short intermission of five or ten minutes and then the Sunday-school, the entire service only two hours long. The change went into effect last Sunday, and we are delighted with it, the Sunday-school had thirty-eight new pupils and the congregation at the church service was larger from the fact, the children worshiped with their parents, and the parents, a good many of them, attended the Sunday school with their children. We feel confident the plan will prove a success, and thank God and take courage. H.

VIRGINIA.

*Portsmouth:*Two persons recently received upon examination and one by certificate. Rev. R. B. Eggleston, pastor-elect, will be installed on the evening of November 3d.

Lexington:—Rev. Thornton Whaling, D. D., pastor. Four persons received at last communion. Three upon profession and one by letter.

LOUISIANA.

New Orleans:—Rev. Dr. D. O. Davies who was to have taken the pastorate of the Presbyterian Street church New Orleans has been advised by his friends not to take charge till the fever is over and Dr. Barr will continue to supply the church. Rev. John M. Williams of Gretna church, and his family, have been stricken with the yellow fever. The pastor of the Third church has been quarantined by the fever. Rev. Dr. Nall of the Canal Street church, returned from a vacation to be with his people.

TEXAS.

Fort Worth:—Nineteen members were received into the membership of Broadway church at last communion. Rev. Junius B. French, pastor.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Alleghany Church:—Rev. V. G. Smith was installed pastor of the Alleghany church at Mt. Storm, on the first Sunday in October. Present of the commission appointed by Winchester Presbytery: Rev. A. C. Hopkins, Jr., of Elk Garden, Rev. J. J. Fix of Petersburg, and Ruling Elder W. J. Alderton of Hartmonville. Rev. A. C. Hopkins preached the sermon and delivered the charge to the pastor. This was a day much enjoyed by all, and we trust one of spiritual blessing to both pastor and people.

KENTUCKY.

Springfield:—Our church has enjoyed a precious revival in the true sense of the word. Dr. Ramsay preached us eighteen sermons that by common consent were the clearest, most logical and thoroughly Scriptural that our people ever had the privilege of hearing. The members of the church were built up in their faith by the plain, practical way that the precious doctrines of the Bible were preached. Dr. Ramsay proves every statement by Scripture references, and the congregations went forth from each sermon feeling that they had enjoyed a feast of fat things. On every side was heard this remark: "This is the most precious meeting we have ever had." Not only were Christians helped, but a number of the children of the church were brought into full communion, and many others were deeply impressed who by the power of the Holy Spirit will ere long come into the fold. Our church here has taken on new life in the last ten months. Old debts have been paid, congregations increased three fold, the Sabbath school brought up from a dying condition to one of the best in this section, and a beautiful manse erected.

Flora Heights:—The mission at this point in the vicinity of Louisville was organized into a church on the 10th inst., Rev. D. M. Sweets, and Rev. W. E. Keller conducting the services. The membership is fifty. Messrs. C. K. Sprowl and Thos. Lawton were chosen elders and Messrs. J. N. Harris, Thos. B. Talbot and James Rainwater, deacons.

GENERAL.

Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage is to be ordained pastor of Jefferson Park church, Chicago, on the 27th. Among the ministers to conduct the services are Rev. T DeWitt Talmage and Rev. W. S. Plumer Bryan.

Rev. Daniel W. Poor, D. D., late secretary of the Board of Education, Northern, died on the 11th inst., at Newark, N. J., in his eightieth year, having been born in Ceylon where his father was a missionary in 1818. Dr. Poor founded the German Theological Seminary at Bloomfield, organized the High Street church at Newark, where he was pastor for twenty years, and filled many other positions of influence and trust.

The Presbyterian Journal states that the Presbyterian ministry of Philadelphia has been called to experience another sad and mysterious providence in the death of Rev. Ernest E. Keigwin, the beloved and gifted pastor of the Scots church. Mr. Keigwin graduated in the last class of Princeton Seminary and was installed in May.

The fiftieth anniversary of the Rev. Dhanjibhoy Nowrojee's life in the ministry was recently observed by the Parsi Christian Association of India, of which he is president. Mr. Nowrojee was the first Parsi of India who publicly professed Christ in public baptism.

In the death of Rev. A. S. Billingsley, D. D., Statesville has lost a highly respected citizen and the colored people of our State a valued friend. The Landmark speaks of his work among the negro race as colporteur, pastor and worker with commendation. Dr. Billingsley came South in 1869 as a missionary from the Northern Church, and though encountering bitter prejudice, labored earnestly and fearlessly and won the highest esteem from all.

He was a man of liberal education and scholarly tastes and the author of several books among them "The Life of George Whitefield," "The Life of St. Paul" and "Sources of Pulpit Power."

On account of the absence of Rev. Dr. Wood of the Presbyterian church, the funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. H. Pressly of the Associate Reformed church assisted by the pastors of the Baptist, Methodist and colored Presbyterian churches. The remains were taken to Ohio, his native home for interment.

Dr. Billingsly's will has not as yet been opened, but it is known that he has made a bequest of $5,000 for the erection of a charity hospital in Statesville. Rev. W. R. McLelland is to have charge of the money and construction of building. Other bequests are to Biddle Institute and missions of the Northern Church.

The third Federal Convention representing different denominations and chapters of the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip is to be held in Reading, Pa., November 11-14. It was here in May 1888, that the first chapter was started by Rev. Rufus W. Miller in the Reformed Church. The Brotherhood has now extended to the Congregational and Presbyterian Churches, the largest membership being in the last named There are now in all about 400 chapters and over 10,000 members.

FAYETTEVILLE PRESBYTERY.

Fayetteville Presbytery met at Jackson Springs October 6th, and was opened with a sermon by Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D. Eighteen out of twenty-four ministers were present and thirty-four out of seventy-eight churches were represented.

Organization: Rev. A. N. Ferguson was elected moderator and Rev. W. B. Arrowood and J. D. Cameron, temporary clerks.

Ministers Received: Rev. H. T. Graham was received from Winchester Presbytery.

Assembly's Overture: The Assembly's overture concerning the change in the Book of Discipline was answered in the affirmative.

Trustees Red Springs Seminary: It was decided to increase the number of trustees of Red Springs Seminary from six to nine and Messrs. A. B. Pearsal was elected for one year, A. L. Bullock for two years and A. T. McCollum for three years.

Commissions: A commission was appointed to organize a church at Troy in Montgomery county if the way be clear. The commission is constituted as follows: Rev. K. M. McIntyre, Rev. Archie McLauchlin, Rev. C. H. Dobbs, Jr., and Elders D. D. McKinnon and Evander McAuley. A commission was appointed to reorganize China Grove church with unchanged name and locate it at McLean's Chapel about five miles distant from Fayetteville if the way be clear. The commission is as follows: Rev. A. J. McKelway, Rev. D. Fairley, Rev. A. M. Hassell, and Elders S. C. Rankin and J. T. McCorquodale. The commission appointed to organize a church at Hamlet reported that for reasons, which were deemed satisfactory, the work had not yet been done. The commission was continued to do the work when the way should become clear.

Ministerial Education: The report on Ministerial Education showed that there were twelve candidates on the roll, four of them at Union Seminary, three at Davidson College, one at home on account of his health and the remainder in schools preparing for college. Eight of the candidates have applied for the maximum appropriation which in the aggregate is a call for $600, an amount in excess of the contributions to the cause by the Presbytery in any previous year. The churches were urged to make large contributions to the cause at the times designated in our scheme of collections.

Church and Christian Education: This cause received much of the attention of the court. The reports from the two schools, Red Springs Seminary and Davidson College, were full of encouragement. The student body of the former being almost equal to the capacity of the buildings while the number of students at the latter lacks only four of being larger than it ever had in its history, seventy-three of them being new students and about forty-five of them candidates for the ministry. Steps were taken to cancel a debt on Red Springs Seminary seminary equipment which it is believed will be successful. On account of the great work the two institutions are doing to advance the Master's kingdom and their great needs all our ministers and sessions were urged to make a larger collection during the year to be equally divided between them, and that our ministers be urged to explain the work and claims of the institutions to the people.

Presbyterial Sermons: Rev. C. G. Vardell preached the Presbyterial sermon on "Family Religion." Rev. K. A. McLeod was appointed to preach the next Presbyterial sermon on "The Sacrament of Baptism."

Foreign Missions: The report on Foreign Missions showed much to encourage the hearts of God's people during the past six months. There are 156 missionaries from our Church at large now in the field and over seven thousand dollars has been contributed to the cause in excess of the contributions the same period last year. In the Presbytery also there has been an increase of contributions over last year. And this increase appears from the contributions of only 49 of the 78 churches of the Presbytery. The eighth annual session of the Women's Missionary Society of Fayetteville Presbytery met at Ashpole church in August and was attended by 26 delegates. Forty women's societies and 14 children's societies were represented by reports. Mrs. E. A. McRae was re-elected President, Mrs. D. P. McEachern was elected First Vice-President, Mrs. L. McDonald Second Vice-President and Miss Mattie McNair Secretary and Treasurer. A Vice-President was also elected for each county embraced by the Presbytery. The report showed that only 335 copies of the Missionary and 216 copies of the Children's Missionary are taken in the Presbytery and the sessions of the churches were directed to make a thorough canvass of their congregations in the interest of these magazines either through the Ladies' Missionary Societies, an agent or otherwise.

Home Missions: It was ordered that Sardis, Summerville, Barbecue, Flat Branch and Spout Springs churches be grouped as a pastoral charge; and that St. Pauls, Mt. Tabor, Philadelphus and Hope Mills churches be grouped as a pastoral charge; and that Rev. J. S. Black now preaching to some churches of both groups take steps to supply one or the other of these two charges. That Bethel, Montpelier and Shiloh churches be constituted a pastoral charge and that the Chairman of the Home Missions Committee be authorized to appoint for it supplies in case present efforts to secure a pastor fail. That Rev. M. D. McNeill supply Mt. Vernon Springs church one Sabbath a month on a salary of $100 a year. That Lumberton church be supplied until the next stated meeting by the following ministers one Sunday each in order of the months beginning with October: Rev. H. G. Hill, D. D., Rev. C. G. Vardell, Rev. D. W. Fox, Rev. D. Fairley, Rev. H. Craig and Rev. J. S. Black. That Antioch and Red Springs churches be constituted a pastoral charge and that Rev. D. W. Fox be authorized to supply it. Steps were taken to purchase a manse for the evangelist in the Johnston county field.

Place of Next Meeting: Carthage was chosen as the place for the next regular meeting.

Adjournment: Presbytery adjourned to meet at Synod at the call of the moderator.

AN IDEAL.

Something to live for; something high above
The troubled things of earth we too much love,
Something that woos us by its distant charm
To regions sleeping soft in sunny calm—
Luring us onward by pure loveliness,
That brighter, fairer grows as on we press:
So, drawing nearer, thinking to attain,
We see it still afar and, losing, gain
More from the added zeal we needs must show
To win our prize, and thus must higher go.
As some strong traveler through a desert wild
Marks distant snow-capped crests to heaven piled,
And braves the bristling danger but to find
The misty mountains still but dim outlined:
And though, as nearer yet his way he wends,
Fresh beauty to his soul the prospect lends
Of rosy shadows flitting o'er the snow,
And peaks with golden coronet that glow;
Yet may he never scale those stainless slopes
Or plant his conquering banner where he hopes;
But by high striving toward a lofty end,
With eyes that ever on pure summits bend,
Through seeming failure claims self-victory,
And, ne'er attaining, wins eternally.

WHAT WILL BE YOUR INFLUENCE?

What a man is—the sum total of his beliefs, purposes, affections, tastes, habits, manifested in what he does and in what he leaves undone—makes its abiding impress on others. Though he be unconscious of the emanation of good or evil from his character and life, nevertheless the fact remains. Light in the mind is like light anywhere else, penetrative and diffusive, and must shine abroad. The glow of love in the heart is impatient to radiate its warmth. The frost of selfishness chills the air all about it. Corruption poisons the atmosphere of the neighborhood in which it festers. In some form or other we affect others. Death is powerless to stop influence. The first man is sinning still in all his posterity. The first sin is thrilling still, and will keep on so long as the world stands. The righteous live in a higher, deeper, truer sense after death than they did before. By their mighty faith, their holy living or noble activities, they impress their likeness on their age and link their influence with all that is brightest in human destiny. Their memory cannot die, and their deeds furnish inspiration to the living. Under the sway of this truth, it became the custom of the Roman fathers to take their sons out upon the Appian Way that they might be inspired to courage and patriotism by the sight of the tombs of Rome's departed greatness. The early Christians used to meet for prayer by the graves of the martyrs. Moses and David and Isaiah and Daniel and Elijah, Paul and Peter and John, Luther and Knox and Whitefield and Brainard, Harriet Newell and Florence Nightingale—these and their like, though turned to dust, are potently operating factors in human affairs to-day.

As these were in life and are in death, so may we be. As a small circular ripple started by a falling pebble rolls on the lake's surface till it breaks against the surrounding shores; so there is not a child, or a youth, or a feeble, humble Christian who may not cause a ripple on the great sea of life, or exert some influence on the world that shall abide. A single good deed may be felt through all time and cast its influence into eternity. The Christian father, the saintly mother may live again in their children. The faithful teacher's counsels may shape the life and determine the destiny of her pupils. Over eighteen hundred years ago a poor widow cast two mites into the Lord's treasury. She lives to-day in the larger benefactions which her deed and memory have inspired. A humble disciple poured a vase of precious ointment on her Saviour's head. Centuries have elapsed since then, yet many a disciple to-day is stimulated to good deeds for Jesus by the immortal record: "She hath done what she could."

We not only may, but ought to exert an influence that shall work for righteousness after we are gone. The righteous should bequeath blessing to posterity to offset the legacy of sin and misery left by the wicked. The Voltaires and Paines of the past are actors in life's drama of the present. They live in the sentiments and influences hostile to Christianity, and that operate through a corrupt literature, false philosophies and atheistic creeds, along all the channels of human thought and enterprise. This devolves a tremendous responsibility upon the Christian believer to exert himself to the uttermost to offset these evil influences and to diminish or to neutralize altogether their direful consequences. This is what we are for, if we are Christians; and this is what the Church is for, if it is Christ's.

THERE is a right way to paint and a wrong way. The right way is to have the best paint—Pure White Lead (see list of genuine brands) and Linseed Oil—applied by a practical painter. The wrong way is to get some mixture about which you know nothing and apply it yourself or have some inexperienced, irresponsible person do it.

FREE By using National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, any desired shade is readily obtained. Pamphlet giving valuable information and card showing samples of colors free; also cards showing pictures of twelve houses of different designs painted in various styles or combinations of shades forwarded upon application.

She is set for the defense of the truth, and for the establishment of righteousness in the earth. Here is a system of eternal, benevolent truth, which has been entrusted to the Church to be disseminated by her for the saving of the nations. It is as sacred a trust as it is in the power of God to commit into the hands of men. No trust could be more sacred, more vitally important. As such we should reverently regard it, tenaciously hold it, and valiantly defend it against the encroachments of infidelity and the inroads of error and unbelief, if we would have it transmitted, a legacy unimpaired, to our children and children's children; would have our lives repeated in their lives; would have our works live after us.

The thought that every man leaves a life behind him either good or evil makes it a very solemn thing to live. The life of every sinner reaches into the future; it corrupts and destroys beyond his death-bed. His example is sometimes his children's ruin and the community's curse. The poison of the debauched life he leaves behind him courses through the veins of living men, and down the currents of human destiny. All the more need then that every good man treasure for posterity a holy influence to counteract the many examples of gross wickedness, and help to perpetuate truth and godliness in the earth.—Christian Intelligencer.

RELIGIOUS CONVERSATION.

We read that in the days of old "they that feared the Lord spake often to one another; and the Lord hearkened and heard it." What a contrast between those days and ours, when we rarely hear the name of our Lord mentioned in the conversations of those who fear him. Many of us are willing, even glad, to work for him, to deny ourselves for his sake, but we are ashamed to talk of him; it is an effort with us to speak his name one to another. When we meet our friends, we do not hesitate to tell them about the new house we are going to occupy, but we do not describe to them or talk to them about the mansions in our Father's house which the Lord is preparing for us. What topic of conversation do we enjoy so much as talking of our mutual friends, either those who are near or those at a distance, but how rarely do we tell anything of the Friend who loved us enough to lay down his life for us? In these days of political strivings, we speak of this man or that man who will be at the head of the government, but not of him upon whose shoulders the government shall be, and whose name is called "The Prince of Peace." We counsel together as to the safest place for depositing our moneys and securities, but no word comes of laying up our treasures where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt.—Ex.

DOES JESUS OFTEN COME HERE?

A little five-year-old child of poverty, being shown over a home of great wealth, as she saw the rich carpets and sumptuous furnishings, looked up into the face of the mistress and said: "I should think Jesus must come here very often, it is such a nice house and such a beautiful carpet. He comes to our house, and we don't have any carpet. I am sure He must come here very often; doesn't He?" Receiving no answer she repeated the question, and the answer was, I am afraid not." Soon the child went home, but her bit of a sermon remained, and that night the lady repeated it to her wealthy, worldly husband, telling him the touching incident, and it resulted in both husband and wife seeking Christ and opening their hearts and home to Him. It is the Word spoken from the heart for Jesus, and followed by the Spirit, that does the work, whether the preacher be child or orator.—Selected.

THE MISSILE OF DEATH.

We are often surprised by the good things that come to us unexpectedly. We have been sometimes astonished at the way occurrences that promised disaster became great blessings. At the siege of Sebastopol a cannon ball, missing its aim struck in the side of a neighboring mountain, and from the fissure made by it gushed a stream of crystal water. The missile of death was made to become an instrument to open a life-sustaining fountain. Using this incident as an illustration, a minister said: "If in us abide the waters of eternal life, the thrusts of Satan will only open channels by which they may flow forth." If we sustain to God the relation of believer in Christ, without a shadow of doubt "all things work together for good."—Exchange.

TWO BEAUTIFUL PETITIONS.

Two of the most beautiful prayers we have ever read—prayers breathing the very spirit of devotion, simplicity, and faith, and full of the most implicit confidence in the loving and all-watchful care of our heavenly Father—were from the hearts of Scotchmen. They are given here in the hope that they will make each one of us a little more patient, a little stronger, and a little more trustful in the great Giver of all good. The first one was written by Robert Louis Stevenson only the day before his untimely death in Samoa:

"We beseech Thee, O Lord, to behold us with favor. Folks of many families and nations are gathered together in the peace of this roof; weak men and women subsisting under the cover of Thy patience. Be patient still. Suffer us yet a while longer, with our broken purposes of good, with our idle endeavors against evil—suffer us a while longer to endure, and, if it may be, help us to do better.

"Bless to us our extra mercies, and if the day come when these must be taken, have us play the man under affliction. Be with our friends. Be with ourselves. Go with each of us to rest, and if any awake, temper to them the dark hours of watching, and when the day returns to us our sun and comforter, call us with morning faces and morning hearts, eager to be happy, if happiness shall be our portion; and if the day be marked to sorrow, strong to endure it."

The second, Ian MacLaren puts into the mouth of Burnbrae, one of his noblest characters:

"Almighty Father, we are a' Thy puir and sinfu' bairns, who wearied o' hame and gaed awa' intae the far country. Forgive us, for we didna ken whar we were leavin', or the sair hert we gied our Father. It wes weary wark tae live wi' oor sins, but we wud never hev come back, had it no been for oor Elder Brither. He cam a long road tae find us, and a sore travail He had afore He set us free. He's been a gude brither tae us, and we've been a heavy charge tae Him. May He keep a firm hand o' us, and guide us in the richt road, and bring us back gin we wander, and tell us a' we need tae know 'till the gloamin' come. Gither us in, then, we pray Thee, and a' we have, no bairn missin', and may we sit doon forever in oor ain Father's house."—The Holland Reminder.

RESULT OF ANXIETY.

What does your anxiety do? It does not empty to-morrow, brother, of its sorrow; but ah! it empties to-day of its strength. It does not make you escape the evil it makes you unfit to cope with it when it comes. It does not bless to-morrow, and it robs to-day. For every day has its own burden. God gives us power to bear all the sorrows of his making; but he does not give us the power to bear the sorrows of our own making, which the anticipation of sorrow most assuredly is.—Ian Maclaren.

INTRODUCTORY.

Paul had appealed to Cæsar. So Festus made arrangements to send him with other prisoners to Rome in charge of a centurion with a guard of Roman soldiers. Thus Paul's prayer is being answered. He is to reach Rome by the very persecutions of his enemies and at the expense of the government. God makes the wrath of man to praise him. Our lesson gives an account of the voyage. This account given by Luke sets forth Paul in a new light and shows his character under new circumstances. Paul appears as the Christian gentleman, the masterful man, the faithful servant of Jesus Christ. The events described as a part of God's Providence guiding him to Rome, also prepared the way for his better treatment at Rome and his release later. Here is a living commentary on several of his teachings an acted explanation of some of his difficult sayings.

Troubles come to all good people and even shipwreck to some. It is well to see how a good man acts under such circumstances. Paul was a prisoner, but a man of distinction. So he was listened to in advice and counsel. Luke and Aristarchus accompanied him as servants, the only way in which they would have been permitted to go with him, says Professor Ramsay. They reached Fairhavens in the season of storms.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 13. South wind blew softly. As an indication ordinarily of fair weather. It was favorable, as they thought, for reaching Phenice. Loosing thence. Weighing anchor they sailed along Crete close to the shore. Crete was a large island of the Mediterranean lying south of Greece.

Vs. 14. Tempestuous wind, Greek, "typhonic" of the nature of a whirlwind or cyclone. Arose against, "beat down upon it." Euroclydon. Meaning an east-wave, as R. V., "Euraquilo," East northeast. The similar wind is now called the Levanter. It was a periodical gale, "an east wind raising great waves." The squall came from the Cretan mountains 7,000 feet high.

Vs. 15. The ship was caught is a very strong impression indicating that the wind seized hold of the ship and whirled her out of her course. Professor Ramsay relates the account of a ship's captain who said, "The wind comes down from these mountains fit to blow the ship out of the water." Could not bear up into the wind. R. V. "Could not face the wind" is literally, "could not look the wind in the eye." We let her drive. Which Dr. Marvin R. Vincent describes as "having given up to it we were driven along."

Vs. 16. Clauda. A small island not far from Crete on the south. To come by the boat. To bring on deck and master the small boat attached to the ship.

Vs. 17. Helps. Ropes, chains, any apparatus they had passing cables underneath the ship on account of the strain and possibly as the vessel was springing a leak. The quicksands was The Syrtis Major on the coast of Africa a long distance away, but toward which they were being rapidly driven. Strake sail. Lowered the sail "leaving just enough sail to keep the ship's head to the wind." Ramsay.

Vs. 18. Lightened the ship. By throwing the cargo overboard. The wheat was left to the last.

Vs. 19. Our own hands. Meaning the passengers. Tackling. Furniture not therefore helping much but showing excitement and eagerness to do something though hasty.

TRUST CHRIST.

Text for the week :

He is faithful that promised. Heb. x : 23.

Daily Readings :

Monday, For Help, Heb. 13 : 1-8.
Tuesday, For Comfort, 2 Cor. 1 : 1-7.
Wednesday, For Life, 2 Cor. 1 : 8-14.
Thursday, For Needs, Phil. 4 : 14-23.
Friday, For Life, 1 Thess. 4 : 13-18.
Saturday, For Redemption, Col. 1 : 9-17.
Sunday, Topic, Trust Christ—for what ? 2 Tim. 1 : 1-12.

Notes:

Trust Christ—for what ? For everything material and spiritual, temporal and eternal.

Trust Him first of all for salvation. Only through Christ can there be reconciliation with God, and all good for time and eternity hinges upon acceptance of Him and His work. Salvation from sin—from its penalties of course, but above all from its guilt and its pollution. The blood of Christ cleanseth from all sin.

The believer in Christ is saved at once and forever from the condemnation and so from the ultimate penalties of sin—but we must trust Christ for sanctification, for growth and progress in holiness—the direct work of the Holy Spirit proceeding from Christ and taking the things of Christ and showing them unto us.

More in detail. We must trust Christ for Light. How often even in our temporal affairs, we have need of light. The future is so dark before us, that we are in very despair what to do or where to turn. Christ is the light of the world, the Great Revealer even in temporal matters, but especially to the Christian seeking to know the path of duty—desiring to do the will of God. Ofttimes the way seems closed in darkness—and the cry must go up, Lord, give us light ! Light is needed for its immediate and direct use to ourselves ; but light is also needed to enable us to fulfill our duties to our fellowmen. We are commanded to shine as lights in the world, but this light does not exist in us, it must come from Christ Himself and be reflected from us.

Trust Christ for Power and for Strength. Naturally we are weaklings ; we need not only light upon our path, but ability to overcome the obstacles that on all hands surround us and oppose us. To Christ alone can we look for this and for strength to go forward, meeting each duty as it is presented to us and overcoming—strong in the strength which God supplies. Interest—what seems our personal interest—so often clashes with what we feel and know to be the will of God ; it is the struggle of Nature against Grace. From Christ alone must come the strength that gives to us the victory.

Trust Christ for Rest and Peace. Rest ! to how many tired, weary souls the charm of heaven is Rest—blessed Rest. No care, no anxiety, no toil nor pain, but rest. But Christ gives rest here and now. "Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden (with sin and with life's sorrows) and I will give you rest"—and with Rest goes Peace. Not mere cessation of noise or freedom from agitation or disturbance, but quiet satisfaction and contentment with the conditions of the present life, flowing from the peace of God in the soul. "Peace I leave with you, My peace I give unto you. * * * Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."

MONROE.—At Fayetteville, N. C., on Sunday, Oct. 3rd, 1897, after months of acute suffering, patiently and bravely borne, Malcolm N. Monroe, in the 52nd year of his age. A member of Long-street Presbyterian church.

His end was peace.

Mrs. W. B. FEWELL.—On Jan. 27th, 1897, nearly nine months ago, a new grave was made in Ebenezer cemetery. One of the loveliest Christian women had gone to her rest and we planted her away until the resurrection morn.

She was sixty-five years old and for forty-three years had walked with the husband of her choice. She was quiet and unostentatious in her life, gentle in her manners and lovely in her character. She was a daughter of R. Davidson Alexander and Abbie Caldwell. On her father's side she was a lineal descendent of the men who signed the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence in 1775. Her ancestors were faithful and true during the Revolutionary war and the students of history are familiar with the statesmenship of the Alexanders, Davidsons and Grahams and many others of her kindred ; and in the late war between the States the family escutcheon was unsullied. On her mother's side she was connected with a line of preachers, "time whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary." To the present moment there have been twelve generations of preachers all of them either having lived honored lives, or those living highly esteemed at the present. She had seven uncles of whom five were preachers, she herself was either the aunt or cousin of a large number now living and her brother Rev. S. C. Alexander, D. D., is too well known to the Church to need any introduction.

Mrs. Fewell died after a few days illness of pneumonia. Just before she died she recited portions of the 34th Psalm and her last words were, "This poor man cried and the Lord heard him and saved him out of his troubles."

Her funeral was largely attended by sorrowing friends : the whole Church felt that they had lost one whose place would never be filled. Her home was one of the Bethanys of the pastor when weary and tired he loved to turn aside and rest. She was as kind and considerate to him as a mother. She taught her children to love and respect him and, though she were far his superior in the knowledge of the Scripture, she delighted to listen to his interpretation of God's Word.

In the course of time a more extended history may be written, but somehow it presses on me in this feeble way to speak of my personal loss in the death of Agnes Alexander Fewell.

She died at midnight, Jan. 26th, with a beautiful smile upon her lips and at her own request was buried in a white robe and as we gazed upon her placid face, and thought of her spotless life she seemed "as a bride adorned for her husband."

"The voice at midnight came,
She started up to hear.
A mortal arrow pierced her frame,
She fell, but felt no fear.

Soldier of Christ well done
Praise be thy new employ.
And while eternal ages run
Rest in thy Saviour's joy.

Mrs. S. CAMPBELL ROBESON.—In the few words of an obituary, it is hardly possible to note the features of such a life as that of Mrs. S. C. Robeson who on the morning of Sept. 24th, entered the rest, toward which her eyes had been turned for many months. She was the daughter of William T. Smith and Mary Campbell, of Cumberland county, discendants of John Smith, Isle of Wight county, Va., and Sir Farqd Campbell, of Scotland, and at the time of her death in Lumberton, Robeson county, was in her fifty-first year. In the year 1885, she was married to Dr. R. R. Robeson in her native county, but that married life was quickly closed, her husband dying in the spring of 1886. After that sorrow she made her home with her sister and brother-in-law, T. A. McNeill, Esq., of Lumberton, Early in life she connected herself with the Sardis Presbyterian church, and thenceforward her Christian life was a maturing one, marked by deep consecration, and such was her trust that she was always enabled to see a divine love, even in a chastening hand. For many years she did not know physical strength, but never was a more ready hand extended to human want or suffering, or any cause that would promote her Lord's work. In missionary work she was a leader, and was, for a time, one of the vice presidents of the Woman's Missionary Union of Fayetteville Presbytery, and for a much longer period, president of the Ladies' Society of her own church. She heard all calls and made cheerful response. Her touch of all lives was gentle, her words won every one who approached her, and her appreciation of labors for her Master often found utterance in words that lifted heavy burdens. Around her bedside, in all those anxious, weary, painful months, many were welcomed with smiling greetings and warm clasp of hand, and there they listened to trustful words and, in her perfect patience and submission, they learned the lesson that God taught—that He would not forsake His own. Among her last words to the writer were, "I never lose my trust," and even when the mind wandered—as in a maze of earthly things—she would whisper words "that the Holy Ghost teacheth" showing that her spirit was quietly restine. Truly, in her the fruit of the Spirit, in all the clustering graces was so disclosed that none could mistake the revelation, while more and more perfect became the lineaments of Christ's life within her, till she at last 'awoke in His likeness."

The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. D. W. Fox, at the Bluff church and many friends gathered from long distances to testify of their love for the sainted one. 'She rests low her.' D. W. F.

Resolutions.

Adopted by the Ladies' Foreign Missionary Society of the Lumberton Presbyterian church on the death of Mrs. SARAH CAMPBELL ROBESON.

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God in His Providence to remove from our midst our friend and sister Mrs. Sarah Campbell Robeson, while we deeply lament our loss, we bow in humble submission to His holy will.

Throughout her protracted sufferings of several months, her demeanor was marked by sweet resignation and cheerful fortitude.

Though unable to attend the monthly meetings she was a devoted member and liberal contributor,

She was a faithful member of the Presbyterian church and loved its ordinances.

In all the relations of life she was true and tender. Her deep and cheerful piety won from all the highest respect and esteem.

She has gone from a world where joys and sorrows are mingled to a home where sorrow never enters.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our society and a copy be sent to the bereaved family also to the Robesonian and NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN for publication.

ENTERED INTO REST.

Among the best gifts of the Lord Jesus Christ to His Church on earth are men, God-fearing men, exemplifying in their daily walk the power of divine grace, epistles of Christ known and read of all men.

Such an one was RODERICK McCASKILL, who having served his generation entered into rest Oct. 2nd, 1897, aged 67 years, 9 months and 3 days.

In early life he was received into the communion of Sandy Grove church in Moore county. After the war he removed to Centre congregation and was made a ruling elder in that church. When Maxton church was organized he was one of the charter members and was also installed one of its ruling elders. Having moved to Laurinburg, on the 18th of March 1883, he was received into the communion of the Laurinburg church, and there, on the 31st day of the same month he was installed a ruling elder. This office he faithfully filled for more than fourteen years to the day of his departure.

Brother McCaskill was a man of sterling character. Founded upon the Rock, he followed the perfect Pattern with an exactness that few men attain unto.

He loved his church with a devotion that was beautiful to behold. To him no sacrifice was too great, no service too exacting, if thereby the interests of the Church and the glory of God were advanced. Wise in counsel, faithful in every relation, he was a pillar of strength in the session, and a power for good in the community.

"Mark the perfect man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace." This Scripture had its fulfillment in our brother. Patient and submissive he awaited the Lord's will, ready to answer the summons at any time, for death to him was not the king of terrors, but the messenger of God opening the door to life eternal.

It was a benediction to visit him as he tarried awhile on the border land. You saw the triumphs of faith and felt that heaven was not far away for Jesus was there. Such was his testimony for Christ that every one felt the appropriateness of a remark made by a good Methodist brother when bidding him good bye. Said he, "If you should slip away while I am gone I will know where to find you."

The funeral services were conducted on Sabbath morning, the 3rd of Oct., by the pastor, Rev. W. B. Arrowood, in the church he loved and served. The other churches closed their doors, and a very large concourse of people assembled to pay this last tribute of respect to his memory. The text used is found in John 17 : 24, "Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am ; that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me."

His remains were then laid to rest in the cemetery where they await the voice of Him who is the Resurrection and the Life.

"Servant of God, well done!
"Rest from thy loved employ ;
"The battle fought, the victory won,
"Enter thy Master's joy !

"Soldier of Christ well done !
"Praise be thy new employ ;
"And, while eternal ages run,
"Rest in thy Saviour's joy."

W. B. A.

FOR THE FAMILY.

MARTHA AND MARY.

There are some histories that ne'er grow old,
But gather freshness from repeated lines,
Until familiar grown as household words,
Such is the simple history of these two,
So all unlike in character and face.
Methinks I see them on that noted day
Our Lord did visit them. Martha, I ween,
Had countenance all flushed, as eagerly
She served her Lord. With household cares perplexed,
She marvelled Mary could so quiet be,
And sit entranced at Jesus' feet, nor help
In preparation of some needed food,
For the Master tired and hungry. So Martha
Made demand through Christ "she come and help."
But Jesus, turning round unto her, said:
"Martha, thou dost perplex thyself with cares,
And troubled art concerning many things,
When only one is needful." Forever, Lord,
Be thanked for those most dear and precious words,
Since, in a little space, the Gospel truth
That saves us all is shown. The needful thing
Is faith, obedience to thyself and word.

WHAT TO TEACH BOYS.

A philosopher has said that true education of boys is to "teach them what they ought to know when they become men."

1. To be true and to be genuine. No education is worth anything that does not include this. A man had better not know how to read—he had better never learn a letter in the alphabet, and be true, genuine in intention and in action—rather than be learned in all sciences and in all languages, to be at the same time false in heart and counterfeit in life. Above all things, teach boys that truth is more than riches, more than earthly power or possesions.

2. To be pure in thought, language and life—pure in mind and in body.

3. To be unselfish. To care for the feelings and comforts of others. To be generous, noble and manly. This will include a genuine reverence for the aged and for things sacred.

4. To be self-reliant and self-helpful, even from childhood. To be industrious always, and self-supporting at the earliest proper age. Teach them that all honest work is honorable, that an idle life of dependence on others is disgraceful.

When a boy has learned these four things, when he has made these ideas a part of his being—however poor, or however rich—he has learned the most important things he ought to know when he becomes a man.—Parish Visitor.

HEROIC DEVOTION.

An Ohio man, by the name of Charles E. Dutton, an ex-United States army officer, is probably the true successor of Father Damien, and he is the best known and best liked man in Molokai. The Kanakas call him the "Good White Man," and from all reports he is deserving of the name.

He lives by himself in a beautiful part of the island in a cottage that he has furnished comfortably and stocked with a good library of books. Years ago when he was converted to Christianity he possessed an ample fortune, and the story of Father Damien so affected him that he decided to sacrifice his life for the lepers.

WATCH CANNED GOODS.

When a can is bulged, the contents should not be used, as the condition of the tin shows that air has reached the inside and decomposition has set in, which has caused gases to be generated. The gases thus formed have forced the tin to bulge. Cases of poisoning through eating canned fruit and meats are so common that the above method of detecting poisonous canned foods should be specially valuable to housekeepers.—Pub. Health Journal.

The Mother's Pay Day.

What pay does a hard-working mother of a family receive for her labor at the end of a week? The husband may bring home his regular wages. Some of the children may be old enough to earn theirs. But the mother, what is her pay for her days of toil and often nights of anxiety? Well, she is either paid in love or she isn't paid at all.

The majority of mothers are perfectly satisfied with the simple recompense of loving appreciation. If any mother doesn't receive that much, it's an awful pity.

It's a sad thing when the mother comes down sick with overwork or worry, or because some little weakness or disease has been neglected until it gets to be alarming.

It should never be allowed to get to this point. She ought to be looked after right away. She needs the help of common sense medical treatment. Of course no one medicine will cure everything. A medicine must be specially adapted to its particular purpose.

If the digestive organs or the liver are out of order Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a perfect and scientific remedy. His "Favorite Prescription" is specially devised for weaknesses and diseases of the womanly organs; and it is the most potent remedy for these troubles which has ever been invented.

Where both these conditions exist these two medicines taken alternately constitute a thoroughly scientific course of treatment, which has been marvelously successful with thousands of dyspeptic, debilitated and nervous women.

"I take great pleasure in recommending Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets,'" writes Mrs. Jed Lawrence, South Hero, Grand Isle Co., Vt. "My trouble was female weakness, kidney disease, neuralgia, change of life and bad flowing spells. I took eight bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, seven bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and seven small vials of 'Pellets.' The doctors did not help me any. I could not sleep night nor day. I suffered everything before I began to take Dr. Pierce's medicines. When I began to use them I weighed 100 pounds. Now I weigh 145 pounds. I can now do all my work."

marked by a gathering of some special character, and many of them of national importance, but with all that, September 30th, Kate Kirkman day so called in honor of the beautiful president of the woman's board, was perhaps the greatest of them all. Mrs. Kirkman's personal popularity would insure this result.

BIBLE HEROES.

CHAPTER 5.

Jack's Hero and Nita's.

Jack was more interested in finding a hero than people gave him credit for.

On Sunday afternoon instead of finishing his Sunday-school library book, or going out to see after his chickens, he was cuddled up close to his papa's side in the sitting room, with a large Bible open before him.

"Now, do papa, help me find somebody that will be hard for them to guess; I'd like to puzzle even Gamma."

"Well, my boy, you can't do that, for Grandma knows more about Bible characters than all the rest of us put together."

Nita had gone to "Ann' Bella" for help, and came out from Mrs. Allan's room with a very smiling face when Artie called her to come and look at pictures in Grandma's room.

When Friday evening came everybody was on hand promptly, for everybody was curious about Jack's hero, and Nita's too.

"Nita you begin," said Jack when they were all seated; for even Grandma and the other children seemed a crowd when they were all seated around the fire.

"No Jack, you are older than Nita," said Grandma firmly, "and she has never tried to give a hero before."

"Well'm said Jack, blushing very red, and running his hands deep down into his pockets, and holding a marble in each hand for comfort.

"My hero was very brave, I think. He was a captive in a country far from his home, and waited on the king, but he loved his own people very much, and when somebody came and told him that the people at home were very poor and that the walls of the city were all broken down, it distressed him so much that he cried and cried, but he prayed to God and he put it into his heart what to do. When he went to wait on the king he looked very sad, and the king said:

"What's the matter? What makes you look so sad?" Then he was scared, because in those days kings could have a man's head cut off in a minute, but he just prayed to God for courage and then he told the king what the matter was, and the king was sorry for him, and told him that he couid go to his country to help the poor people and to mend the walls, and he went and showed what a smart young man he was and brave too, but after awhile though he loved his country and his people he went back to his king, and did'nt go back to his country for a long time, and that's all now.' Can you guess his name?"

Grandma's hand was up, and she said: Yes, your hero was a noble fellow and very brave when he asked the king to let him go to help his people, but he was quite as brave when he told the people how wicked they were to break the Sabbath and to marry heathen wives. Nehemiah was a true hero I think."

"Yes, it was Nehemiah," said Jack.

"Now Nita, let us have yours." Nita was very much frightened when she began, but she stood close to Grandma, and that seemed to give her courage.

"My hero's father was an old man when he was born, and he loved this boy more than he loved the other sons. I believe he was the best and the prettiest. That made his brothers mad, and one day when he went far off from home to see how they were getting on with their flocks. Why, his bad old brothers just took him and put him in a great deep well, and then aftewards they sold him to some people going far away—an'—one day he made his brothers feel so 'shamed 'cause he was kind to them when they were poor, and didn' have enough to eat, an' he was rich."

All the children, were holding up their hands, of course they had easily guessed Nita's hero, and she was really glad to stop, as she could not remember any more just now.

"It will be Gamma's time next," said Hugh.

"Oh, Gamma don't make yours too hard!"

"Well, dears, I'm going to try my best to puzzle you. But—what is that, I wonder," added Grandma looking so surprised and pointing to the door of he closet. There hung a large, bright yellow bag hung up by a red ribbon!

Everybody started up.

"Bring it here, Hugh," she said, and Hugh dumped it down at Grandma's feet.

All the time Artie was kissing Grandma's hand, and saying:

"Gamma, you are the nicest Gamma I ever saw!" He was certain that Grandma had fixed the bag!

When she pulled the string, out rolled apples and oranges and goobers.

"Now children scramble for them she said, laughing, and what a frolic they had, until Mrs. Allan came in with a lamp in her hand, and said;

"Good night everybody, if you must go!"

Of course the children took the hint and in a few moments dear old Grandma was asleep, and she must have been smiling in her sleep for she had made the children's hearts so very happy! D.

"YE HAVE DONE IT UNTO ME."

Nellie had a bed of strawberries. Very anxious was she that they should ripen, and be fit to eat. The time came. "Now for the feast!" said her brother to her one morning, as he picked some beautiful ones for her to eat.

"I cannot eat these," said she, "for they are the first ripe fruit."

"Well," said her brother, "all the more reason for our making a feast, for they are the greater treat."

"Yes, but they are the first ripe fruit."

"Well, what of that?"

"Dear father told us that he used to give God the first out of all the money he made, and that then he always felt happier in spending the rest; and I wish to give God the first of my strawberries, too."

"Ah! but," said her brother, "how can you give strawberries to God? And even if you could, he would not care for them."

"Oh, I have found out a way," said she. "Jesus said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me'; and I mean to go with them to Mrs. Perkins' dying child, who never sees a strawberry, they are so poor."

Away went the children to give them to the dying child, and when they saw her put out her thin arms to take the ripe, round fruit in her little, shriveled fingers, and when they saw her eyes glisten and her little lips part, they felt as if they had a far richer treat than if they had kept the ripe fruit for themselves; and something within told them that God had accepted their little offering.

So may you try to do something for Jesus each day. How many will try to do so? —Reformed Church Messenger.

FOREIGN MISSION COMMITTEE NOTES.

The Executive Committee of Foreign Missions met in Nashville Tenn., Oct. 12th. The meeting was opened with prayer.

Present: Dr. R. C. Reed, Chairman; Dr. Angus McDonald, Mr. W. H. Raymond, Mr. G. H. Baskette, Prof. J. D. Blanton, Mr. R. J. Gordon, Maj. Joseph Hardie, Dr. J. W. Lupton, Dr. J. H. McNeilly, Rev. G.W. Patterson, Dr. James I Vance and Rev. F. B. Webb, Dr. J. W. Bachman, of Chattanooga, being detained by serious illness in his family, telegraphed his excuse for absence.

The report for the Treasurer showed $3006.96 received from churches, etc., during September; and $350.52 balance for September 30th.

Salaries in Brazil were reduced fifty dollars for married couples; this action being intended to go into effect after the close of 1897.

Rev. I. M. Yonan, of Persia, came before the Committee on invitation, and spoke of his past life, and plans for the future. He asked to be taken under the care of the Committee, and sent to Persia as a missionary. Ordered that the Directing Committee be authorized to open a correspondence with the Northern Presbyterian Board, having in view the withdrawal of our missionaries from native presbyteries in Brazil.

A letter from Rev. J. L. Stuart reported that he expected to sail that day, Oct. 2d, from San Francisco to China; being accompanied by his wife and Miss E. B. French.

Dr. M. H. Houston spoke to the Committee of his teachings and practices as a missionary in China; and of the recent action of Louisville Presbytery in his case. The Committee decided that they had nothing whatever to do with his ecclesiastical standing; that being a matter for his Presbytery to determine.

On motion the following was adopted Inasmuch as the Executive Committee interprets the action of Louisville Presbytery to mean that Dr. Houston's doctrinal and ecclesiastical standing is left intact; therefore the Committee hereby instructs Dr. Houston to return to his mission field in China, on November 16th, or as soon thereafter as practicable.

The Committee adopted the following resolution:

Resolved, That we have heard Rev. I. M. Yonan with great pleasure, and we recognize in him a chosen instrument of God; and we encourage him to make his formal and regular application (for appointment) as a Foreign Missionary.

Miss Minnie M. Gunn was granted permission to return with Rev. A. T. Graybill, to her work in Mexico. The Committee expressed gratification on hearing of her recovery. Miss Grace K. Field, of Lexington, Mo., was appointed a missionary to Japan; and is expected to leave for that field before the end of the present year.

A letter from Rev. J. S. Crowley, of Tumba, Congo Mission, dated August 1st, advised against having the Congo Boat, on the grounds that it would be comparatively useless, very expensive and need men to man it. Mr. Crowley writes that the railroad is to be finished to Leopoldville by March 1st, 1898, when there will be more or less competition between the boats on the upper Congo, and tributaries. Several new boats have recently been added to those already there.

Maj. Joseph was requested to represent the Executive Committee at the Synod of Texas.

After an unusually long session the Committee adjourned, closing with prayer.

Drain the brine off and wash the peppers in fresh, cold water, after which put a layer of them in a large-mouthed earthenware jar and almost cover them with salt. Put on another layer, with salt to separate it from still another, and keep this up until the jar is filled or the peppers give out. Cover the top layer of peppers with cabbage leaves, placing on them a heavy saucer to press the peppers into the brine. Cover the jar and keep in a cool place. Soak the peppers for a night in cold water before using.

THREE LESSONS.

There are three lessons I would write,
Three words as with a golden pen,
In tracings of eternal light
Upon the hearts of men.

Have hope! Though clouds environ round
And gladness hides her face in scorn,
Put thou the shadow from thy brow,
No night but hath its morn.

Have Faith! Where'er thy bark is driven,
The calm's disport, the tempest's mirth,
Know this, God rules the hosts of heaven
The inhabitants of earth!

Have Love! Not love alone for one,
But man as man thy brother call:
And scatter like the circling sun,
Thy charities on all.

Thus grave these words upon thy soul,
Hope, Faith, and Love: and thou shalt find
Strength when life's surges maddest roll,
Light, when thou else wert blind.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, SALISBURY, N. C.

The corner-stone of the church building here represented was laid June 29th, 1891, and was dedicated to the worship of God by the pastor, Rev. J. Rumple, D. D., after a dedicatory sermon by Rev. Walter W. Moore, D. D., June 18th, 1893. This is the second building erected upon the same site. The first building was finished, and dedicated to the worship of God in 1826. It was afterwards enlarged and at different times improved. But in the year 1890 the congregation resolved to tear down the old building and replace it with a more commodious and tasteful structure.

The town of Salisbury lies between the settlements of the German and Scotch-Irish emigrants from Pennsylvania, who began making their homes in this region between 1730 and 1740. The population of the town was a mixture of these two races, interspersed with Englishmen, Frenchmen, pure Irish and Scotch. Among the early inhabitants we find a good many names suggestive of Presbyterian affinities. But these people had no church of their own; and such as were church members belonged to Thyatira, ten miles distant. And yet there seem to have been enough Presbyterians in Salisbury in 1770, to set up candidates of their own for the office of vestrymen in St. Luke's Parish, and to elect them, not with any design that they should act as vestrymen, but solely for the purpose of preventing the Episcopalians from electing such as would have done so, and as would have imposed taxes, as was feared, for the support of the Established Church. About the year 1773 the Lutherans obtained a minister from Germany, and have maintained services, with some intermission to the present date. About the beginning of this century Rev. Dr. S. E. McCorkle, of Thyatira, began to preach to the Presbyterians of Salisbury on occasional Sabbaths. In 1803-4. Rev. Dr. James McRee, pastor of Centre church, preached in Salisbury once a month, and from 1807 to 1809, the Rev. John Brown, D. D., was the Principal of the Salisbury Academy, and preached regularly there one-half of his time, giving the other half to Thyatira. Dr. Brown was then called to the presidency of the South Carolina College, and afterwards became president of Athens College, Ga., where he ended his days. Between the years 1809 and 1819 the Rev. Samuel L. Graham, the Rev. Parsons O. Hays, and perhaps others, preached for short periods in Salisbury. During all this time there were not enough Presbyterians in Salisbury to justify the organization of a church, at least such was the opininion of these members and visiting preachers.

But in 1820 there came as teacher to Salisbury a man who entertained a different opinion. This was the REV. JONATHAN OTIS FREEMAN, M. D.

He soon began to agitate the subject of a church organization, and before the close of the next year he collected a body of thirteen members, had them organized into a church, and ordained Alexander Torrence, Thomas L. Cowan and Dr. Alexander Long, ruling elders. This organization took place on Saturday, August 4th, 1821, and Dr. Freeman was assisted by Rev. John Robinson, D. D., of Poplar Tent. The next day the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was celebrated for the first time for the new organization, probably in the Lutheran Church. For several years this little band had no church building, but worshipped in the court house or in the old Lutheran church, and weekly prayer-meetings were held in private houses. Just before leaving Salisbury in 1826, Dr. Freeman laid the corner-stone of the first Presbyterian church building, which, with the various additions and repairs, furnished accommodations for the church until 1891 when it was torn down to give place to the present structure.

After Dr. Freeman, the Rev. Jesse Rankin was invited to Salisbury as Principal of the Academy and supply to the church. He came in 1827 and remained four years—till the close of 1830. During his ministry there were twenty-seven additions to the roll of communicants. From 1831 till 1836, the Rev. Thomas Espy, and Rev. P. J. Sparrow, D. D., each served the church of Salisbury and Thyatira one year. Mr. Espy died April 16th, 1833, and Dr. Sparrow was called to the chair of languages in the new college of Davidson, whither he went in 1837. From 1836 till 1845 the Rev. Stephen Frontis was pastor of this church, and forty-four were added to the communion during his ministry.

On the first of February, 1846, the Rev. Archibald Baker, became pastor of the church and continued till 1859, a period of thirteen years, and one hundred and fifty-six communicants were added under his ministry.

On the third Sabbath of November, 1860, the Rev. Jethro Rumple, whose cut accompanies this sketch, was installed pastor of this church, Rev. Messrs. Stephen Frontis, and Drury Lacy, D. D, officiating. For a period, lacking a few days, of thirty-seven years, Dr. Rumple has continued to be pastor of this church. During this ministry of 37 years six hundred and twenty-five communicants have been added to the roll, while the names of only ten of the roll of 1860 remain there to-day. The roll of ruling elders in the church from its organization is as follows: Albert Torrence, Thomas L. Cowan, Dr. Alex. Long, Michael Brown, Saml. Lemly, Philip B. Sink,

THE ONE THING NEEDED.

When Jesus came down from the Mount of Transfiguration Matthew says they came "to the multitude;" Luke: "much people met Him; and Mark, whose account of the whole scene which followed the descent from the Mount is more detailed than that of the others says: "When He came to His disciples, He saw a great multitude about them, and the scribes questioning with them." One in casual reading is apt to count the matter of the multitude as of so little significance as not worth a thought, and yet one may well stop a moment to inquire if this judgment is not much too hasty and ill-considered, as far, indeed, as it is considered at all. True an assemblage of multitudes around Christ was a matter of ordinary occurrence, but the assemblage at this time was around not Christ, but about His disciples, the occasion was not an ordinary occasion for Christ was not present, and the gathering must have been much larger than usual to have called for such a repetition of terms in such vigorous expression.

The multitude indeed constituted a principal feature—may we say character—in the dramatis personae of the scene. Let us look upon it. The scribes had followed up the Lord as usual to entrap Him in His talk—they represented the Evil One; the disciples poor, weak and feeble as they were, were held to represent the Saviour; and the great multitude were looking on as the world at large. The scribes, true to their master, assaulted "the weakest disciples in their weakest hour." And this brings us to the reflection how often that has been repeated even to the present hour. The disciples—meaning the nine—who not having lived in the closest intimacy with Jesus, were not chosen, (as being not qualified,) to attend Him on the Mount—were left for the time without the supporting presence of Jesus, and then the Tempter came. How precisely that describes the visits of Satan now. And when the disciples failed in the test, how they must have been teased and tantalized by the questioning scribes while the multitude looking on applauded, not omitting their taunts and jeers.

Just so the world to-day enjoys the contemplation of how little of power the professors of Christianity exert in the reformation of the world. How closely they calculate to show that the world can never be converted by such feeble and altogether unworthy representatives. How the press—sometimes called the Satanic press—do push upon them their failure and their shortcomings. How they do gloat over the disgrace of those naming Christ's name who fall into flagrant sin. So too the multitudinous world is always watching the followers of Christ; the chief emissaries of Satan are always on the alert to disconcert them and put them to an open shame, and the unprepared and utterly discomfited disciples—believing and yet faithless, are only too fully deserving the Saviour's sad plaint, "How long shall I bear with you."

But let us look at the happier side of this scene. Christ comes and all is changed. The power is supplied and what the faith-lacking disciples failed to accomplish is done at His word. And so it ever will be—and so it ever is. When the servants of Christ are utterly discomfited then He comes, the case is brought before Him, the power of God prevails, the scoffers are set at naught and even the outlying multitude cease to sneer.

But the question still is pertinent to those who name the name of Christ. Why should it be thus? why are we so powerless? "Lord, why could not we cast him out?" We seem to hear the Saviour say: "Because of your unbelief"—as the Revised Version has it: "Because of your little faith." In a general way those disciples who so sadly failed to heal the afflicted child had faith—a faith founded upon indisputable evidence, upon positive proof of the power of Christ, so they could not disbelieve. But it was an intellectual faith at best, and did not go deep down into the spiritual nature grasping the truth that all power is in Christ, the truth that would have enabled them to rely wholly upon Him to work through and by them.

Dr. Phillips Brooks used an illustration which may be applicable here: We present it substantially; Most certainly the artist's chisel carves the statue. The artist cannot carve without it and yet imagine the chisel trying to carve alone. It lays itself against the hard marble, but it cannot drive itself upon it. It has no power, it has no skill, either to do or to plan aright. Now let it lay itself in the artist's hand obedient to his will. That obedience comes from faith. It is that faith which opens the channel between the sculptor's brain and the hard steel. Thought, feeling, imagination, skill, flow down from the deep chambers of the artist's soul to the chisel's edge. The sculptor and the chisel are not two, but one. It is the unit which they make that carves the statue.

Christ for the time had absented Himself from His disciples, they would fain do the work of healing independently of Him, and they failed.

It is the lesson for us to-day. The blessed privilege of being workers together with God is ours. The forming thus the unit of power, as Dr. Brooks calls it, is the means by which "evil is to be conquered and the world to be saved." We need as these disciples needed, more faith to inspire prayer that will evoke yet more faith. And when we have that faith which will go deep down into the heart, which will fully animate the soul, which will thoroughly energize the whole nature, when the Church shall arise in the majesty and in the power of this overcoming faith, the mountains of difficulties confronting her will be removed beyond any power to obstruct and the glad triumphant day of Christ will usher in.

THE SCANDAL of the Princeton Inn, it seemed a little while ago would be allowed to pass without notice from Church courts, but, whatever the Synod of New Jersey and the Presbytery of Brunswick may do or may fail to do, and on this point we are not advised, other Synods feeling the stigma attached to the Presbyterian Church are making themselves heard upon the subject. The Synod of Illinois, the press dispatches inform us, adopted resolutions denouncing Princeton University for allowing the use of wine at banquets, and scoring the faculty for permitting the sale of liquor in Princeton Inn. The Synod of South Dakota adopted and ordered to be sent to the religious press for publication the following:

"The Synod of South Dakota views with indignation and abhorrence the conduct of certain Professors in Princeton University in signing a petition for licensing the sale of intoxicating liquors in the Princeton Inn, and thus becoming responsible for opening that place that must become a snare to many young men seeking in Princeton an education, and make it easy for them to go in the way of sin and ruin. Also, this Synod hereby earnestly petitions the General Assembly to call upon the authorities of Princeton University to clear themselves of responsibility for this shameful, un-Christian conduct, by requiring those Professors either to withdraw their names from that and all other such petitions, or resign their positions in the University."

It is not likely the General Assembly will take the action requested, as the University is hardly within its jurisdiction, but the resolutions are quite expressive of the indignation of the Synod.

The Northern newspapers generally have not given the matter the attention it deserves, but the Herald and Presbyter in six counts well chosen and forcibly put proves quite conclusively that "the University itself is the really responsible party for the origin and continuance of the Princeton Inn," and adds the statement in which we entirely concur: "This undoubtedly will be the verdict of the intelligent public, if it is not disavowed much more clearly and distinctly than has as yet been done."

WE GIVE SOME notes of important matters before the Synod of Virginia which met in Fredericksburg last week, taken from the Baltimore Sun's report:

Rev. Dr. F. M. Woods was elected moderator. One hundred and nine ministers and sixty-five ruling elders were present.

The report of the Synod's Committee of Evangelization shows five evangelists employed, 184 received into the church, three churches organized, $2,543 raised by the evangelists, one church building erected and 14,260 miles travelled.

A resolution was adopted appointing a committee with Rev. Dr. Kerr, as chairman, to present to next meeting of the Synod a Scriptural statement of the position of women in the Church.

The report on Systematic Beneficence shows that during the past year the various churches gave to Foreign Missions, $261.42; to Assembly's Home, $70.36; to local Home Missions, $176.82; to Colored Evangelization, $17.85; to Relief Fund, $30.29; to Publication, $15.93; to Bible Society, $12.44; total, $647.23.

In regard to the matter of contract between the Assembly's Home and School and the subscription of the city of Fredericksburg the Synod declared that: "Inasmuch as the General Assembly of 1897 has relieved the Synod of the ground upon which the protest was deemed necessary that no further action is now needed."

The report on Sabbath-schools was adopted: The report shows that the 442 churches of the Synod have 468 Sabbath-schools. Three churches report Sabbath-schools for colored people. Total number of officers and teachers, 4,365; number of scholars, 32,935; total contributions for all purposes, $15,672; expenses, $10,109. The number of scholars has increased over last year, while contributions and expenses have decreased.

The Synod after expressing sympathy in all wisely directed efforts to save children from the effects of intemperance declined to aid the Women's Christian Temperance Union in obtaining the enactment of a law touching teaching in the State schools, the ruinous effects of alcohol upon the human system, on the ground that it is contrary to the well established policy of the Presbyterian Church to attempt through its courts to shape legislation.

A communication was received from Bishop Stevens of the Reformed Episcopal Church asking the Synod to unite in a petition to stop the distribution of mails and to close all postoffices on the the Sabbath. The moderator and stated clerk were directed to sign the petition on behalf of the Synod.

A complaint by Revs. E. R. Leyburn and J. W. Lafferty against Winchester Presbytery for alleged irregularity in the licensure of Mr. V. G. Smith evoked considerable discussion. It was not sustained.

A paper was adopted expressing appreciation of the Home and School at Fredericksburg and calling on sessions and pastors to do all they can to make the collection ordered by the Assembly as large as possible.

A HIGHLY esteemed friend, writes: "I am glad you purpose publishing portraits and sketches of the Fathers, of sainted memory. I would suggest among them Rev. Martin McQueen, who was pastor of Carthage church twenty-four years. I expect to have a cut of him which I will be glad to loan you for this purpose. I hope you will publish all these sketches and portraits some day in either pamphlet or book form, as they contain a mine of vaulable history."

Thanks for the encouragement, and for the offer of aid which we gladly accept.

THE ARTICLE on our 8th page, copied from the Union Seminary Magazine raises a question which well may provoke discussion, and indeed it is the wish of the author of it that it should do so. We trust it will be carefully considered and to that end we specially call attention to it.

WE GIVE to-day a picture of the church in which the Synod of North Carolina will hold its sessions next week and reproduce the likeness of its well beloved pastor.

OUR THANKS are tendered to Mecklenburg Presbytery for the action at its late meeting in Charlotte in recognizing with appreciation the fidelity of the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN to the cause of Christ and Presbyterianism and in cordially commending it to the members of the churches within its bounds.

WE PROMISE our readers a treat next week in extracts of a letter of Dr. George C. Worth, missionary in China, to his parents: which extracts are kindly placed at our disposal.

We trust our friends will go to work promptly on this plan.

"RED HOUSE CHURCH."

Again our dear old historic church is without a pastor. Again our hearts are sore over parting with the shepherd who has faithfully and tenderly led us as a flock beside the "still waters" of life into the "green pastures" of Christian love and fellowship. Our tender lambs have been carried in his loving bosom and other members bowed under age or affliction have been comforted by the consolation and sympathy so lovingly expressed and by his earnest pleadings at the throne of God in their behalf.

Rev. P. C. Morton comes nearer the ideal of pastor than is reached by many ministers. A man of broad culture and varied experience, possessing powers of great physical endurance, and a heart that embraces the human family, not limited by denominational bounds or bissed by sectarian influence. Happy the people who have him as their teacher, and most happy the congregation which have him to break unto them the "bread of life."

A MEMBER.

I do believe the common man's work is the hardest. The hero has the hero's aspirations that lift him to his labor. All great duties are easier than the little ones, though they cost far more blood and agony. —Phillips Brooks.

Only five of the roll of elders continue members of the session, and ten of the deacons, on the present board.

The Salisbury church has been a power for good in the town, and to the Church at large. The sources of its influence, aside from the regular preaching of the Gospel have been:

1st. That from the beginning it has maintained a well conducted Sabbath-school, in which the children have been instructed in the Scriptures and the catechisms of the Church. In this school have been trained a large number of the present members of the church and other citizens of the town, a number of ministers and one foreign missionary.

Another element of success in church work has been its earnest and faithful office-bearers, and a goodly number of devout and godly women, who have devoted themselves to the service of the Master, and engage readily in all good works. To these must be added, especially in later years, quite a number of our young people, of both sexes, who, in the Christian Endeavor Society, and King's Daughters, do faithful and successful work.

Another fruitful agency has been the constant maintenance of a church school, either male or female. For a long period there existed a good classical school for boys, from which went to college, and afterwards into the Gospel ministry such preachers as Rev. Wm. H. Davis, Rev. Jno. W. Davis, D. D., Rev. B. G. Clifford, D. D., Rev. J. Alston Ramsay, D. D., Rev. J. N. H. Sumerell and Rev. K. P. Julian. There is now in the Church Academy an excellent Female High School under the care of two accomplished young lady members of the church. It may not be amiss to state that Maxwell Chambers, who bequeathed a quarter of a million of dollars to Davidson College, over forty years ago, thus coming to its rescue when its very existence was imperiled, was a worshipper in this church, and a liberal supporter of all causes of benevolence in the community. His tomb is under the Lecture Room adjoining the church. Davidson College, from the time it took Dr. Sparrow from this church for its first professor of Languages, has always had strong friends and liberal support from this congregation. Six thousand dollars from this church has been invested in scholarships for the benefit of needy students in the college. Salisbury for the eighth time, expects to enjoy the presence of the Synod of North Carolina in November next, and is pleased to stand next in frequency of Synodical meetings to Fayetteville, which has enjoyed this privilege twelve times.

TWO WEEKS IN SHANGHAI.

During which I have not had time to go down street in business hours to buy a much needed umbrella, so absorbed have we all been in the business of the Thirtieth Anniversary Conference, and the Mission meeting.

Is was worth the wearisome trip across the Continent and the Pacific to receive the greeting that awaited me at the Shanghai wharf from the brethren of the China Mission. And in my judgment the cost of the trip is already more than offset in what I have received, to say nothing of any thing I may have been able to impart, in the way of information, inspiration and equipment for work, in personal intercourse with our missionaries, although as yet I have seen nothing of the work itself.

The first general impression I have received is that the effort of the Executive Committee for many years past to secure a body of picked men and women for this great work has not been in vain. Many of our Presbyteries possess a quota of men of commanding ability. But judging by the discussions of this meeting, it is my deliberate opinion that no one of them will measure up, in general average of ability to the standard of the China Mission.

The problems of mission work in this country are perplexing to the last degree. Many plans and policies which seemed in the beginning to be self-evidently good have been proven by experience to be bad. The Chinese in their four thousand years of recorded history have evolved a character whose complexity and intricacy are indescribable, and yet which have to be reckoned with in all our methods of dealing with them.

An Industrial School for boys, for instance. How simple and self-evidently good it would seem. But so many unforeseen difficulties have emerged in connection with them that it was only after a day and half of earnest discussion that the Mission resolved to make a tentative experiment in that line of work.

Day schools in which children are visited and instructed by our missionaries, and then used as a means of gaining access to heathen homes, how beautiful the idea seems. And yet it has been found that they have been the starting point of much parasitism in the native Church, and that other evils have been mixed with the good in them. And so after a day's discussion the Mission recorded its disapproval of them, unless conducted by Christian teachers, and under careful and daily supervision of the missionary, and on the basis of self-support.

Another thing has impressed me in this mission meeting. The earnestness, fearlessness and outspokenness with which opposing opinions are expressed would, in one of our Presbyteries, almost certainly lead to the rupture of personal relations. Here it seems to make no difference of that kind whatever.

Another thing is the spirit in which our men, and especially our women, accept the work assigned them by the Mission, with utter disregard of the question of personal comfort or discomfort involved in it. It seems not to matter in the least whether they go to Hangchow where we have a comfortable compound and comparatively easy modes of travel and enough workers to give pleasant companionship, or to Suchien and Chuchow-fu, where they must travel by mule, cart and wheelbarrows and live for the present in native houses and with one family left alone. In writing home to friends they tell so little of these things and so much of the brighter side of the work, that the home Church is largely ignorant of the heroic self-sacrifice that, for most of them at least, missionary life here in China involves.

As for Shanghai, I have had little time to see any part, except that which lies between my home and the place where we hold our meetings, the "native city" at all. The foreign concession is a curious mixture of fine foreign buildings, gardens and grounds, and the most repulsive forms of heathen filth and degradation. The two lie side by side, and the one seems to make no impression on the other. There is the visible demonstration here that foreign civilization by itself has no tendency whatever to change the character of the Chinese. The Gospel alone will do them any good.

The effort to reach and change them by any form of Gospel work can be demonstrated from any human standpoint to be utterly impracticable and hopeless. Yet it is reaching and changing them, slowly and as it were one by one, but surely and unquestionably. Eighty thousand of them are now in Church communion in our Protestant Missions. But we need to take with many grains of salt certain rose-colored views of the situation that are sometimes given us. We are in for a work here which may require centuries for its accomplishment. What is required of us is that we shall each stand in our lot, fulfilling our appointed task, doing with our might what our hands find to do.

When the day of triumph come, whether it be in our day or a thousand years hence, every one of us who has had a hand in bringing it about will see it, and share in and rejoice in it.

S. H. CHESTER.

P. S.—If I should sign my name and title as arranged for me here, in Chinese, it would be Mei Kwoh Nan Changlao Tsoong Hwuy Pudao Shooki Keh-sze-teh; which being interpreted means, "American Kingdom Southern Presbyterian General Assembly Mission Secretary, the man who meditates on virtue." In the last word, "Neh" was the surname borne by the lamented Miss Kirkland, which I esteem it a special honor to bear. The last two syllables, "sze-teh" are the nearest approach the language affords to my name, and by a singular coincidence, have the meaning given above.

Mr. Lowry Wilson Brown of Beersheba church was introduced to Presbytery as a candidate for the ministry.

STATED CLERK.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

The Lowell Lectures, which Prince Serge Wolkousky delivered in 1896, on Pictures of Russian History and Russian Literature have been published in book form.

Mrs. J. M. Tiernan who is so well-known by her nome de plume of Christian Reid is living at Concord, N. C. Mrs. Tiernan has recently finished a book entitled "The Man of the Family," the scene of which is laid in San Domingo. It will be issued by G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

Kalevala, the epic poem of the Finns was published in the language of that people in 1849, but was not translated into English and the other languages until 1888. In meter it is similar to Longfellow's Hiawatha. There are forty-nine runes or cantos which constitute the poem. These cover many centuries and were probably written by different authors. The history goes back to the time of Homer, 3,000 years ago, and also relates events after the Finns became a settled nation and occupied their present territory. The poem was preserved from generation to generation by wandering minstrels and the different parts were collected in their present form by two physicians, Topelius and Lonnrot, in the present century.

BOOKS.

The Silver Series of English Classics published by Messrs. Silver, Burdett & Co., of Boston, is designed to furnish editions of many of the standard classics in English and American Literature in the best form for reading and study, and in the copy of Macbeth which we have before us, this plan has been truly carried out. The work is ably edited by Fred Lewis Pattee, Professor of English and Rhetoric in the Pennsylvania State College and is well printed and strongly bound in paper lined with cloth.

The Thoughtless Seven and The Odd One are two charming story books for children published by the Fleming H. Revell Co., New York. The former is a story of a family of seven boys and girls brimming over with fun and frolic and the latter a much longer story of Betty and her little sisters and brothers, but also introducing several other interesting characters. These books are both by the author of "Probable Sons" and are delightfully written. In each is woven the lesson of Christ's love to us. They are bound in ornamental covers, printed on heavy paper and beautifully illustrated. They will make most excellent gift books and will be read with pleasure by both old and young.

Black came and preached until Monday. The people prayed for the presence and power of the Spirit to be manifested and the answer came with a shower of blessings. Bro. Black's clear, pointed and logical presentation of the truth carried conviction to the hearts of sinners. Many backsliders were reclaimed and twenty-three precious souls were received into this church on profession of their faith in Christ. Some will join other churches.

Rev. J. E. Summers led the choir and the singing was unusually good. A collection, amounting to $60 was taken for Synodical Home Missions. Also about $320 was added to our subscriptions for a new church. "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights." To Him be all the praise.

The amount contributed last year was $1,343.38 or an average of $163 per member. Miss Minnie M. Gunn was present and told of her work in Mexico. Many bright interesting and encouraging papers were read from those at home and abroad and the meeting of twenty-five delegates and officers was a great pleasure and blessing to all.

Beulah, In Concord Presbytery:—Three more persons have been added to the membership of this little church, making eight in all that have been received since the middle of September.

Lumber Bridge:—Rev. A. D. McClure closed a very delightful and helpful series of services at Lumber Bridge church Sunday night. The pastor reports a great revival and spiritual uplift as a result of the week's work. There were seven professions of faith, The Word of God was unfolded earnestly, faithfully and simply and the Holy Spirit used it to quicken and edify. The personal bearing and preaching were alike pleasing and the people will remember long and gratefully this ministry and pray that the Lord may spare him long to minister the bread of life to others as he has to them.

ALABAMA.

York:—Rev. J. T. West, a recent graduate of the Southwestern Presbyterian University has taken charge of the church here.

GENERAL.

The corner stone of the Presbyterian church at Evanston, in the vicinity of Cincinnati, was laid on the 14th inst.

The colored Presbyterians of Charlotte have built a second church in that city.

Rev. Dr. D. I. Purser, pastor of the Valence Street Baptist church, New Orleans, died on the 21st inst., of yellow fever. He was off on vacation, being not in robust health, when the fever broke out, but when it invaded his congregation, under the impulse of duty and against the remonstrance of his wife and family, he returned to minister to his flock and to lay down his life in the Master's service.

The two hundred and fifty-sixth anniversary of the adoption of the Westminster Standards is to be celebrated in New York on November 8th and 9th, with exercises in the "Old First" Presbyterian church and in Madison Square Garden Concert Hall. There will be addresses by prominent men and a special musical program.

The Presbyterian church at Leatherwood, in Western Pennsylvania was dedicated on Oct. 10th. Rev. J. C. Dible is pastor.

Rev. Elbert Nevins, the oldest minister in the Dutch Reformed Church recently died in the 90th year of his age. He was a foreign missionary in earlier life, and was pastor for forty years of the church at Stuyvesant, N. Y.

Rev. Dr. A. C. Dixon, of Brooklyn, will conduct services at Cooper Union, New York on every day at 3 p. m., from November 8th to 12th. Mr. J. H. Burke, assisted by a chorus choir will lead the singing. This will be the opening series of an evangelistic campaign for the winter.

A dispatch to the London Daily Mail from Constantinople under date of the 25th says: "The Porte has demanded the recall of two American missionaries from the Province of Aleppo on the pretext that their mission for the distribution of relief is likely to cause disturbances. The United States legation has ignored the demand, and will continue to do so until definite charges are made, being convinced that the demand is merely the first step to a general one asking for the recall of all missionaries."

A dispatch to the Times from Constantinople, with reference to the same incident, merely says: "The Porte complained, and the legation replied that there was not reason to expect mischief from the action of the missionaries."

[EDITORIAL.]

And now the Catholic University in Washington City has its troubles. At a meeting of the board of directors last week Monsignor Joseph Schroeder, Professor of Dogmatic Theology was requested to resign because of charges affecting his moral character. It had been expected that he would resign during a late visit to Germany and thus avoid much scandal, but it seems he found favor in the eyes of the Pope and was advised not to do so. But the directors, notwithstanding letters from persons high in authority at Rome considered the case so serious as to demand careful consideration.

The charge was frequenting liquor saloons—and presumably indulging freely in intoxicating liquors. The faculty had prepared the charges and were ready to substantiate them, but at the time the professor could not be found having left the city. The accused had strong friends who one by one surrendered in view of the strong evidence presented, until Bishop Horstmann a staunch advocate expressing his disappointment and disgust at the revelations made, promised that the resignation should be forthcoming promptly; and it was. In the afternoon Prof. Schroeder resigned under threat of expulsion and removal. The matter will be referred to Rome, but it is not thought his friends there can have the action reversed.

We take no pleasure in thus exposing the scandal, for every religious body is liable to be brought to shame by misconduct of some even of its most prominent members, but we do commend most heartily the promptitude and the firmness displayed in recognizing the proper thing to be done and in fearlessly doing it.

Bishop McLaren, of Chicago, if we mistake not is one of the highest of High Churchmen, notwithstanding if reports be true his father was a Presbyterian minister. He has just returned from Lambeth Conference and is not pleased with the claim the English prelates would seem disposed to press that the Archbishop of Canterbury should be recognized as the head, not only of the Church of England, but of the Episcopal Church in this country He says as quoted by the correspondent of the Baltimore Sun:

"The idea of English imperialism has taken possession of the English people, and the idea has been enormously emphasized by the Queen's jubilee. Naturally enough, where Church and State are united, the imperial idea suggests itself in connection with the Church, but it does not seem to have dawned on some minds that the church in America is a free Church, in a free State, and that it would be impossible for us, under any conceivable situation, to accept the Archbishop of Canterbury in any other position than that of president, by courtesy, of the decennial assembly of the bishops."

LUMBER BRIDGE.

This neat village takes its name from a bridge near by. The bridge is not over Lumber river as some suppose, but over a smaller stream and has its distinction as a covered bridge in those earlier days when saw mills were fewer and the skill in sawing was less advanced. It was then a greater task to get out so much lumber and a rarer thing to put so much in a bridge where there were more uses and demands for lumber than it was easy to supply.

This is quite a Presbyterian settlement and a point in a larger district settled chiefly by Scotch Presbyterians and held by their descendants. The pastor here, Rev. P. R. Law, who is stated clerk of his (Fayetteville) Presbytery, has a field of great interest and is much beloved and very useful in his field. He deserves a large share of the credit for the new seminary at Red Springs which is already so well established and successful under the care of its devoted and worthy president, the Rev. C. G. Vardell. He is holding down the expense of a first-class education and raising the standard and increasing the value of that education at Red Springs continually. His wife at the head of the music department had a fine reputation on taking the work and adds to her well deserved fame daily by skillful work and excellent instruction and oversight of this right arm of the seminary. The seminary is very fortunate in the heads of all departments and in their assistants for this year. All this is by the favor and blessing of God. Being near this seminary and knowing the interest of Bro. Law has led to this digression. It also links brother Law properly with the educational interests of this whole section. Here at Lumber Bridge he has secured the headship of Professor McArthur and the presence and labors of his excellent associates in a school of great value. The boys and girls of the immediate neighborhood are attending the school and many are coming from other countries and communities to board in the village and attend the school. They are well taught. Brother Law is foremost in plans and labors to increase the value and patronage of this school. Families in the village take boarders at reasonable rates.

This has an advantage for the church as it is putting into practice the old and true idea for which the fathers prayed and labored, to have a school in connection with the church and all education to be distinctly Christian. One incidental advantage appears in the singing. The voices of children and youth not only swell the volume of song in worship, but sweeten its strains and soften and perfect its harmony. Here all the people sing, and many sing by note. So the congregation is led and guided by voices that are in time and tune. For the meeting we are now holding the new book "Sacred Songs No. 1," is being used, and the new pieces are soon learned while the older pieces are sung with a correctness and an interest that would surprise our city singers with all their supposed advantages and skill.

The meeting began last Monday night, though some preparatory prayer-meetings were held and the three preaching services of last Sabbath were introductory. The good attendance at first has grown steadily in numbers and interest in spite of dark and rainy nights, and the blessing of the Lord is given richly. The preaching is done very simply and quietly depending on the Holy Spirit to reveal and exalt our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

It is pleasant to find that the writings of Rev. Andrew Murray are known and read here. The excellent Christian physician who was led by Brother Law to settle here is doing much to increase the interest in such writings. Indeed, the Christian physician has opportunities to serve Lord and occasions to speak for Him which even the pastor has not, and is besides a great help to the pastor.

The new church building here is being made ready for early completion and furnishing. It is a very attractive building and will be an ornament. It will also give more room for the growing needs and appliances of the school. The grounds are to be made more attractive with an adjoining grove and park and play grounds for the pupils. Brother Law is to be congratulated on his excellent constituency and the blessing of God on his labors.

Rev Wm T Walker was elected moderator, and Rev Jas Thomas and Elder Jno B Sparrow, clerk.

Rev A R Shaw was received from the Presbytery of Fort Worth and order taken for his installation as pastor of the Henderson church, Sunday, October 31st, at 11 a. m.

Rev E Daniel, D D, to preside, preach and propound the questions. Rev A S Caldwell to charge the pastor, and Rev C N Wharton the people.

Mr E C Caldwell was received under the care of Presbytery by transfer from the Presbytery of St Johns, and Mr J Stanly Thomas, formerly a candidate, was again received under the care of Presbytery after examination—both of them as candidates for the Gospel ministry.

Mr. Thomas having applied also for licensure was examined on all the required subjects except Hebrew, and licensed to preach the Gospel under the clause governing exceptional cases, which action, and the reasons for it, was duly recorded.

Mr Thomas was, at his own request, dismissed to place himself under the care of the Presbytery of Wilmington.

Rev Wm T Walker resigned the pastoral charge of the Nutbush church, and Presbytery ordered an adjourned meeting at Henderson October 30th, at 7.30 p. m., to hear from the church.

An adjourned meeting at Salisbury during the meeting of Synod was also ordered.

Rev W W Quicke received last spring from the Reformed Episcopal Church as a member of this Presbytery having soon after died in Goldsboro, Presbytery adopted a memorial minute as follows:

WHEREAS, Since our last meeting, the Rev W W Quicke, a member of this body has passed away,

Resolved, That Presbytery bows in submission to this dispensation whereby a young brother, a comparative stranger and but recently come to us from another denomination, yet of lovely and winning Christian character, and of great promise of usefulness among us, was unexpectedly called up higher; and prays God to sanctify it to us, and to bring comfort to the bereaved and sorrowing friends of the deceased.

Col J S Amis, chairman of the trustees of Presbytery having resigned, Mr. Samuel Watkins of Henderson was appointed chairman, and Mr Jno Webb of Oxford was elected to fill the vacancy. J W Hawkins, Esq., another trustee, having removed beyond bounds, Dr R A Patterson of Littleton was elected trustee in his stead

The trustees of Davidson College representing the Presbytery presented the cause of that institution and read the circular letter of the Board to the Presbyteries having control of the college.

Presbytery also voted a request to the college board, to consider, under advice of the Faculty, the removal of the evil of secret fraternities from the college.

The cause of Foreign Missions was presented in a popular meeting Thursday night.

Rev Dr Payne, who has this cause in charge in the Presbytery, being absent through physical disability, Presbytery adopted a resolution of sympathy with him and his family in their anxiety and commended them to God in prayer.

The report prepared by Dr Payne was read, and several addresses were made by members and a collection amounting to $12 50 was made for the cause.

The cause of Presbyterial Home Missions was presented in a report by Rev Mr Wharton. All the evangelists of Presbytery present, also made verbal reports, showing the work done in the various fields since April.

Members were appointed to visit churches and mission points, spending a Sabbath, before the spring meeting, viz., Aurora, Dr Payne; Dover, Farries; Falkland, Morton; Grassy Creek, Daniel; Geneva, Caldwell; Greenville, Payne; Enfield, Jas Thomas; Louisburg, Morton and Walker; Nahalah, Morton; Nutbush, Caldwell and Shaw; Oak Hill, Caldwell; LaGrange, Jas Thomas; Strickland, F Thomas; Parmele, Brown; Roanoke Rapids and Nutbush, Wharton; Geneva, Caldwell.

THE LORD'S SUPPER—A PLEA FOR ITS MORE FREQUENT OBSERVANCE.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper is and ought ever to remain one of the most sacred ordinances of the Christian Church. Around it cluster the hallowed associations and helpful memories of the Cross—as well as many precious recollections of our own expersence.

"Sweet the moments, rich in blessing,
Which before the cross we spend;
Life and health and peace possessing,
From the sinner's dying Friend."

It would appear that it is equally precious in Christ's eyes, and to His heart. The circumstances under which He instituted it make it impossible for Him ever to forget it. And that He would have His people always remember it, appears from the fact, that He has not only had the history of its institution thrice recorded in the Gospels, but also has given the Apostle Paul a separate and definite revelation of the appointment of this memorial of His death. The question therefore, of the frequency of the observance of the Lord's Supper in and by the Church is not a question of minor importance. Nor are we without a warrant and a guide in decision of the question. Our church among others, has fallen into its infrequent observance, until this has become an unwritten law almost as binding, as irrefragable, as a "thus saith the Lord." Indeed I question if many of our members do not regard our present usage as of divine appointment. Upon more careful study and investigation, it will appear however that instead of infrequent, frequent observance would seem to be ordained. This appears to be indicated by

I.—THE NATURE AND SIGNIFICANCE OF THE SACRAMENT.

It is a memorial; and that of the Person of most blessed memory—"this do for a memorial of Me," and of an event the most important in the history of the world; "Ye do show the Lord's death till He come." Surely if it be a memorial to keep alive the memory of Jesus Christ, the Saviour of His people: and of His death—the one and only sacrifice for sin; and that too the only memorial He appointed of Himself—and that as His dying request, it ought not be relegated to a corner—to be observed and dwelt upon only once, twice or even four times a year. It is not thus that we treat the parting gifts of our deceased loved ones. We place and use them where and when they will keep the departed most constantly in mind. And this should we especially do in our treatment of the Lord' Supper which the Master has specially prepared and adopted to keep His name ever in mind.

2. Its form, a meal. It is the Lord's Supper. The elements, bread and wine, are symbols of spiritual food and nourishment, contained and conveyed in and by the spiritual reception of said elements. As a meal, it is also suggestive and symbolic of communion. Hence the name—the Communion—communion with Christ and with another.—1 Cor. 10: 16, 17. In our present state of weakness and growth we need frequently the spiritual nourishment the sacrament was ordained to convey and the strength that comes from waiting upon Christ, and with one another, in communion with Him in this helpful ordinance appointed by Himself.

3. Its history and usage. The apostles who received the sacrament from the hands and lips of Christ, led the early Church in its frequent observance, "And they continued steadfastly in the breaking of bread." Acts 2: 42. "And they continuing daily with one accord in the temple and breaking bread at home."—R. V. vs. 46. If it be objected that this was an extraordinary period in the history of the Church—and that therefore the practice or usage of the Church is not binding at that time for every age—answer is made that we find the Church adhering to a frequent observance of the ordinance more than twenty-five years after Pentecost, the disciples partook of the Lord's Supper at least every Lord's Day. "And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread."—Acts 20: 7. It was to keep the Supper that they came together as was their practice every Lord's Day. Though this was evidently their practice, Paul, who was present, did not rebuke them for abuse, in too frequent observance, of the sacrament. The example of the apostles, and especially the record of their practice, carries with it the force of authority and command. Even as their observance of the first day of the week as the stated day of worship, is our only authority for the change of the Sabbath day. The Christian Church for several centuries, governed doubtless by the example, if not by the instructions of the apostles, continued to administer the Lord's Supper every Lord's Day. Mosheim writes, that in the third century "It was, i. e. the Lord's Supper, commonly administered every Sunday," while Fisher is authority for stating that as late as the early part of the fourth century, "the ordinary practice was for the communion to be received on Sundays of each week. That it was the usage of the Church in the days of the Westminster Confession will appear from quotations from our standards given in another connection. Many of the Evangelical Protestant churches of our time, guided by Scripture and the example of the Church in apostolic and post-apostolic periods, observe the ordinance at least once a month. In Durham, N. C., and probably in many other towns and cities, every Protestant church (with the exception of the Presbyterian), including the Baptists, Methodist, Episcopal, and Christian, hold a Communion service on the morning of the first Sabbath of every month. Why should the Presbyterian Church be singular by its exception?

II.—ADVANTAGES.

The frequent observance of the Lord's Supper multiply the benefits of its infrequent observance. Whatever advantages are claimed for its observance at all can be claimed with greater emphasis for its frequent observance within scriptural limits. Briefly, some of these benefits are

1. The blessing that follows obedience to the interpretation and authority of our standards. One of the duties designated by our Larger Catechism for Christians after they have received the Sacrament of the Supper is that "they encourage themselves to a frequent attendance upon the ordinance." Ques. 175. One of the points of difference between Baptism and the Lord's Supper indicated by the same authority is that "the Lord's Supper is to be administered often. Ques. 177. With such explicit instructions in our Standards how happens that we as loyal Presbyterians have lapsed in many places into a semi-occasional observance of this precious ordinance, especially when our Standards are based upon the very words of Scripture, "as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup," to the Lord's dying command, and compliance with the example and interpretation of those to whom He gave the command.

2. Intimate communion with Christ and with His people in and by the objective helps of His own choice and appointment. Blessed recollection of His death with all that it implies and secures. And inspiring hope of His return; "until He comes."

3. The setting or showing forth of Christ's death, as God's great sacrifice for sin, the one and only ground of pardon and reconciliation. Manifestly this was the moving cause of the appointment of the Lord's Supper to keep alive the knowledge and faith of the Lord's death as the atonement for sin. Such is the plain implication of the words of its institution. "This is My body broken for you," "This is the New Testament in My blood, which is shed for you." If for centuries before the coming of Christ it was necessary by frequent yea daily typical sacrifices to maintain faith in the great doctrine of remission of sin in and through blood, have we in these latter days outgrown the necessity, and become virtually independent of any symbol or token of the sacrifice of Christ for sin? Again, the Cross, with all that it implies and accentuates, has always been an offence to the carnal mind, and never more so than at the present time. Many of the most popular writers and preachers of the day discount or reject the cross as any atonement, and this in the most subtle and plausible way, so that a secret unbelief in the atonement is permeating the minds of many of our best people. The frequent observance of the Lord's Supper, wherein is shown the Lord's death, is an antidote for this poisonous leaven, and affords the ministry a natural opportunity, without offence, to expound and enforce the doctrine of the atonement, the corner-stone of our blessed and saving religion.

4. The frequent observance of the Supper will afford new converts an early opportunity of receiving this seal to their faith. In many of our churches the door of admission is opened only on Communion Sabbaths. And in our country churches where the Communion is administered only once or twice a year a young convert must sometimes wait nearly six months before he can join the church. Or, if the doors are opened more frequently, he must wait the same time before he can come to the Lord's Table, and thus be deprived for many months of an ordinance which Christ has ordained for the confirmation and strengthening of his faith. This unfortunate denial would be obviated by a more frequent observance of the Sacrament.

III.—OBJECTIONS.

The present schedule of infrequent administration of the Supper has prevailed so long in the Church that any suggestion of change will naturally call forth objections, some reasonable, some unreasonable. Are not these the objections that will be more generally suggested?

1. By frequent observance the Supper will become common. And when it does it will lose its salutary effect. Does not the same objection hold against prayer, the reading of the Word of God, attendance upon the regular services of the sanctuary? And yet we do not discourage Christians from the frequent waiting upon these means of grace. But would it not be salutary, rather than injurious if we did make the Lord's Supper more common than it is now? In the minds of many Christians its administration is so solemn and awful that they dread to come to it, and they avoid it, if they possibly can. Very spiritually minded, consistent Christians have confided in me that they dreaded the approach of the Sacramental season. One reason of this dread is the awful sanctity the Church has attached to the Supper by cutting it off from the stated and frequent services of God's house, even as the Holy of Holies was cut off from the other courts of the tabernacle. The Supper is a communion, to which God's people ought to feel drawn, and to which they ought to be encouraged to come; and from which they ought not to be driven in dread through any awful sanctity or mystery attached thereto.

2. By frequent observance, we will incur a great danger of running into sacramentarianism. We will depend upon the symbol and neglect the Person, fact, and truths symbolized. There is a danger here, and we must guard against it. Yet in striving to avoid the error of Sacramentarianism are we not in danger of forgetting that the Church is a Sacramental host—a people with whom God has entered into a covenant which He has sealed with the blood of His Son, the symbol of which He has given us in the Lord's Supper? If God ordained the usage of a daily symbol of Christ's death, before it took place, and that too before the Holy Ghost was given to enlighten the minds of the worshippers in its significance to sanctify it to their growth in grace, has He denied us the privilege of at least a frequent use of the only memorial of that death after it has transpired, and that when He has given us the Holy Ghost to make effectual this, and other means of grace, to the salvation of those waiting upon them?

3. The change will shock the minds and break the hallowed associations of many of God's faithful and chosen saints. Due regard should be paid to this sentiment and also to the teachings of God's Word. And both can be done. Let the change from an occasional to a frequent observance be made gradually, so that the people shall glide into it almost unconsciously or until they learn of it through a conscious growth in grace under and by reason of the new, though really the old dispensation.

Lastly—How shall the change be effected? This can very easily be accomplished. Let one or more Presbyteries overture the General Assembly to send down to the churches a pastoral letter calling attention to the all too common neglect of this sacrament—its infrequent observance in many churches—and recommending to all our churches a frequent administration of it, leaving to the authorities in each church to decide how often it shall be observed in their church. Let some of our more prominent and influential churches in different sections of the church adopt the proposed plan of frequent observance, even in advance of any action by the Assembly, and publish reports of the workings of the original order in the church, that other churches may be prepared for the action of the Assembly and ready to adopt its recommendation. Let pastors and others post themselves, and then post the church through the religious press upon the practice of the early Church and of many modern churches, and thus break down the prejudice, formed of habit, against a return to the Scriptural observance of this blessed ordinance, the parting and sealing gift of our dying Lord.

Fourth Quarter—Lesson V.

Nov 7th, 1897.—Acts xxviii: 1-16.]

Commit to memory verses 3-5.

Subject.—Paul in Melita and Rome.

Golden Text. "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God." Rom. viii. 28.

CATECHISM.

Question 65. What is forbidden in the fifth commandment?

Answer. The fifth commandment forbiddeth the neglecting of, or doing anything against, the honor and duty which belongeth to every one in their several stations and relations.

Time. A. D., 60-61.

Place. Melita to Rome.

INTRODUCTORY.

Paul is no sooner out of one trouble than he is in another. He escapes the peril of the sea, only to be cast by shipwreck naked and hungry upon an unknown island and to be bitten by a viper as he is picking up sticks for a fire that they may be warm and dry. But God is with Paul. All this is the good hand of his God upon him. Life is deep, narrow, full of pain, fretted and exasperated by a thousand mockeries, utter confusion and tumults, to the man who does not know God. To the man who is in Christ Jesus, safe, sheltered life is high, wide full of solace and free from wrong.

Paul was such a man now cast upon the island Melita or Malta as a shortened form. This island is small, sixty miles south of Sicily, about two hundred miles from the African coast. It is seventeen miles in length, nine miles at greatest width and sixty miles in circumference. The inhabitants were of Phoenician origin from Carthage in Africa. The language is now Arabic. It was then under Roman rule, and is now under British. The bay still bears St. Paul's name and a cave is pointed out as a place that gave him shelter. This island is associated with the history of the Knights Templar of the crusades.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 1. They, R. V. "we" knew from the natives, or more probable from the sailors, as soon as they saw the place by daylight. In our last lesson Paul was escaping from the perils of a terrible storm with 275 companions through waves and rain to an unknown shore. Now they knew that the island was called Melita.

Vs. 2. The barbarous people, or "barbarians" as they are called vs. 4. So the Greeks and Romans called all other people than themselves, especially when speaking another language. It means here simply natives. No little kindness, "no common kindness" that is, unusual and unexpected kindness, a word almost our philanthropy, or kindness shown as the ground of humanity. Because of the cold. It was late in autumn about Nov. 1st, and the rain still continued and a northest rain is very chilly even when the thermometer is not low.

Vs. 3. There came a viper out of the heat from the fire already kindled and fastened on his hand as he was laying his bundle on the fire. This viper is common in Europe. It is poisonous, but not deadly in Europe, but deadly in warmer climates.

Vs. 4. A murderer. They saw that Paul was a prominent prisoner, they supposed him accused of some crime. Whom....vengeance the god of vengeance, of justice, suffereth not to live. They believed in some supreme being, righteous and taking punishment against all evil doers.

Vs. 5. Shook of the beast—with composure, doubtless, as he held to the two promises of Christ concerning serpents, (Mark xvi. 18) and that Paul should preach in Rome. Paul believed in the later saying, true of our present life: "A man is immortal till his work is done."

Vs. 6. They looked when, "expected that" he would have swollen as the usual effect of a viper's bite appearing in a very short time, or fallen down dead suddenly, as sudden collapse and death ensue often from the bite of serpents, as Shakespeare describes Cleopatra: "Trembling she stood, and on the sudden dropped." No harm by the protection of his Lord. They changed their minds because only divine power could preserve him. "There is a deep truth in the expectation of these Maltese people that crime will be followed by punishment."

Vs. 7. In the same quarters. "The traditional place in Citta Vecchia where is the country residence of the present British governor. Possessions of probably, more than one estate like British nobility. Lodged us. Entertained at his home: Julius and his prisoners.

Vs. 8. Fever and of a bloody flux. Literally "with fevers and dysentery," making the case more than usually critical. Paul entered—with the knowledge preceding him of the shaking off of the viper, and prayed as he could receive the blessing only from God, and laid his hands on him as the order of Mark xvi. 18, and healed him, which would rather have been the office of Luke as the physician. But Luke had no remedies saved from shipwreck, and the moral effect was needed.

Vs. 9 Others also, "all the rest."

Vs. 10. Honored us, trying in every way to express respect and gratitude. Laded us: out of kindness and love.

Vs. 11. In a ship of Alexandria which had wisely wintered in the harbor. Whose sign or carved and painted figure at the prow.

Vs. 12. Syracuse. The famous city on the east coast of the island of Sicily.

Vs. 13. Fetched a compass, took a circuitous route. The next day passing between Scylla and Charybdis to Puteoli or the bay of Naples.

Vs. 14. Where we found brethren: confirmed by inscription in the ruins of Pompeii.

Vs. 15. From thence, by land northward.

Vs. 16. We came to Rome. Then the capitol of the civilized world, to which God would bring Paul without any cost to himself.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

Dr. Joseph Parker of London notes here three remarkable things.

1. That Paul should have healed instead of Luke. This was for the furtherance of the Gospel.

2. That the poorest should have helped the richest. "This is what sanctified poverty is always doing."

3. "The ministry was all healing and no preaching." The healing only is recorded. This was a power behind the spoken words.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Nov. 7th, 1897.

OUR INFLUENCE.

Text for the week:

None of us liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself. Rom. 14: 7.

Daily Readings:

Monday, Influence of cowards. Deut. 20: 1-8.

Tuesday. Influence of kindness. Acts 9: 36-42.

Wednesday. Influence of weakness. Gen. 3: 1-6.

Thursday. Influence of courage. Acts 27: 27-36.

Friday. Influence of holiness. Exod. 32: 25-35.

Saturday. Influence after death. Heb. 11: 1-7.

Sunday. Topic. Influence; why to get it, how to get it, how to use it. Deut. 20: 1-9; Matt. 5: 13 16.

Notes:

Webster defines influence as—"the bringing about of an effect by a gradual process; controlling power quietly exerted." It differs from authority in that this is power manifestly and positively exerted, while influence may be unrecognized either by the actor or the person acted upon. It is a subtle power flowing from one person in and upon another, so as to cause him to act or think otherwise than without this inflow he naturally would.

Influence is universal. We all have it from the tiny babe in the cradle of the miserable hut, to the most astute statesman in the palace of the king. God has so ordained. It is given as a talent for due use of which we will be held responsible to him who gave it. Why to get it? It need not take us long to answer: Because that we may thereby more efficiently glorify God and prove useful to our fellow men.

How to get it, should rather be how to increase it, seeing none are totally devoid of it. Influence may be exerted and very, very, often is, to the injury of our fellows Some men have so built upon the sinister influence acquired over their fellowmen as to prove curses to communities, or on larger scale scourges of the human race. Napoleon for a most notable example of the latter. But we do not dwell here. How to increase our influence for good we are called to consider. The most potent principle for creating and sustaining influence is Love.

"'Tis love that makes the feet
In swift obedience move."

And so whatever induces love to God or to man will increase our influence for good. We must love those with whom we associate if we would increase our influence over them and render them ready to act or think as we desire. The child is influenced by the parent, the pupil by the teacher, the flock by the pastor, just in proportion as this grace flows in upon the person to be affected. Love that bears its fruit in kindliness of word and deed is an all-potent factor in creating, maintaining and increasing influence. But love is not the only constituent in the matter of influence. All men are influenced by the integrity of character of those with whom they associate, or those who are in authority over them. Sincerity is a power here. We trust those, as to their teachings, who we believe to be entirely sincere and perfectly reliable and our opinions and acts are largely influenced by them. A good Christian character formed by close communion with Christ, answers most fully and completely the question how to increase our influence for good.

And the foregoing answered: Why and How to get influence, the question How to use it is plain enough. In doing God's will as it becomes plain to us in advancing the kingdom of Christ upon earth; in words of kindness and in deeds of love to those around us—thereby adorning the doctrine of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

THE PRESBYTERIAN HIGH SCHOOL.

The work of the Presbyterian High School, located at Rock Hill, S. C., is progressing very successfully. The enrollment is larger than ever before, and the studiousness, deportment and home-like life of the boys are winning friends for the institution.

Dr. J. H Thornwell, of Fort Mill, S. C., speaks of the school as follows:

"What a fine looking set of boys and how well behaved. Why, just think of it, sixty-five boys at a reception and not a slang word heard, no boisterous laughter, not a cigarette on the ground. What refined and cultured homes these must come from! * * * These boys have certainly fallen into good hands Messrs. Banks and Barnes have quite a reputation for Christian scholarship, while their wives are equally cultured Christian women, and any young man entrusted to their care will be tenderly watched over. The parents may be assured that their boys are in the best of hands."

EDUCATION.

The last General Assembly instructed our Executive Committee of Education for the ministry to ask for $30,000 with which to carry on this work during the year 1897-'98. November and April are set apart by the Assembly for collections for this cause. We need every cent of the above sum. We have no endowment. The disbursements of each year exhaust the receipts. We are, therefore, entirely dependent upon God's people for the money with which to aid our young in their preparation for the ministry. We are enrolling candidates as they are recommended to us by their Presbyteries, and we are hoping the liberality of our Church will enable us to give them the amounts we promise them.

Dear brethren, these young men are your candidates. They are to be your future ministers. They need to be aided, in part, by your means. You are the Lord's stewards entrusted with some of His goods. We ask you, in His name, to aid his servants in their preparation for His service.

FOR THE FAMILY.

GOD KNOWS.

I cannot think but God must know
About the thing I long for so;
I know He is so good, so kind,
I cannot think but He will find
Some way to help, some way to show
Me to the thing I long for so.

I stretch my hand, it lies so near;
It looks so sweet, it looks so dear.
"Dear Lord," I pray, "O let me know
If it is wrong to want it so?"
He only smiles, He does not speak;
My heart grows weaker and more weak,
With looking at the thing so dear,
Which lies so far, and yet so near.

Now, Lord, I lay at Thy loved feet,
This thing which looks so near, so sweet;
I will not seek, I will not long—
I almost fear I have been wrong;
I'll go and work the harder, Lord,
And wait, till by some loud, clear word,
Thou callest me to Thy loved feet,
To take this thing so dear, so sweet.

ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING.

A correspondent of The Baltimore Sun writing from Florence says:

"Yesterday afternoon, while an Italian sun was gliding the high tops of the funereal cypress trees that grow in the old disused Protestant Cemetery of Florence, I wandered along the narrow paths between the memorials of the remembered dead, until I reached the mausoleum of Elizabeth Barrett Browning, and plucked, for memory's sake, one of the crimson flowers that grow around the tomb.

From the wall of the house in which Mrs. Browning lived in the Via Maggio, to the grave in which she lies is not a very long distance, yet these points possess a wonderful interest to the people who speak the English tongue.

One of the voices that speak from eloquent marble slabs, in the shape of incriptions, set into the walls of Florence, announces to those who visit the Via Maggio that there Elizabeth Barrett Browning lived and dled. On the front of the house, No. 9, is the Italian inscription composed by Niccolo Tommaseo, which says: "Here wrote and died Elizabeth Barrett Browning, in whose woman's heart the science of a scholar and the spirit of a poet met in harmony, and who made her verse a golden ring between Italy and England. Grateful Florence placed here this memorial in 1861."

The writer thus affectionately commemorated was one of the greatest female poets. She was born at Hope End, near Ledbury, in 1805, and was the daughter of a wealthy merchant. Her first work, "The Battle of Marathon," was written when she was fourteen years of age, and her first volume of poetry was published three years later. She belongs so nearly to our days, both in years and in the spirit of her poetry, that all which concerns her has more than an ordinary interest.

The personal appearance of this woman, who seemed to be all soul, is known to the people of to-day from the numerous accounts of her which have been written.

Perhaps the clearest and most vivid of these is that which the late Nathaniel Hawthorne has left us, when he tells of a visit he paid the Brownings in their Florentine home, the Casa Guidu.

"Mrs. Browning met us at the door of the drawing room and greeted us most kindly," he says: "a pale, small person, scarcely embodied at all: at any rate, only substantial enough to put forth her slender fingers to be grasped, and to speak with a shrill, yet sweet, tenuity of voice. Really, I do not see how Mr. Browning can suppose that he has an earthly wife any more than an earthly child; both are of the elfin race, and will flit away from him some day when he least thinks of it. She is a good and kind fairy, however, and sweetly disposed toward the human race, although only remotely akin to it. It is wonderful to see how small she is, how pale her cheeks, how bright and dark her eyes. There is not such another figure in the world, and her black ringlets cluster down into her neck and make her face look the whiter by their sable profusion."

The admirable word-picture of her as she looked to the outward eye is borne out by the portraits of her which I saw ten days ago in the Rezzonico, now Browning Palace, in Venice.

Her tomb, a beautiful white marble sarcophagus, designed by the late Sir Frederick Leighton, while he was a comparatively unknown young painter in Florence, has the medallion head of a Muse in low relief, and beneath it the initials E. B B, followed by the Latin abbreviation of obit—OB., 1861.

On the left end of the sarcophagus is carved a lyre, with two masks as its ornament, and with laurel branches surrounding it. On the back is a psaltery, on which hangs a broken chain, the whole surrounded by roses.

On the right end of this sarcophagus, that stands upon eight pretty little low columns, is another lyre, with a cross behind it, the whole surrounded by stars.

The monument is, in its way, the most artistically beautiful in the cemetery.

In New York a short while ago a baby was born in jail. Its mother was being tried for murder. Every womanly heart gives a throb of sympathy at thought of the blight upon the poor little baby's life. But a baby need not be born in jail to be unfortunate. Any baby which is not welcomed into this world with loving hearts and ready hands is unfortunate. Any mother who is physically weak and incapable of bestowing a healthy constitution upon her baby may darken its future with weakness and disease.

A prospective mother ought to insure her baby's welfare by every means that Nature and science afford to keep her physical powers up to the very highest point.

Every expectant mother ought to know and avail herself of the strengthening and re-enforcing properties of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It gives health and endurance to the delicate organs concerned in motherhood. Taken early during the period of expectancy, it makes the coming of baby perfectly safe and comparatively easy. It makes the mother strong and cheerful, and gives health and natural vigor to the child.

It is the only medicine of its kind devised for weak and delicate women by an educated, experienced physician.

For nearly 30 years Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y. His thousand-page illustrated book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" contains advice and suggestions which every woman ought to read. A paper-bound copy will be sent absolutely free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. Cloth-bound for 31 stamps.

A sure and permanent cure for constipation is Dr. Pierce's Pellets. One "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, two a mild cathartic.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

BY ROCKAWAY RIVER TO BEDFORD TOWN.

Every day when the sun goes down,
The babies are off to Bedford town;
All of the little folks, grave or gay,
Down by the river of Rockaway.
A mother's lap is each bonnie boat;
The Lullaby Lady will set it afloat;
Little elf Lazylid pushes from shore,
Good Fairy Dreams lends her aid at the oar;
Nod, nod goes each weary young crown,
And its all aboard for Bedford town,
Rock, rock, they ride over the billows;
Sleep, sleep, mother-arms are the pillows;
Glide, glide o'er the rippling tide,
As the eyelids drop and the dimples hide;
Swing, swing, while the mother shall sing
Of lambs in the meadow, of birds on the wing;
The stars light their lanterns afar in the sky,
Each tired little daisy-bud closes its eye,
While the babies, steadily drifting down,
Drop into the harbor of Bedford town.

TRUSTFULNESS OF CHILDREN.

MRS. P. T. P.

"Come children, let us repeat our verses before you go to sleep" said Grandma P. Four little voices joined in repeating the beautiful Shepherd Psalm until they reached the last clause of the fourth verse, when three years old Minna asked, "Gamma, what does they comfort me mean?

"Do you remember when you hurt yourself how mother and grandma took you in their arms, kissed you, and comforted you? When we are sick, or so sorry for doing naughty things, and tell Jesus about it He puts His arm round us, and comforts us, we can't see Him, but we feel Him in our hearts."

"Oh yes! I know, 'cause when I gweamed (dreamed) a bad gweam and was so scared last night, I asked Jesus not to let it hurt me, and He put His arm round me, and I wasn't scared and went to sleep again.

At the last clause of the fifth verse the little questioner asked, "What does my cup runneth over mean?"

"You know how your cup of milk ran over when I filled it so full at breakfast this morning?"

"Yes'm, I dwinked it all up, and you filled it again."

"God gives us so many nice vegetables and so much fruit, and when we eat them all up, He gives us more." Yes'm; what does "goodness and mercy mean?"

"All the good things God has given us all our lives, dear Jesus to die for us, father and mother, sisters and brothers, homes, eyes and ears, hands and feet, all to use for Him, instead of being blind and deaf, or crippled, as so many others are. I can't tell all."

A few days later, little M. and her brother were busy at their rainy-day amusement, building houses with dining-room chairs turned down. When they would not stay fixed Lewis said, "Minna, you must get me a squing (string) to tie these chairs together so they can't fall down."

"I can't find one any where."

"Well, ask Jesus for one, and He'll give to you."

Down went the little girl upon her knees saying, "Dear Jesus, please give us a squing to tie up our chair house with, 'cause it will keep falling down."

Other ears heard the prayer, and she found the string by her side.

"Now!" said Lewis, "I told you Jesus would give you a squing if you asked Him! Thank you Jesus, for this squing."

How often the little ones reprove their elders by their questions and undoubting trust in God.

Oh for the simple faith of a little child!

ONE OF GOD'S LITTLE MINISTERS.

One night when a family were all gathered around the fire a little girl looked up and said: "Papa, why does everybody like Eva, our neighbor's little girl? She has a weak back, and can't play like the rest of us, and isn't often at school, and yet everybody likes her. How's that?"

"Why," said her father, "look at that lamp. It is a very frail thing, and doen't make any noise, yet it makes this room very bright and pleasant, does it uot? The lamp gives light; little Eva gives love and that is why people love her."

Yes, that was it; Eva was always "ministering before the Lord," for they who love do always that. Won't you try, each of you, to be one of God's little ministers.—Our Young Folks.

WHILE YOU ARE YET GROWING.

Growing girls and boys do not always appreciate that it is while they are growing that they are forming their figures for after life. Drooping the shoulders a little more every day, drooping the head as one walks, standing unevenly, so that one hip sinks more than the other—all these defects, easily corrected now, will be five times as hard in five years, and twenty-five times as hard in ten years. A graceful, easy carriage and an erect, straight figure are a pleasure to beholder and possessor, and are worth striving for.

An easy way to practice walking well is to start out right. Just before you leave the house walk up to the wall and see that your toes, chest and nose touch it at once; then in that attitude walk away. Keep your head up and your chest out, and your shoulders and back will take care of themselves.

A southern school teacher used to instruct her pupils to walk always as if trying to look over the top of an imaginary carriage just in front of them. It was good advice, for it kept the head raised. Don't think these things are of no value. They add to your health and your attractiveness, two things to which everybody should pay heed.—New York Times.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Presbyterian: I am thirteen years old. My father died when I was about six years old. I was the first boy to come to the Home after it was moved to Barium Springs. Clinton Panell, Vaun Elliot and myself are in together with rabbit hollows this year. We have caught ten rabbits. Mr. C. H. Sterling from Washington, N. C., sent us a large box of fish to-day. We had some of them for supper, they were mighty nice. I went to Charlotte this summer to see my uncle. I am one of the farming boys this year. We get ten minutes every night at study hour to read our Bibles. We can play Friday night and Saturday night. Two of the boys caught an opossum, they are trying to keep him. We have a big sweet potato patch this year. We have twenty-five hogs.

is probably incorrect in some particulars, as changes were made not noted by the temporary clerk.)

The agent of Sabbath Schools (Wharton) and chairman of Home Missions (Morton) were directed to co-operate, and as soon as practicable, put a Sunday-school missionary in the Presbyterial field.

The report on minute of the General Assembly called attention to numerous recommendations of that body. Presbytery appointed Rev Dr Leyburn, Rev Mr Morton, J B Sparrow, T B Daniel and Judge Howard a committee to consider and report at the spring meeting on the overture sent down to the Presbyteries, for adoption or rejection, touching certain changes in the Book of Discipline.

Report on Colored Evangelization was heard and recommendations adopted.

1. That pastors and sessions be urged to use all diligence to have the cause presented to their people, and that earnest effort be made to have every church raise at least the amount apportioned to it for this cause.

2. That pastors endeavor diligently as far as practicable to preach more frequently to the colored people within their reach.

The treasurer made a statement of the funds in hand and of disbursements since last meeting, which was approved.

The commissioners to the General Assembly, Rev Mr Walker and Judge Howard, reported attendance and their diligence was commended. Presbytery by vote changed the Standing Rule so as to permit of nominations of commissioners at the fall meeting, and the Rev Messrs Morton and Johnston, and Ruling Elders Jno Webb and J M B Hunt were nominated for election at the spring meeting.

Tarboro was chosen as the place, and Tuesday, after the second Sabbath in April next, at 7.30 p. m., (April 12th) as the time of the next stated meeting.

A copious resolution of thanks was adopted unanimously by rising vote, noting the gracious hospitalities of the good people of Littleton, the large and constant attendance on the preaching, and the meetings of the court, and especially the courtesies extended by the President and Faculty and students of the Littleton Female College.

Adjourned to meet in Henderson, October 30th, at 7.30 p. m.

SAY SOME.

"It is kind o'curious," said the thoughtful stranger, "that the Cubans should be scouring the country, while the Spaniards are making a clean sweep of everything; and yet there are no brushes between them."—The Ram's Horn.

Lady (after going over the whole stock of blankets)—You needn't show me any more, I only came in to look for a friend with whom I had an appointment here. Perspiring Clerk (politely)—If you think your friend is among the blankets, madam, I shall be happy to go over them again for you.

A process has recently been perfected by which thin sheets of absolutely transparent celluloid are silvered similarly to the process formerly used on glass. Such a plate of celluloid is covered with silver on the back, and another celluloid plate is fastened on the back of the mirror thus formed. This naturally form another mirror, so that the value of the celluloid mirror is enhanced by being equally perfect on either side, making it a double looking-glass.

THINGS USEFUL.

A good remedy for the toothache is to mix salt and pulverized alum in equal parts, and apply on a piece of moistened cotton to the cavity of the tooth.

Pumpkin Pie.—One quart bowl of stewed pumpkin, four eggs, one cut of sugar, two tablespoons of ground ginger, one tablespoon of corn starch, one salt-spoon of salt, two teaspoons of cinnamon, five cups of milk. If not sweet enough to suit the taste, add more sugar.

Fresh stains upon wall paper, where people have rested their heads, can be removed by covering the spot with a mixture of pipe clay and water, made into a soft paste, and letting it remain over night. Then brush it off with a stiff whisk broom.

Pecan Macaroons.—Four eggs, one scant pint of flour, one scant pint of sugar, one pint of chopped pecans. Beat eggs separately, mixing yolks, sugar and flour, fold beaten whites into the mixture, adding nuts last. Drop from a spoon into a buttered baking-pan; put a whole pecan into the middle of each.

Scotch Scopes.—One quart of flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls of yeast powder: one tablespoonful of sugar, one teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of lard, two beaten eggs and a pint of sweet milk. Bake in muffin rings in a hot oven. These are to be eaten hot, with butter.

Pure Cream for Invalids.—Pure cream is an exceedingly valuable food. For invalids and delicate people, it is especially good, for it is at once nutritious and productive of animal heat and strength. Sweet, pure cream is highly recommended for people who are inclined to consumption, who have weak digestive organs, suffer from chilliness and are aged and infirm. One authority says it is better than cod liver oil for the permanent cure of consumption.

Flour, Meat, Sugar, Salt, Meal, Molasses, Coffee, Peanuts, Cheese, Crackers, Snuff, Tobacco.

HYMN.

Lord, Thou hast led us as of old
Thine arm led forth the chosen race
Through foes that raged, through floods that rolled,
To Canaan's far-off dwelling place.

Here is Thy bounteous table spread,
Thy manna falls on every field,
Thy grace our hungering souls hath fed,
Thy might hath been our spear and shield.

Lift high Thy buckler, Lord of Hosts!
Guard Thou Thy servants, sons and sires,
While on the godless heathen coasts
They light Thine Israel's altar fires.

The savage wilderness remote
Shall hear Thy works and wonders sung;
So from the rock that Moses smote
The fountain of the desert sprung.

Soon shall the slumbering morn awake,
From wandering stars of error freed,
When Christ the bread of heaven shall break
For saints that own a common creed.

The walls that fence His flocks apart
Shall crack and crumble in decay,
And every tongue and every heart
Shall welcome in the new born day.

Then shall His glorious Church rejoice
His word of promise, to recall—
On sheltering fold one Shepherd's voice,
One God and Father over all.

REV. BENJAMIN FRANKLIN MARABLE, D. D.

It is not practicable within limited space to furnish a sketch which would rightly and adequately set forth the noble Christian character, or do justice to the admirable graces and extraordinary gifts of him who was by universal acknowledgment one of the wisest and most eminent ministers of our Church.

He was born in 1832, in Halifax county, Virginia. One who knew him well in the days of youth says of him: "His father, a quiet, reticent man, was a prosperous farmer of independent fortune. His mother, a singularly sweet spirited and gentle Christian woman, whose character and temperament he seemed to have inherited, died before he reached manhood, but he bore through life the impress of her training and influence. On the farm among the hills of that beautiful and healthful region his childhood and youth were spent." He was converted to God in early youth and united with the Baptist church. In his theological course at Wake Forest College he was not distinguished for laborious habits though he was faithful in this as in all other duties. In the religious and social life of the college he was prominent. The gifts which afterwards became so conspicuous made him easily the peer of the brightest of his college mates, though they did not foreshadow the service which they would enable him to render in the Master's kingdom. As valedictorian he graduated in June, 1855, and the next day married Miss Jennie Davidson, of Charlotte, N.C. His theological studies which he further pursued in the Seminary at Greenville, S. C., were cut short by the failing health of his wife. She died in the spring of 1857. Leaving South Carolina he settled in Sampson county, as pastor of some country churches, and while here he married Miss Amelia McDougald youngest daughter of the late William Faison.

In 1864, Mr. Marable became a Presbyterian. The change wrought in his views on the subject of baptism and of church order was the result of a long and painful struggle. To the end of life he was always markedly tolerant to those who differed with him, holding that no religious denomination held exclusively the truth on matters of faith and order. Yet he supported the principles he avowed most manfully. His ministry in the Presbyterian fold was spent mainly in Sampson and Duplin counties, Spring Vail (afterwards removed to Warsaw), Clinton, Mount Olive, Oak Plain and Black River chapel had his ministrations, and Goldsboro was served some three years—1876-1879. He was pastor of the Clinton church several years longer, probably, than anywhere else. In 1880, he took charge of the church at Mt. Olive and this church with Clinton formed his pastorate at the time of his death. His wife having died, in 1863, he married Miss Octavia, a daughter of the late Col. Thomas I. Faison.

On the week preceding his death Dr. Marable attended the meeting of Wilmington Presbytery. He had been for over twenty years in infirm health, though he had borne up marvellously. On this occasion he was much more than usually enfeebled. Still he was interested as was his wont in the proceedings and a sermon preached the night after the adjournment showed no abatment in originality of thought or otherwise of intellectual power. He did not live to reach home. From physical exhaustion he stopped over at the hospitable home of Dr. D. McL. Graham, at Wallace, and there early on Thursday morning of April 14th, 1892, calmly and painlessly he passed to his reward.

From whatever point of view we regard Dr. Marable he was a remarkable man. He was notably an independent and original thinker, and possessed the very rare power of throwing off everything irrelevant to the subject of his thought and so advancing by steps most steady and most true to conclusions adequate and just. He wasted no words, yet his statements of reasoning or of fact were never marred by curtailment. His sentences were concise yet luminously clear and always telling. It was his wont never to enter upon debate until the question had been thoroughly discussed, then he appeared and by his masterful powers of analysis and his ability to concentrate thought and project it to its proper end he seldom failed in carrying conviction to those who heard him. But this was not his greatest merit, it was in the preaching of the Gospel that he loved that he was pre-eminently eloquent and forceful. A co-presbyter writing of him after his decease had this to say: "Dr. Marable added to his analytical and logical powers a loftiness of conception that came from a lofty soul and that lent a glow of fire to all that he said. He was not only a man of great intellect, but a man of great heart, and the heart warmed the sermons that the intellect created. He thought great thoughts about God and eternity, about sin and retribution, about grace and redemption, but these great thoughts were not the speculations of the mind, nor the imaginations of fancy, but the teachings of the Holy Spirit to a soul that was truly humble because its thoughts and aspirations were turned upward to that which was greater than itself. He received the things of God with the faith of a little child. And while his intellect cut through the shallow sophistries that were urged against Divine truth and revelation, yet when it came to that which was above the grasp of human comprehension, he simply wondered and adored."

Dr. Marable's insight into human nature was rare indeed. By questions always kind and courteous, or by leadings into full free speech he traversed those with whom he conversed as with a search light, and knew them often far better than they could know themselves. But he never abused the great power thus given him; he used it so far and only so far as was right and proper in the work that was given him to do.

This sketch closes with the tribute of one whom he was instrumental in bringing into the ministry—one who knew him and loved him well.

"Though physically weak Dr. Marable was every inch a man; Dignified and courteous, though at times absent-minded, he was sincere and kind, entirely devoid of the fear of man, just, perhaps, a trifle stern, and loyal to death. His mind was at once acute and comprehensive, logical and imaginative, His will-power was simply wonderful. Slow to arrive at a conclusion, he held it with great persistency. He was an upright citizen, who took an active interest in all public questions and concerns and spoke freely about them, trying always to purify public sentiment and to rectify wrong public opinion. He never paraded his religion. In the presence of God, he was as humble as the dust. Day and night God's law was his meditation."

THE TRANSFIGURATION.

Is there any part of our Saviour's life upon earth, saving His entrance upon the sphere of humanity at birth, and always the closing of His earthly work by death upon the cross that is more significant in itself and more full of thought-inducing incident and circumstance than the Transfiguration?

Matthew, Mark and Luke present it in terms so nearly identical as to leave no doubt of the fact itself and of the truth of the narration, and yet each adds to the other a statement, an unpremeditated phrase, a single word or two, that illumines the picture or stimulates the imagination. Well may the soul of the follower of Christ swell with rapture as he meditates upon it. One writer regards it as an induction into that sphere of Christ's work which was to culminate on the cross, and there is marked pertinence in this view. The baptism of Christ was an induction upon His sphere of teaching and training, and of manifestation of the prophesied credentials of Messiahship; healing the sick, curing the lepers, giving sight to the blind, causing the lame to walk and the deaf to hear and preaching the Gospel to the poor. Though this part of the work was not yet completed, for many miracles and parables were yet to come, a crisis had been reached, a fullness of time had come for preparation for the last sad scene and what should come thereafter, when the disciples were to be strengthened for that trial of their faith which would withstand the agony of Gethsemane, and the seeming failure involved in the ignominious and shameful and excruciatingly fearful death upon the cross. Peter, indeed, failed at the moment of opportunity to stand the test of the cross, but may it not have been that the very look His Lord extended him revived the recollection of this scene; certainly it was vividly before him when late in life he indicted his epistle for the comforting and strengthening of those who had obtained like precious faith with him. May it not have been this experience which, though they all deserted Christ on the cross, still held John as a witness there?

These thoughts may be considered fanciful, but a parallelism between the baptismal scene and that of the transfiguration is established and confirmed by the voice from heaven, in each, attesting, "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased"—the command being added in the latter: "Hear ye Him."

Did Jesus need the strength to be received from this beatific digression in the course of His humiliation? It would seem so. The need to the disciples has been considered. But Jesus in His earthly state partook of our weaknesses; necessarily so to the perfection of His humanity and that He might in this regard be touched with a feeling of our infirmities. The shadow of the cross lay upon Him from the cradle to the grave. How prominent it must have been to His mind when He declined to give any sign, to those who asked for proof of His Messiahship, but the sign of the prophet Jonas, and how, growing daily in intensity as the fearful tragedy drew on, it must have been deepened and darkened when he needs must call Moses and Elias from heaven to discuss with Him "the decease which He should accomplish at Jerusalem." On the mount he prayed and it was his wont to gather to Himself strength for His duties and trials by appealing to the Father in prayer. When in the wilderness tempted the angels came and ministered unto Him and in dark Gethsemane there appeared an angel unto Him from heaven strengthening him.

The Transfiguration reveals Christ to us as the God-man. God in humanity, for though when Christ was clothed in glory the irradiance was God-like, the form still was human. The fashion only of His countenance was altered, His form was not changed; the face that was wont to be clouded with sorrow, now did shine as the sun and His raiment was white as snow. How blessedly this incident in our Saviour's life realizes to us the teaching that Christ still not only is God, but man, in two distinct natures and one person forever.

And His tenderness to His disciples even in this hour of his glorification how comforting to poor weak mortals all and everywhere. Peter and James and John, chosen and preferred above their brethren to attend their Saviour, amid this august scene were heavy with sleep, even as soon thereafter when overwhelmed with dread and anxiety they could not watch one hour. We may not regard them with sentiments of pitiful reproach, for in this, alas, they only typify Christ's followers of to-day and of all time. But Jesus has no reproaches for them and when overcome with fear at the voice from the cloud they fell on their faces, He came and touched them and spoke those gracious words of reassurance, "Arise, and be not afraid." Jesus in the gentleness of His love, the same yesterday, to-day and forever!

But the scene must close, Moses representative of the law and Elias of the prophecies appear, resign their commissions into the hands of Him, in whom these are fulfilled that the Gospel may be magnified, and retire—"and when the voice was past Jesus was found alone"—"no man any more save Jesus only with themselves"—"when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man save Jesus only," these are the three accounts—neither Moses, nor Elias, none "save Jesus only"—Jesus alone but Jesus all-sufficient for them and for us, for time and for eternity. "No man save Jesus only."

THE SYNOD OF WISCONSIN took the following action on a most important subject:

A new committee was appointed to see if some plan could not be devised that would secure some religious instruction to the more than three hundred young people from Presbyterian homes now taking their course in the State University. It was shown that the instruction, in the effort to avoid having it Christian, is made really strongly anti-Christian.

THE LETTERS of Dr. George C. Worth are always interesting, but our readers will find the one in this issue unusually so.

REV. J. B. SHEARER, D. D.,

President of Davidson College.

Unanimously Elected Moderator.

THE SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA is now in session at Salisbury. The prayers of all God's people are asked that the Holy Spirit may rest upon this body and may be present in the deliberations pertaining to the welfare of the Church and the Master's kingdom.

A specially enjoyable feature and one which causes thankfulness in many hearts is the dedication of the Centre Building at Barium Springs on Thursday the 4th inst., which will be attended by the members of the Synod and their friends.

SECULAR PAPERS sometimes publish a column, or two or three columns "for Sunday Reading"—sometimes it is a sermon. The N. C. PRESBYTERIAN reverses this. It gives some selected secular reading but mostly reading of a religious character—never reading prejudicial in any way to good morals. Broadly stated this is the difference between a religious and a secular newspaper. But the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN is not only a religious newspaper it is the medium of communication for the churches, the unifying bond of the Presbyterians of North Carolina. It is not in one page, but in its entire make up a North Carolina paper. The service of the Synod of North Carolina, its churches, its ministers and its members, is that for which it was organized and established about forty years ago, and that for which it lives and labors to-day. It publishes appeals for every cause dear to the Presbyteries and the Synod and now

IT APPEALS FOR ITSELF,

That its friends will rally around it and work for its extension so as to double or treble its influence for good. It is this day serving the Synod of North Carolina in the way which no other paper is doing or can do, and it asks that this may be recognized by ministers and sessions and members and justly requited.

THE SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY in its recent sessions made the subject of Princeton Inn and its promoters a subject of considerable debate. The Committee on Temperance severely criticised those who signed the license for the Inn and proposed enjoining the Presbytery of New Brunswick to exercise such discipline as might be considered necessary in the case of Prof. Shields. This action was not taken, but in lieu of it the following resolution was adopted by a vote of 72 to 13:

"The Synod of New Jersey finds occasion to reiterate the judgment often expressed by the General Assembly and the Synod that the renting of property for the sale of intoxicants, and the signing of applications for license to sell intoxicating beverages is inconsistent with Christian character and harmful to the cause of religion, and calls the attention of all Presbyterian sessions and church members to the matter."

The rebuke is emphatic and this action with the note taken of the matter has so galled Dr. Shields that it is said he retires from the Presbyterian Church. It is to be hoped the faculty will so take it to heart as to withdraw all countenance from the Princeton Inn.

THE PUBLICITY given to the matter of departure from the teachings of our standards by Dr. Houston is greatly to be deplored. Perhaps it could not be avoided, but may it not have been, as some think, that if the Presbytery had proceeded with a view to make matters as quiet and private as possible, during the stage of inquiry and investigation great harm might have been prevented. It is useless now to regret the past. We desire to say as little as possible, but we must state that Louisville Presbytery regretfully lays the blame upon the missionary, as not having satisfactorily responded, in action and speech, to the attempt of the court to rightly dispose of the matter.

The Presbytery now distinctly expresses the opinion "that it would be unwise for Dr. Houston to return to the foreign field"—and in this apart from any other phase of the question, we doubt not the Presbytery will be sustained by the sentiment of the Church at large. The matter has not yet been fully adjudicated and an adjourned meeting of the court will be held on Friday, the 5th inst.

"THE WALDORF OF THE SLUMS" is the expressive title given to a new hotel in the hard part of New York City. The real name is Mills Model House No. 1. The intention of the founder is to furnish those whose poverty places them utterly without the reach of the comforts procurable with wealth, a place where all the conveniences and very many of the comforts of the most expensive hotel life can be had for a mere pittance.

The rates will be uniformly twenty cents a night. This will secure a private bedroom, with the privileges of rooms for reading, writing, smoking and games, a free circulating library, hot or cold baths. The hotel will do laundry work for its guests at a very low price, but for unemployed men or others desiring it, a room has been provided with tubs, hot and cold water and a drying chamber, where any one can wash his own clothes with ease and comfort. A restaurant will be conducted in connection with the hotel. Breakfast will cost 10 cents. The hotel is a handsome structure, is provided with baths, elevators, electric lights and steam heating apparatus. The main corridor, which is as elegant as any of the expensive hotels uptown, has a marble tiled floor.

Mr. Mills says the hotel will make money and is not a charity. His intention is to accommodate persons of moderate means.

It seems incredible that such a hotel can be self-supporting, yet it is most sincerely to be hoped in the interest of good morals that it may. The trouble with all such enterprises is that in the main for the people of the slums refinements and conveniences absolutely essential to persons of correct taste have no attractions. The disgusting stench of the back room of a saloon they count far preferable to the elegance and comfort of the palace of the millionaire. Along with opportunities of refined enjoyment must go the means for correcting and purifying the moral dispositions and tastes if success is to be attained.

STAR BINDER

is a most desirable article to have in any household where the PRESBYTERIAN is taken. It holds the successive issues together in most convenient form, costs no labor and requires no special pains in its adjustment. What a fine Synodical Album a year's gathering would thus constitute!

*A VISIT TO NIKKO AND KARUIZAWA.

After eleven hours on the train, including four changes of cars and several short waits we reached the town of Nikko. It is about 2,000 feet above the sea. Several miles before reaching Nikko we sighted the famous avenue of cryptomeria trees that leads for twenty miles to the tomb of the greatest hero that Japan has ever produced. His tomb is the central point of interest at Nikko. This avenue is about 30 feet wide and the trees are from one and a half feet in diameter to four or five feet, and are about eighty to a hundred feet high. They look somewhat like cedar trees, but are prettier. The train ran parallel to this for several miles. On reaching the town, which seems to be like most other Japanese towns, we went to a Japanese hotel (the foreign hotels are too expensive for us) and secured board for 50 cents (gold) per day. We had two large rooms. The partition was made of sliding screens which were removed so that we five men had one large apartment. There was no furniture and we had to sit on the floor. The floors like all of their floors were carpeted (?) with soft mats about two inches thick, so that sitting or lying on the floor was very comfortable. Our meals were brought to the room and served by a young woman. The plates or rather bowls were placed on small tables about six inches high. The meals were very good—consisting of fresh or cured mountain trout, rice, soup and some sort of vegetable. I enjoyed the novel experience very much. The next day we went to visit the magnificent temples. They are past description, the outside and inside are largely made of brass or bronze, there is wonderful carving everywhere and they are all in a magnificent tract of land that is literally full of those tremendous cryptomeria trees. I was impressed with everything, but more by the trees than anything else. After spending the forenoon among the temples we took dinner, rested for a while and then fastened on our leggings for a nine mile walk up the mountains to Lake Chuzenji. This has been called the Lake Lucerne of Japan. The road followed a fine stream of water the whole distance. We had to ascend more than 2,000 feet and as most of the ascent was in the last mile you can imagine that it was steep. The scenery was grand, mountains, waterfalls, rapids, gorges, &c. One fall is 200 feet high, a whole creek plunges over the precipice. We got a very poor view of that as the gorge was full of clouds at the time we were there. It rained very hard during the latter part of the walk so we reached the Japanese hotel at Chuzenji soaked to the skin which was partly due to the sweating that we indulged in. When we got to our double room we ordered Japanese robes for ourselves, and sat down to a hot supper, the principal dish being fresh salmon from the lake. The rain poured all night and up to dinner time the next day so we saw very little of the fine scenery, but we enjoyed the glorious scenery along the way back. The following day we returned to Karuizawa. On the following Monday we were invited to join a small "stag" party to climb the great volcano. This is the great undertaking of all the visitors who come to Karuizawa. It is about seven miles to the foot of the mountain though you would never dream that the distance was so great. The party consisted of Mr. Peery (Lutheran Mission), Mr. Van Dorn, Mr. McGinnis, Mr. Blain, Mr. Hudson, Lacy and I. All of us from China except the first two.

The ascent is nearly always made at night because nearly every one wishes to get a glimpse of the fires that sometimes give a deep red glow to the interior of the crater. Then nearly all want to get a view of the sun rise from the summit. This mountain is about 2,000 feet higher than Mt. Mitchell so you can imagine that it is no mole hill. We gathered near the horse stables in the village, each one carrying an overcoat or macintosh and an umbrella, also a big bundle of lunch and bottles of drinking water. The mountain is absolutely bare, looking very much like a big brown ant hill. On one side the slope is gradual until you reach the last mile of the ascent then it becomes very steep. We ascended on a steeper side and had to climb up a steep incline all the way. Lacy and I took our lunch in a fifty pound flour sack (don't think that the lunch weighed fifty pounds) for convenience. At the stable each of us mounted one of those vicious Japanese horses, all stallions, and had a guide to lead each horse. The horses are really not vicious toward human beings, but they are full of fight and many battles take place unless each one is led by a different person. Our coats and other luggage were strapped on the backs of the guides and we started off single file. The valley was covered with thick mists and occasional drops of rain alarmed us, but we kept on. After about an hour of riding on level ground we began to ascend the foot hills and gradually got above the clouds and had an almost full moon shining on our way. The scenery was grand. About twelve o'clock, after three and a half hour's riding we reached the foot of the mountain proper. Here we dismounted and packing the necessary lunch, water and coats on our four guides we started up. The ascent was very steep at first, but got better after a little while. We began the climb at 12 30 and reached the crater at 3.30. No fire could be seen, but way down in that awful hole could be heard a crackling bubbling noise like a mighty seething cauldron and clouds of smoke and steam were coming out continuously. I will never forget the sense of awe and almost fear that came over me as I stood on the brink of that crater. It was like the ideas I had always had of hell. Stifling, sulphurous vapors would occasionally blow our way and drive us off. Of course we were obliged to stand on the windward side. We rolled rocks into the crater and when they struck bottom the noise and the reverberations were like thunder. The crater is about one-fourth of a mile in diameter and is precipitous—four or five hundred feet deep.

As Lacy and I leaned against a big rock and looked over the brink he said to me "George, this is hell." Tremendous cracks in the mountain extended from the crater down one side for some distance and from some of these steam was rising. It was very cold up there and our heavy overcoats were hardly sufficient. At one place we found a hole about as large as my head and by standing over it we quickly got warmed. I have never witnessed such evidences of irresistible force, a great mountain rent and split and cracked. Down one side was an old lava bed extending many miles. It is partially grown over with stunted piner. On another side is a bed made by the eruption of a hundred years ago. It is ten miles long and triangular in shape; the apex, at the crater and the base ten miles away. The base is five miles wide. We descended the mountain and mounted our horses and rode about five miles further to the sides of this latter lava bed. Imagine an immense stream of white hot molten rock pouring out of the crater and rushing down the mountain and then cooling and breaking up into boulders of every size and shape, the mass being probably one hundred feet deep and you can form only a very indefinite idea of one of the most wonderful and impressive sights that any man ever beheld. It was grand. We were thoroughly tired out after getting home, but found that E. had provided big hot baths for us and an ice cream supper so we were soon lively again. I must not forget to mention the glorious sunrise that we enjoyed. We sat on the edge of the crater, and watched the most beautiful of sunrises. We all felt that from a material standpoint we were nearer heaven and nearer hell than ever before, poised between the two. It was a great experience.

ALTAN SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

Altan postoffice is situated seven miles from the town of Munroe in Union county. Here is the Altan school and also a Presbyterian church. There is no church building, but services are held in the large and comfortable school room. We began services there on Saturday before the third Sabbath in September and closed on the fourth Sabbath. The congregations were good considering that a number of meetings were in progress all around. The interest was also good. Eight persons were received into the communion of the church on profession of faith, three of them baptized and one or two infant baptisms. On the fourth Sabbath communion was held. The school here has a remarkable history and it is hard to estimate the good that has been done by it both for time and eternity. It was started in 1889 by Miss Eva Hotchkiss. At first she taught in a small room sixteen feet square and soon into this were crowded seventy pupils, so many, to use her expression they could do but little save fall over each other's feet. From this beginning it grew until a large comfortable building was erected which is roomy and supplied with all the modern appliances of a school. The school has also a large and well selected library. During the life of it there have been taught over 800 pupils. No year's roll shows less than 100 and two of them show 225. At one time there were thirty grown men. Thirteen of the girls have been in the Industrial and Normal School at Asheville, and last year one of them was President of the Y. W.C. A. and valedictorian of her graduating class. Fourteen of the boys have been in college in Tennessee and in other schools, and 28 have been and are teaching. One is preparing for the ministry at college and another is at the Moody school in Northfield. They are scattered over eight States and nearly all of them Christian boys and girls and Presbyterians. A Christian Endeavor Society was organized in connection with the school in 1891 and has numbered as many as 67, and a Sabbath-school has been kept up regularly since 1891, and a good one at that. These figures will give some idea of what has been accomplished as far as figures can, but they will never tell the story, and perhaps it will never be given to man to know all the good it has done until we no longer see thro a glass darkly, but face to face. That part of Union county at the time the school began had the reputation of being a wild and lawless section. Education was little prized and the chief end of man seemed to be to know how to handle a revolver successfully and get the drop on your man, or to be able to stand up under a greater amount of sheet lightning than some other man. That the people were all right at heart has been demonstrated by the result, but oh how many years of patient, self-denying toils, prayer and privation it took upon the part of Miss Eva Hotchkiss, now Mrs. Walter Belk, only those who know can realize. It has been the effort of Mrs. Belk not only to train the mind by study, but to cultivate the manners and fit her pupils for any sphere in life, and above all, and more important than all, she has taught them in the school, C. E. Society and Sabbath-school, the things which can prepare them for the life which is to come. Nowhere in the State can you find a congregation more earnest, reverential and attentive. Nowhere will you find young people more polite, pleasing and courteous in any sphere you meet them. People who knew this part of Union county ten years ago often find themselves asking the question, can it be possible that this is that part of Union county about which we knew and heard so much? A large proportion of the student brought into the church through the influence of the teachers have gone out into the world to help society and do their part in winning the world for Christ, and while they have kept the church, small in numbers, but far reaching in its influence surely it has been a kind of Christian but to be valiant soldiers of the cross. Mrs. Belk and her husband, Mr. Walter Belk, who is not only a co-laborer with her in this work, but an elder in the church taught without salary. It has been a labor of love. Often it looked as though the work must stop, but they would not give it up. And now in behalf of this noble woman and her husband I ask the prayers of God's people, and especially of Presbyterians, to remember her at a throne of grace, and if, as I verily believe, there are any people in this grand old State who want to give something to a cause that will bring forth much fruit, you can reap no greater harvest than by aiding this school. Address Mrs. Walter Belk, Altan, Union county, N. C.

WHAT IS IT?

"Oh, you have no tact." Thus somebody once said to some other body, and not in the pleasantest manner either.

What is tact? The word comes from the Latin, meanining "touch;" get in touch with a neighbor. A neighbor, or a child, suppose, is sick (ill our English friends call it), then tact is, fancy how you would feel if sick, how you would like to be treated and act accordingly—this is tact.

Fancy you were the rector of a parish; had wife and children to be supported; what would you like then? Fancy he had preached his very best, his life, too, agreeing with that nice sermon—what would you like? Treat the rector after that manner and you have tact. Tact does not mean telling lies: no, nothing of the kind.

I read not many days ago a right funny story; now your readers can read it:

"Years ago I read in an Americanized Æsop of an old elephant who accidentally trod on a partridge with fatal results. The tears came into her eyes at the sight of the motherless brood of fledgelings close by. 'Poor orphans,' quoth she, 'and I am a mother myself—I who have slain their mother. But they shall shall not perish. I will sit on them!' The elephant had the best of intentions, but she displayed a deplorable want of tact."—Southern Churchman.

THE REVIVAL WE NEED.

The revival we need is not only a revival of sounder Scriptural preaching, but a revival of true Christian living. We have had quite a surfeit of the religion which luxuriates in the devout fervors of the prayer-meeting and the camp ground, which sings sweet hymns and applauds sweet sermons, and then goes straight off to its money-grasping and its pleasure-seeking, and its panderings to self and sin. The revival which we need is a revival of the religion which keep God's commandments; which tells the truth and sticks to its promises; which pays twenty shillings to the pound; which cares more for a good character than a fine coat, which votes at the ballot-box in the same direction that it prays; which denies ungodly lusts, and which can be trusted in every stress of temptation. A revival which will sweeten our homes, and chasten our press, and purify our politics and cleanse our business and commerce from roguery and rottenness, would be a boom from heaven.—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

Be diligent, after thy power, to do dsed of love. Think nothing too little, nothing too low, to do lovingly for the sake of God.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

Rev. John Stroughton, D. D., author of a number of religions works, died in London on October 25th in his 91st year.

A book of stories for children by the late Professor Drummond, with illustrations by Louis Wain, is in preparation.

Craigenputtock, the old Dumfriesshire farmhouse, where Thomas Carlyle wrote his Sartor Resartus is still in the possession of the Carlyle family, the present occupant being a grand nephew of the famous writer.

The shaft of the monument to Robert Louis Stevenson recently unveiled in San Francisco is of California granite and is ten and a half feet high. The cap, which is also of granite, is surmounted by a bronze galleon of the sixteenth century. The vessel is represented as running before the wind with all sails set.

The very Rev. F. W. Farrar, D. D., Dean of Canterbury, in writing to the Independent of "Men That I Have Known," says of the late Thomas Hughes: I knew Judge Hughes intimately for many years. My acquaintance with him began in a letter in which I had taken the liberty to write and point out a small mistake in natural history which he had made in "Tom Brown's School Days." In his long and interesting reply he acknowledged the mistake, which was, I believe, corrected in later editions. I met him often, and he was once my guest for a fortnight at the Lodge, Marlborough College He had come down to give a lecture to the boys on his American travels. The lecture was simple and homely enough, but it was full of fresh, manly experience, and this, together with the fact that he had written "Tom Brown's School Days," interested the Marlburians immensely. During that fortnight I had many a long and interesting walk and talk with him in the beautiful forest of Savernake, and over the Downs and at Martinsell. Our conversation usually turned either upon questions of religion, which were always to him full of undying interest, or on the various social problems of the day. I had one more long walk with him at New Quay in Cornwall, over the lovely promontories, only a year before his death. Even at that late period of life he seemed to have lost none of his old vigor and freshness.

BOOKS.

Among the many attractive booklets published by the Fleming H. Revell Co., of New York, is the charming story of Ye Nexte Thynge, by Eleanor Amerman Sutphen. The title is the keynote of the story and of the happiness of the character who make it. Price thirty cents.

An Old Field School Girl, by Marion Harland, is a well told story of life in Virginia before the war. Some of the characters, especially the heroine "Flea," are very good, but we are glad to know that all school masters were not like the despotic and unworthy Mr. Taylor. The illustrations are especially good and the book is prettily bound and well gotten up. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. $1.25.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Cronly:—At the recent dedication of the church here by Rev. Dr. Hoge and Rev. A. McFadyen, Mr. D. Hand was ordained as ruling elder, the services being performed by the ministers present and Mr. John Hand.

Graham Street Church, Charlotte:—Rev. W. A. Wynne preached his first sermon as pastor-elect on last Sabbath.

Henderson:—The Lord is richly blessing the Henderson Presbyterian church. Last Sabbath morning, October 18th, just before the eleven o'clock service nine members were received on profession of faith. After the sermon there was one profession of faith. At 4 p. m., there was preaching at Bradston chapel, four miles from town, at which place there was another profession of faith. At 7.30 p. m., in our church an exceedingly interesting and helpful consecration service was conducted by two of our elders, Prof. J. A. Gilmer and Mr. Samuel Watkins. Short, pointed talks were made by other members of the church. The pastor took his seat in the congregation and quietly enjoyed the exercises. To God the praise is ascribed.

A. R. S.

At the adjourned meeting of Albemarle Presbytery—October 30th—November 1st, the matter of principal interest was the installation of Rev. A. R. Shaw as pastor of the Henderson church. The installation service was divided so as to occupy the hours both of morning and evening worship. In the morning the installation sermon was delivered in the presence of a large congregation by the Rev. Eugene Daniel, of Raleigh, from the text, "We preach Christ crucified." In the evening before an equally large assembly, the Rev. A. S. Caldwell, of Oxford, N. C., delivered the charge to the pastor, and Dr. Daniel the charge to the people. A spirit of warm brotherly love pervaded the services. The new pastor has the full affection of his charge, as was evinced by the cordial handshaking after the service.—News and Observer.

Lowell:—On the first Sabbath of October we had our regular quarterly communion at Lowell. Bro. Shields of Gastonia was with us, during the week days. His preaching was very acceptable. Had one addition. This church has decided to go back to the use of tables in the observance of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

Belmont:—The third Sabbath of October was communion at Belmont. Brother Labib B. Juerdini, from Mount Lebanon, Syria, a candidate under the care of Nashville Presbytery was with us. He lectured on the religious state and customs of his country. These were very instructive. If the way is clear he will return in the spring. It was a solemn and delightful service to sit at the Master's table, and celebrate His dying love, with one who was born and reared so near the scenes of Solomon, and of one who was greater than Solomon, even the Son of God. We had one addition.

New Hope:—At New Hope, the mother of the Lowell church, we observed the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper on the fourth Sabbath of October. Our Canadian brother Crockard, pastor of the Mulberry church, was our helper. His expository preaching was received with readiness of mind. We had two additions. We took up our offerings in each of these churches for the cause of Foreign Missions, and I am glad to say that the money depression did not effect the amount. Each church gave more than they did last year. These are our last communion seasons for this year, and I desire to express my thanks to the brethren for their kind and valuable services during the year.

Lowell, Oct. 27th, '97.

Midway:—Our fall communion was held on yesterday (fifth Sabbath). Service commenced on Wednesday previous. Brother Hugh Craig was with us the first three days, and his earnest, searching and impressive preaching was much enjoyed and highly appreciated by the congregation. On Saturday seven dear young friends, all children of the covenant, were on profession of faith in Christ received into full communion with the church. To God be all the praise.

Steele Creek:—The fall communion at this church was held on the fifth Sabbath of October. Services commenced Wednesday night with a sermon by the pastor. Thursday the Rev. John S. Shaw of Paw Creek came and preached the remaining sermons. His preaching was earnest and helpful, expounding the old doctrine of grace with power. The congregations increased from the beginning till on Sabbath the building would hardly hold the congregation. The pastor announced the names of twenty-one members received since the last communion in August.

Nutbush Church:—At the late adjourned meeting of Albemarle Presbytery the pastoral relations of Rev. W. T. Walker and this church were dissolved.

Rev. H. G. Hill, D. D, of Marion, preached in the Presbyterian church last Sunday morning and night. Dr. Hill fully sustained his reputation as an orator and thinker, and all who heard him felt that "it was good for them to have been there."—The Lumberton Robesonian.

We take pleasure in copying the following from the Lenoir Topic: The sermon by Dr. Ross of Morganton at the Presbyterian church last Friday night was one of the best we ever heard. He is a man of fine physique, big brain, sweet spirited and filled with that charity which, "thinketh no evil—is not unkind." Such preachers are indeed the very salt of these unjointed times.

The Charlotte Observer says of Rev. L. B. Jureidini who has been lecturing in Charlotte and neighboring points: Mr. Jureidini has been in this country four years. He graduated last June at Clarksville, Tenn., and is a licentiate of the Presbyterian Church. He speaks English fluently, having taught it for several years in a school in Syria, preparatory to coming abroad. As soon as he is ordained, which will be in the early spring, he will return to his native land as a missionary of the Presbyterian Church.

CONDITION OF DR. SMITH.

MR. EDITOR:—During the last week the condition of Dr. J. H. Smith, has greatly changed, and his people are prepared for the worst, at any moment. On Thursday last Drs. Sam and Harry, and also Watson were summoned, who are with him, and while his mind is often clear, yet at times he cannot give utterance to what he would like to say, and is but waiting to pass to the great beyond, for which he is ready. After the announcement in our church paper, that Dr. Egbert would preach Sunday, it was found necessary, to call on others, and from whom, in the morning, Dr. Crawford, and Dr. Ivey at night, of the M. E. Church, we had two capital sermons.

LETTER FROM DR. CHESTER.

A SIGHT OF THE WORK IN CHINA.

Two nights and a day from Shanghai by house-boat brings us to Hangchow, the oldest of our China stations. Here the wheelbarrow gives place to the bamboo pole, on other end of which a coolie will carry for two miles about four times as much as I could carry twenty steps, and for less money than the small colored boy will carry your valise for two squares. The rick-sha gives place to the Sedan Chair, in which two coolies, keeping up a continual responsive utterance exactly like the bleat of a goat, will carry you almost indefinitely for ten cents (Mexican.) But when it comes to settling with them there is always a row which the unlitiated foreigner is liable to mistake for an incipient riot.

There are between 200 and 300 miles of stone-paved streets in Hangchow, the main street being about ten feet wide and the others about eight feet. Our "Compound" is about a half acre of ground, enclosed by a high mid-wall, and on which are four dwelling houses and the building for the girls' school. Just outside is our church building, neat and comfortable, but very plain and simple, as churches should be here

Our work here is built up on safe and conservative lines from the beginning, and the church, numbering about 140 members is entirely self-supporting. The pastor, Mr. Dzen, is an able preacher and in manners and bearing a polished Chinese gentleman, though coming from the humble walks of life. When I called to see him he greeted me cordially, remarking that such visits were "hard to obtain," i. e., rare. When he asked me to preach for him I said that I was afraid I would not know how to preach to his people. He replied, "That is your politeness," Whereupon I agreed to try it, using Mr. Painter as interpreter. We have two other native preachers here, Mr. Yu, who preaches at a mission chapel at the "Great Peace Bridge," where he has gathered about thirty members, and Mr. Sang, said to be a very eloquent man, who preaches near the South Gate.

Mr. Yu has had great success among the opium smokers. He presented me the pipe of one who had given it to him together with about $5 worth of opium, after having been a smoker for over thirty years. He has now been a consistent church member for five years.

Sunday afternoon he brought his congregation in a body to call on me. They all wanted to know my age, the number of my family, and the details of my life generally. When they learned that I had four boys they remarked "Your happiness is very great," and their respect for me was evidently much enhanced.

The three congregations assembled at the Church on Sunday afternoon and I preached to them on II Tim. 1:12. After the benediction I made some farewell remarks and was formally responded to by the three preachers in turn. It was to me altogether the most solemn service I ever took part in. Our girls' school here is going a noble work, under the efficient management of Miss Davidson, who is acknowledged on all hands to be one of the most successful female workers in China. Besides the general leavening effect of such a school in the community and the general benefit of the Christian education given to the pupils, it serves two special ends of great importance. One is the furnishing of trained Bible women for the Mission, and the other is the furnishing of educated Christian wives for our native preachers.

An illustration of this last was given on Monday morning in the marriage of one of the last year's graduates to a young preacher from Nankin, of the Northern Presbyterian Mission. The couple expecting to go out immediately as Home Missionaries to the province of Anhui. I had the rare and interesting experience of attending the wedding and the feast. The ceremony was performed by the old native pastor of the Church of the Northern Presbyterians. It opened with a hymn sung to the tune "The year of Jubilee is come." The minister then read lengthily from the Scriptures and preached a sermon of about twenty minutes. Then another hymn—said to deal very minutely with the reciprocal duties of husband and wife, and then the benediction.

Then came the feast, of the following courses in about the order mentioned:

1. Tea and parched watermelon seed.
2. Fried fish, fried shrimps and roasted peanuts.
3. Sponge cake, various pastries, fried raisins and candy.
4. Stewed duck.
5. Cabbage and bacon.
6. Limed eggs, sea-slug (jelly fish) and meat balls.
7. Stewed pork.
8. Rice, pickles and fruit.

We had to taste every dish except one, to be polite. The natives overwhelmed me with attention, fishing out dainty bits of every dish with their chopsticks and piling up my one little saucer to overflowing.

At the conclusion they brought pieces of brown paper in which we were expected to wrap up and carry home all the leavings. The whole affair was thoroughly native, and for that reason the more interesting; though, on the whole, the enjoyment of this part of the occasion will be more in the recollection than it was in the actual participation.

I cannot now find time to speak of the delightful fellowship and association with all our missionaries here, who lavished kindnesses of every sort upon me and made me feel so charmingly at home during my visit. We have here what I believe it should be our aim to attain at all the points now occupied by our Mission before entering any more new ones, a strong centre, from which the Gospel seed may be carried and sown in all the villages and country round.

THE AMERICAN - BRITISH CHURCH IN LEIPZIG, GERMANY.

BY T. W. LINGLE.

To those who are accustomed to attending a regular church of their own denomination every Sunday, have a permanent pastor, and see the same congregation from year to year, all with practically the same religious belief, the above may seem like a very strange kind of church. It was first organized in the year 1874, and services have been held uninterruptedly ever since that time. Last year there was preaching every Sunday by Mr. W. M. Jack, a graduate of Lafayette College, Pa., and the winner of one of the Green Fellowships in Hebrew at Princeton Seminary in 1895. He spent one year in Old Testament study in Edinburgh and is now a student in the University of Leipzig in the department of philosophy. The church at present has a regular pastor in the person of Mr. J. E. Maxwell, a graduate of Princeton College and Seminary (1891), who has been laboring successfully in Chicago for several years.

The membership of the church is composed of students in the university and the conservatory of music, together with some families who sojourn in Leipzig while daughters are studying, from the United States and all portions of the British Empire. A common tongue brings these who hail from the most distant lands of the earth into united fellowship. All the principal denominations are represented among the membership which includes all those who are interested in religious work, "whether members of a particular church at home or not" as the constitution reads. It happens that more are from Presbyterian homes than from any others. An Executive Committee elected by the congregation controls the business and finances of the church. It must be a source of boundless pleasure to any faithful minister of the Gospel to labor among such an intelligent and refined body of young people with many zealous Christians to assist him in his work. The principal discouragement is doubtless the ever coming and going of the people, for while valuable persons are constantly coming in, those who for several years have been the life of the church return to their native country.

Last November a Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor was organized through the faithful efforts of Miss Souther, of St. Louis, and Mr. Howe, of the University of Indiana, and life and spirit were put into the movement by an early visit from that noble man of God, Dr. Francis E. Clark at the beginning of his tour of the world. It has increased regularly in membership and has been a source of great spiritual benefit to many students in Leipzig who are separated by ocean or continents from their own church home. At a recent business meeting, Mr. T. W. Lingle, formerly president of the Y. P. S. C. E., of the First Presbyterian church, Ithaca, New York, was chosen president and Mr. Longfield Smith from Edinburgh University secretary for the ensuing half year.

All services are held in City Public School Building No. 1, just in the heart of Leipzig. The city authorities very kindly donate the use of the building, heat and light, with no charges whatever. Similar churches exist in most of the great university, music and art centers of Europe, and serve to strengthen many noble students from English-speaking countries in their Christian life while far away from the religious influences of their native land.

WE ALL DO FADE AS A LEAF.

Isa. 64: 6. Extract from an evening sermon of Rev. Dr. Charles S. Robinson.

Our first lesson to learn is this: everything in this world has a life work to do. To some minds no preacher can be found more mutely eloquent than just a faded leaf fallen in the autumn. For in itself it is the sign and the proof of good, honest work faithfully done. It seems but a little while since this year began its annual career through the seasons. We marked it particularly when it started out. Young leaves and growing flowers sprang up in the pathway of each month as the pageant passed. Time had reason to believe himself a monarch, with such a train. Foliage vied with verdure in the liveliness of the green pavilion they offered to their advancing king. Then came the summer harvests; great shocks and full sheaves displayed their rich glories of grain and the vines hastened to shake away the cover from before their ripened clusters. And now the pageant draws nigher and actually gains in glory as it approaches its close. Our own ears listen to the music, the wailing of the wind, and the sighing of the forest firs. The great banners of the realm are on the walls at last and the battlements of the hills are gorgeous with purple, crimson, solferino and gold. Not a leaf has faded, not one spear of grass fallen in all this past year without having had its work set and having done it according to the issued command. Its work was the work God gave it to do, and that is the work which it has accomplished to the utmost demand of the divine approval. Ah, me, I wish each one of us could be sure this autumn that we have finished our tasks as well and as joyfully as have these leaves which the wind has drifted off as we came in.

YELLOW FEVER AND FOREIGN MISSIONS.

HOW INTERDEPENDENT WE ARE!

The plague breathes its poisonous breath on our Southland, and our beloved missionaries in the foreign fields are threatened with serious discomfort. The receipts in Treasurer's office fell off two thousand dollars in September. The Committee, while feeling some little uneasiness, looked with a buoyant hope to the collections of October, remembering the General Assembly had recommended that these collections be preceded by a week of prayer. The Committee has reason to have faith in the united prayers of the Church; for, as the result of such prayers, the churches last October, in the very darkest hour of the country's financial depression, poured ten thousand dollars more into the treasury than in any corresponding collection. The Committee had hoped for a like largeness of liberality this year, but it now seems that our hope is doomed to disappointment. At the middle of the month the receipts are four thousand short of the same period for last October, making a total falling off since the 1st of September of six thousand dollars.

This brings a minor strain into our music. We had been rejoicing with uninterrupted gratitude for many months because the tide of prosperity was steadily rising. This sudden and rapid ebb fills us with alarm. Encouraged by the last Assembly the Committee had ventured to enlarge its work. How serious the disaster, if the expectation of funds on which this enlargement was based, shall fail to be realized!

No doubt the shadow that rests on our work just now is due to the dreadful epidemic that has visited a large part of the territory from which our resources come. Where this epidemic prevails Church work is to a large extent suspended. It will be weary months before the paralyzing effect of the plague will cease. In the meantime what has the committee to do? It has obligations maturing and no money to meet them. What will the missionaries do? With their salaries in arrears, and no means of borrowing money, they must suffer.

The month of October is not over yet, and therefore I take the liberty, as Chairman of the Committee, but acting on my own responsibility, to issue this appeal. I do it because the emergency is grave.

Much embarrassment will result if speedy relief is not afforded. May I not easnestly plead with every pastor who has not taken a collection, to take one at once? Will not all church treasurers who have on hand funds for our work, send them immediately? And will not all God's people lift their hearts to God in earnest prayer that He may show them their duty to this great cause; that He may give them grace to do their duty; and that He may pour out His Spirit upon the workers at home and abroad? Beloved, there is not praying enough, and hence, not giving enough.

R. C. REED,
Chm. of the Assmbly's Com.

"WHERE IS THE REMEDY?"

In a few stirring remarks under this head in the July Missionary, our esteemed editor sounds a clarion note. He says, "It is evident that the majority of our people are not interested, at least not deeply. Of our two hundred and twenty thousand communicants, only nine thousand subscribe for their own periodical, which comes every month with the thrilling story of the progress of Christ's kingdom in the ends of the earth."

Why is it that 211,000 of our communicants, those who profess to be laborers together with Him, do not even feel enough interest in this great work to take our excellent magazine and read its soul-stirring pages? It is obvious that many, perhaps most of them, are so much engrossed with their own affairs that they have no time or thought for things "so far away." They know little or nothing of the distressing condition, and the crying needs of the perishing millions, and so of course, feel no interest in them. But this ignorance and want of interest instead of being a good excuse, is only another cause for comdemnation, for our duty to a lost world is not a question of interest, but obedience to a plain and oft-repeated command of our Master. We do not exonerate the people, we have not one excuse to offer in their favor, yet we do think that the trouble—Does not begin nor end with the people. How can they be interested in that of which they have not heard? And how can they hear unless their preachers tell them? Are our ministers themselves as much aroused as they should be upon this great subject of the evangelization of the world? They study theology, baptism, higher criticism, &c., this they ought to do, but not to leave the study of missions undone. If they were to make a study of the different heathen nations with a view to the special needs of each, acquainting themselves also with the noble pioneer missionaries whose lives are an inspiration; if they would in this way obey our Lord's command to 'behold, lift up their eyes and look upon the fields,' they would, like the great missionary Paul, feel their 'spirits stirred within them.' Then let them throw their whole heart and soul into this work, and earnestly, and perseveringly instruct their people on the subject of missions, and they will find that there will be a mighty moving among the dry anti-mission bones in their congregations. We agree with Mr. Rankin in what he says, in his note referred to above, that "No pastor can take the interest in Foreign Missions that Dr. A. J. Gordon did, and yet fail to fire the hearts of his people."

Who were the pioneer missionaries of Madagascar? They were students of the grand old Welch preacher Dr. Phillips, who had read of Madagascar and the wretched condition of her people till his soul was stirred within him that he dreamed of it at night, and so talked of it by day, that four of his pupils were led to consecrate their lives to giving the Gospel to Madagascar. How many of our ministers who are "well up" on most of the "important subjects of the day," could not tell to save them, whether Duff went to India or China! We know an excellent minister, and a Presbyterian minister who, when asked if he had seen the new edition of "Paton's Life for Boys," asked in a bewildered tone "Paton, what Paton?" "Why John G. Paton the missionary." "Missionary?" (still perplexed) "missionary where?"

Is it any wonder that the people do not know and care more about their perishing brothers and sisters, and the noble self-sacrificing missionaries who are carrying them the bread of life? An excellent missionary of the Baptist Church who, after ten years of arduous labor in Canton, China, was here in this country to regain health, told us that she had for twelve months attended regularly one of the largest Baptist churches in the city of L., and in all that year she had not heard a missionary sermon, or any instruction on the subject except once, when a visiting minister preached a sermon on missions. "Is it any wonder," she asked most feelingly, "that the people are not more interested? I think the ministers are responsible for most of the ignorance and want of interest of the people in this country upon this great work of missions." But perhaps some of our pastors will tell us that they do preach on missions once or maybe twice a year, and that some of their people even complain of that as too often. "Criticism," says Augustus Thompson in his excellent lectures on "Foreign Missions," "and want of sympathy among the people of one's charge, so far from being a reason for silence is only an argument for greater earnestness." It should only arouse a minister to more earnest and prayerful study of the subject himself, that with loving perseverance and Christlike zeal, he may so lead his people along this grand line of education that he and they will become more and more intelligent, and thus necessarily, more interested workers for missions.

Dr. Wm. Ashemore, one of the oldest missionaries in China, in an address to the ministerial brethren at home says, "If you take an interest, your church will take an interest: if you are wide awake, they will be wide awake; if you take it easy, they will take it easy; if you don't care, they don't care," (and he might have said, if you are uninformed on this subject they will be uniformed). How can it be otherwise? A stream never rises higher than its source. * * * Now pastors if you take a high ground, you will be sure to lift up your Church."

Oh! then, dear brethren, in view of these things, is it not time that you arouse yourselves? "Play no longer with missions," but look this matter squarely in the face, and see if, in the sight of God who sent you to "preach the Gospel to all nations," you can say that you are "free from the blood of all men."

THE AIM OF COMFORT.

Comfort is a word which in its common use has lost something of its original robustness. Comfort is regarded as something which calms the agitated and storm-swept heart. It is regarded as soothing, rather than stimulating; but in its true meaning, comfort is something much nobler than the mere consoling of the troubled spirit. No doubt the mother comforts the child when she takes the little weeping one on her knees and kisses away his tears as he lies in her soft, warm, sheltering arms. There is something analogous to this in divine comfort: "As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort thee." But the outlook of the Divine Comforter is even wider than this imagery suggests. With the earthly mother, pity and distress for the child's distress prompt her to embrace the crying child. With the divine comfort, there is always the look beyond the sorrow of the passing hour. There is the desire to fortify as well as to console, to strengthen the heart as well as assuage the grief, to put the soul in the way of a victory over sorrow, rather than in the way of escape from it. In all the divine comfort, there is a ministry of power to bear as well as consolation because of trouble. The divine Comforter binds up the broken in heart, but he seeks also to make the spirit brave to endure.

There is a bracing energy about divine comfort, then, which lifts it into a higher range than the mere pale, negative soothing of soul which is commonly associated with the word. True comfort brings fresh courage to the soul. It stimulates, arouses, invigorates, besides consoling the sorrowing heart.—Bishop Carpenter, in Sunday Magazine.

Fourth Quarter—Lesson VII.

Nov 14th, 1897.—Acts xxviii: 17-31.

Commit to memory verses 3-5.

Subject.—Paul's Ministry in Rome.

Golden Text. "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." Rom. 1: 16.

CATECHISM.

Question 66. What is the reason annexed to the fifth commandment?

Answer. The reason annexed to the fifth commandment is a promise of long life and prosperity (as far as it shall serve for God's glory and their own good), to all such as keep this commandment.

Time. A. D., 61-63.

Place. Rome.

INTRODUCTORY.

Paul reaches Rome by a long and circuitous route and in perils of land and sea. But God brought him to the capital city and the centre of an empire which extended from the Atlantic on the west through Europe and on the east to the banks of the Euphrates in Asia. It reached from the Rhine and Danube on the north to the Sahara and the cataracts of the Nile in Africa and the desert of Arabia to the east. The population of the empire was 120,000,000 scattered throughout the known world. The city was at the height of its glory and extended beyond its walls. It was the boast of Augustus that he found a city of brick and left one of marble. It had been enriched with the spoils of many conquered nations, and on every hand was luxury with its attendant vices. The arts were cultivated as never before. But religion was wholly divorced from morality and virtue was predominantly physical rather than moral courage and spiritual strength. The real condition is described in the first chapter of Paul's letter to the Romans. Nero was the emperor. Paul the prisoner was permitted to dwell by himself under continual guard of a soldier, in his own hired house, and to preach the Gospel as much as he pleased.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 17. After three days. From the time of his arrival and probably spent with Christians at Rome securing a lodging and refreshing himself after his journey. Chief of the Jews. Probably those not Christians, rulers of the synagogue and leaders of the people. The Jewish colony in Rome was large and dwelt in a quarter of the city beyond the Tiber. Paul's object was to gain the Jews. He wished to explain how it was he came to Rome, and to preach the Gospel to them.

Vs. 18. Would have let me go. R. V., "desired to set me at liberty," meaning Felix, Festus and Agrippa, especially the last two, the Roman governor and the Jewish king who had, so unwillingly, sent him to Rome to be judged, on his appeal to Cæsar, before the imperial tribunal.

Vs. 19. I was constrained to appeal to Cæsar. To get justice and to escape the unfair treatment. He was anxious to show that he had nothing to accuse his people of, that he was not an enemy to them or to their religious beliefs. He rather asserts: (Vs. 20) because that for the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain. Meaning the Messiah.

Vs. 20. Have I called for you. Is better in the R. V., "did I entreat you to see and speak with me." It was his unqualified belief in Jesus as the Messiah, which was the cause of all his suffering including the chain that bound him.

Vs. 21. Neither received letters. Nor messengers. The reply was more courteous than true, as no official communication had been sent, but his treatment showed their reply was hollow.

Vs. 22. This sect .... everywhere .... spoken against. Was a slanderous statement as far as the success of the Gospel was concerned, but true as to the prejudice of the Jews. It arose from Paul's seeming opposition to the Jewish ritual, from the strict morality of the Christians which made enemies from their opposition to some Roman laws, the misinterpretation of their use of the Lord's Supper, and the misuse of the fact that the Founder of their faith, who fulfilled the law, was crucified.

Vs. 23. To his lodging. His hired house, in great numbers, either more than at first, or more than the apostle had expected. He expounded. Reasoned and showed from the Scriptures the foundations of the Christian faith. Testified: Bore witness of his own knowledge and experience. The law... and the prophets. The body of the Scriptures which the Jews accepted as of authority.

Vs. 24. Some believed. Not the usual word for belief, but rather "were convinced." The number who rejected the Gospel was evidently greater than those who were convinced, and Paul would thenceforward turn his attention to the Gentiles.

Vs. 25. One word. Not denouncing them, but to show the prophecy fulfilled that they might see their error. Esaias is Isaiah. Spake the Holy Ghost by, showing that the prophet was inspired.

Vs. 26. Hearing.....in no wise understand. Indicates that the failure to believe was due to a resolution not to see.

Vs. 27. Waxed gross. Became hard. Eyes have they closed. Unwilling to see the truth.

Vs. 28. Therefore. As ye will not hear and the Gospel must be preached, I will go to the Gentiles, and they will hear it.

Vs. 29. Had great reasonings. About what Paul had taught.

Vs. 30. Two whole years. Until released by the emperor.

Vs. 31. No man forbidding him. Literally "without hindrance."

PRACTICAL POINTS.

1. The best things spoken against evil things or interfering with them, will be opposed.

2. Two results follow the preaching of the Word, some will accept, some oppose.

3. God will have the Gospel preached to all men, that all may be saved or refuse the salvation.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Nov. 14th, 1897.

SERVING GOD.

Text for the week:

Serve Him with a perfect heart and with a willing mind. 1 Chron. 28: 9.

Daily Readings:

Monday, In Heaven, Rev. 22: 1-9.

Tuesday, A Reasonable Service, Rom 12: 1-8.

Wednesday, Fickle Service, Rev. 2: 1-7.

Thursday, Tested Service, Rev. 2: 7-18.

Friday, Half-hearted Service, Rev. 3: 14-22.

Saturday, Faithful Service, Rev. 3: 7-13.

Sunday, Topic, The Blessedness of Serving God. Deut. 28: 1-20, 45-47.

Notes:

"No man can serve two masters"—but every man inevitably does and will serve one. God, or Satan—to which do you cling?

How shall we serve God? Serve Him intelligently, that we may serve Him wisely and acceptably. We must know Him as perfectly holy, just and true that we may rightly know what is His will and that we may be prepared to do it. Know Him and His will as they are revealed to us in the Scriptures. The Scriptures principally teach what man is to believe concerning God and what duty God requires of man. Some very earnest Christians fearfully fail in service from ignorance; they have abundant zeal, but not according to knowledge.

Serve God gratefully: No Christian with lively remembrance of God's merciful kindness in saving him from sin and from the death and ruin which are its penalty, ought for one moment to fail or falter here. And no one thus remembering will.

Serve God heartily: That is lovingly, with a perfect heart and a willing mind. All real service of God is heart-service; heartless service, or half hearted service is never proper service and with God can never be acceptable service. It is when the whole heart is given to God that the promptings of love impel to service that will know Him and advance His cause on earth.

Serve God faithfully: Not as eye servants or men-pleasers, but as loyal servants of the King. Serve Him in any way that duty may call—and anywhere. In the home, on the street, in the counting room, or in the field—and so serve that men taking knowledge of your service will honor Him whom you serve. Serve Him by doing; if so be His will serve Him in suffering. Be faithful in service everywhere under all conditions.

Serve God fully: With every energy of mind or body. Ye are not your own: ye are bought with a price. Therefore glorify Him in your body and in your spirit which are God's.

Serve Him joyously: Rejoice in the Lord always. But there can be no joy—the fruit of the Spirit—but when the service of God is in and through and by the Spirit. When we have surrendered ourselves to be actuated by the Holy Spirit we shall draw water with joy from the wells of salvation.

So serving the Lord we shall know as none can tell the blessedness of serving God and even here shall have a foretaste of the blessed service in heaven, where as servants they shall serve before the throne of God and of the Lamb forevermore.

Resolutions—In Memoriam.

JAMES D. REID.

WHEREAS, James D. Reid, an elder of the Mills River Presbyterian church, after a long and painful illness, hath departed this life and gone to his reward; it is eminently fitting that the following resolutions adopted by the session and congregation, be published by request in the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN, viz:

Resolved 1st. That in the death of brother Reid his family has lost a faithful husband and loving father, his community, a model and exemplary citizen; and the Mills River Presbyterian church a consecrated member and most faithful official.

2nd. That by reason of these, and his exceptional scruples in his devoted service continually rendered toward every possible advancement of the interests of the Presbyterian church and the honor of his Master's kingdom, his death, occurring in the prime of life, proves a sad loss to his church and community, retrievable only in the gracious providence of the Great Head of the Church.

3rd. That genuine condolence and heart-felt sympathy on the part of this session and congregation be cordially and solemnly extended to his stricken wife and grieving children, all of whom are prayerfully commended to the God of the widow and the Father of the fatherless.

M. M. BRITTIAN, Clerk. J. L. WICKER, Moderator.

A MEMORIAL TRIBUTE.

MURRAY. — Mrs. Margaret Ann Murray, the beloved wife of S. F. Murray, who died after a brief illness at her home near Burgaw on Oct. 23rd, was born on the 16th day of November, 1871, of Christian parents, who survive her, and are worthy representatives of a consistent and prayerful type of Presbyterianism. At a happy home fireside she was trained for God, and learned to know in early childhood the bliss of a personal trust in Christ. This pure Christian nurture filled the closing days of her earthly life with impressive benedictions.

A dutiful child she grew into a faithful and loving wife, a Christian mother. She anticipated being removed from life, and Jesus was to her faith "the Resurrection and the Life." A buoyant hope elated her soul, and she was glad in the comforting assurance: "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

The kindly impress of her noble life is seen in the dispositions of her two bright little girls, and the same grace which supported her is the comfort and stay of her sorrowing husband.

MRS. SALLIE CLINE RALSTON

wife of one of our Home Missionaries, Rev. C. J. Ralston entered into rest from their home at Lehigh, Indian Territory, at 10 p. m., Wednesday, Sept 22nd, 1897, at the age of a little less than 45 years.

Her memory deserves to be held in affectionate remembrance by Christian people, because her life was devoted to the service of our Lord.

She was the daughter of Mr. T. J. and F. C. Cline, of Rockingham county, Va., and received her education chiefly in Antioch High School. After her marriage to Mr. Ralston, Dec. 18th, 1870, they taught in the Tide Water region of Virginia, she at one time having charge of the girls' boarding department in Suffolk Institute. In Union Theological Seminary Virginia she had charge of the Seminary Mess Hall while Mr. Ralston was a student of theology. She was with her husband as he served the churches of Clinton, Ky., Mossy Creek, Tenn., and Denton, Texas, and with him took charge in 1890, of the orphan home for Choctaw boys at Armstrong Academy, in the Choctaw nation. It was there that the writer saw her, at different times, as she devoted all of her powers of heart, mind and body to the service of her Redeemer in that trying position. Only those who have had experience can have any conception of the burden she carried as she performed the work of a mother for seventy Indian orphan boys, from five to sixteen years of age, gathered largely from the cabins of the poor, with no training, no idea of a home. Every day from the dawn of morning to a late bed time, all her powers were taxed, and freely given to her Lord, as she cared for those boys in their health, their sickness, and when death entered the home. Then there came the great sorrow of her own life, the death by drowning of her own sweet little son, Calvin, perhaps six years of age, a sunbeam of joy in her life of care.

The last year of her life at Lehigh was one of great suffering borne with wonderful patience. Just before her death she said that she had a strange feeling and when her husband told her it was death she replied, "If this be death it is very different from what I expected." Later she said to her husband, "I have lost my vision, give me your hand," and added "I am now in the valley of the shadow of death, but it is not dark, the Master is with me." A little latter she said, "I have passed through the shadow of death and am at the gate of heaven." But a few moments were left, until, we are sure, an abundant entrance was given to her.

No woman in any missionary field has carried a heavier burden, or discharged her duties more faithfully than this Home Missionary. Her work has been what was to be expected from one, an only child, who when starting to the West received her mother's benediction with the words, "My daughter, I may not see you again in the flesh. I wish to say you have been to me all that a child can be to her mother and have never given me a moment's pain." How vividly does that benediction which John was commanded to write come before us: "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord—they rest from their labors and their works do follow them." Our sympathy goes out sincerely to her husband and two surviving children.

FOR THE FAMILY.

THE SUNLIGHT.

It gently brought to a darkened world
The tidings of a coming day,
And awakened earth with a loving call
To straightway arise and pray.

It tenderly entered where death had been,
And shone on the marble brow,
Softly reminding each mourner's heart
Of "the crown of glory now."

It paused while in the forest glade,
To strengthen a lowly flower,
And bid it show in its own sweet way,
God's care through its little hour.

And thence it passed to a widow's home,
To illumine with gleams of gold
The sacred words of a promised "rest"
It found in her Bible old.

It lingered long by a dying babe,
Who smiled at its golden ray,
And the mother gave with a lighter heart
Her child to the Lord that day.

It made its way to a gloomy cell
Right on to the prison floor,
And sang of life in a brighter world,
Where fetters shall be no more.

Ah! who can tell all the sunlight did,
Through that glorious summer day;
Or how the earth became cold and dark,
When the last streak died away?

But let us ask, Do we also shine
With glory from Christ our Sun?
Will aught we do in the world for Him
Be missed when life is done?

BY MRS. E. H. AMIS.

And as we have seen "The Game of Missionaries," we wish to recommend it most heartily to all our young people—and old ones too. As stated in the notices of the game, it is played like the games of Authors, giving the names of the countries, the stations and the missionaries, and is not only a very pleasant and novel way of entertaining the young people, but by familiarizing them with the names of our own beloved missionaries and their special fields of labor, we think that it cannot fail to increase their interest in this great cause.

Do not fail to get this game and tell your friends about it. "The entire sale of the game will be sent to our Foreign Mission Committee," so your money will do good in more ways than one. Price of each set of cards postpaid is 50 cents. Send your orders to Mrs. Judge Barron Phillips, Hyde Park, Tampa, Fla.

DEATH OF JOHN SARTAIN.

John Sartain, an eminent artist and engraver, died in Philadelphia on the 25th inst., at the home of his daughter. Sunday was his eighty-ninth birthday, and, although nearly every member of the family came to the city to call on him, the customary formal celebration of the event was omitted owing to the aged artist's conditions.

Mr. Sartain was born in London in 1808. When twelve years old he began to earn his own living working about the Covent Garden Theatre. At fourteen years of age he was apprenticed to a writer and engraver. In 1828, when twenty years old, he devoted himself to the mezzotint as the more effective method of engraving. His fame and fortune have been based upon it.

In 1830 he came to Philadelphia. He became proprietor and editor of Campbell's Foreign Semi-Monthly Magazine, and Sartain's Magazine was started in 1848.

For twenty four years he had been a director of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. He received medals and honors from every quarter of the globe, among them being the title of cavalier from the King of Italy. Mr. Sartain was chief of the art department of the Centennial Exposition in 1876, and of the American Exposition held in London in 1887. He was the designer of several public monuments.

Mr. Sartain's children are remarkably talented. William Sartain, one of his sons, is an associate in the National Academy of Design, has been president of the New York Art Club and was one of the founders of the New York Society of American Artists.—Baltimore Sun.

"The enemy is coming: To the fort for your lives!" When a wise man receives a plain warning of danger, he does not wait to let it overtake him; he seeks every reasonable means to fight it off.

Disease would almost never get the best of the average man if he was prepared to resist it, and took the natural precautions dictated by common sense.

When a man's stomach and liver get upset and fail to do their regular work, he can be certain that something worse is bound to follow, if he doesn't look out for himself. Headaches, indigestion, biliousness and constipation are simply Nature's warnings that the enemy of serious disease is coming to attack him.

The sensible thing to do is to immediately fortify the system with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It vitalizes and invigorates the entire constitution. It helps the liver to filter out all bilious impurities.

It gives the digestive and nutritive organs power to extract nourishment from the food and turn it into rich, red, healthy blood. It creates appetite, good digestion, and solid, muscular strength.

It is far superior to the mere temporary stimulus of malt-extracts. It is better than cod liver oil emulsions because it is assimilated by the weakest stomach.

"About fifteen years ago" writes Mr. John McMichael, editor of the Plattsburg, (Mo.) Leader, "I was in very poor health, had no appetite, was sluggish, and so lifeless it seemed impossible for me to do anything that required effort. Every fall and spring this ill-health seemed to affect me particularly. A friend advised me to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery asserting that it would restore me to perfect health, and make 'a new man' of me. Finally he induced me to try the medicine. I weighed at the time about 128 lbs. I used several bottles, and upon quitting it weighed 175 lbs. Since that time my weight has varied from this to 195 pounds.

A sure and permanent cure for constipation is Dr. Pierce's Pellets. One "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, two a mild cathartic.

NOVEMBER.

The leaves now are gone, all the blossoms are dead;
The birds and the bees—all, all now have fled.
The gardens are withered and faded and bare;
No sweet smelling posies are now blooming there;
Nought but the chrysanthemums lovely and true,
That come at the end, when the Summer is through,
To bring to the world, as the year fades away,
The dream of a brighter and happier day.

BIBLE HEROES.

CHAPTER 5.

Grandma's Hero.

Of course somebody was interested, and excited about Grandma's hero, because, as Jack said, "Gamma's so "s'prisin," which being interpreted meant that Grandma had so many surprises for them!

Grandma looked over her spectacles at the children at the dinner-table, and said:

"Well, children, with the aid of my valuable old friend, Mr. Henry's Commentary, I think I can make quite an interesting story of my hero this evening."

"Who's Mr. Henry Commentary?" asked Jack with a look of astonishment.

"Vat a funny name! ha! ha!" added poor little Artie who was not old enough to have even heard of Mr. Henry and his wonderful commentaries on the Bible.

"Why Jack!" said Hugh, did you really think there was a man named Commentary?"

Then Jack snickered, and said he didn't know who Grandma was talking about at first! And nobody knew whether he found out afterwards or not.

When sunset came, Artie ran to Grandma's room and said:

"Oh Gamma, come! come kick! (quick) there's the beautiful sunset—seems like—seems like Friday evenin' is always de pittiest," which Grandma took as a high compliment to her Guess Club evening, and deserving of two or three kisses.

Of course she went out with Artie and tried to make her dear little pet feel that this was one of God's ways of showing His love to us.

It was too cool to stay long, besides that Grandma had begged for early supper, so that the honorary members could be with the club this evening.

At last supper was over, and the children are gathered in Grandma's room.

"Now, if papa gets to reading his paper he will forget to come" said Hugh.

"Suppose two of you go and offer to escort him here," suggested Grandma. Whereupon everybody wanted to go.

"No! no! that is not the proper way," said Grandma. I will choose Nellie and Nita, and now dears, go to him and kneel down before him and say:

"Most honorable sir, will your honor be pleased to come to the Guess Club, where the members anxiously await your coming." Then offer your arms to escort him."

Everybody laughed and thought that would be very funny. Nellie and Nita were rather scared at first, but entered into the fun of it, and after repeating the sentence over several times to Grandma, went off, and presently came back with papa Allan between them, looking very funny and "purtin' on airs," as Jack said.

Then mamma came in looking very mysterious, and Grandma began:

"My hero had a short name, and it seems a strange name to give a child, in a country where names always meant something. We do not know the name of either his father or mother, and we know very little about him, but what we do know is very interesting. Think of a man being remembered thousands of years, just for two things! "First because he was more honorable than his brethren, though we are not told why it was so; and second, because he prayed to God for several things that he wanted, and God gave him everything that he asked for! And so he is a pattern to us of how we should "come boldly to the throne of grace."

"I imagine that he was a bright-eyed, happy-hearted boy, who learned obedience when he was a child; and learned to fear God and to trust Him as a prayer-hearing God; and to desire to be honorable. I think that when he grew up so earnest and faithful people loved him and respected him, and then there came a time when he must have been in danger. Maybe he had enemies that were trying to destroy his property and kill him: or, maybe he wanted to succeed better in his business so that he could help others, and be kept from evil. You remember the Lord teaches us to pray: "Deliver us from evil." Whatever was the matter, my hero asked God for what he wanted, and God heard and granted his request. After telling us that about him, he just passes out of Bible history leaving behind him only the fragrance of a good name.

The children were all puzzled, and mama was looking into the fire with a very perplexed look on her face.

Mr. Allan was looking very hard right into Grandma's face, when he jumped up and seized Grandma's Bible and turned to the index of proper names in the back, and in a minute or two, he laid down the Bible, and clapped his hands!

Grandma rapped on the table and said: 'Order! order!" and papa remembered, and looking very solemn, held up his hand and said;

"He belonged to the tribe of Judah and there was a city named for him, was'nt there?"

"Yes! yes! said Grandma, "I'm afraid you have guessed."

(And now can any of the readers of the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN tell who Grandma's hero was? We will not give the name this time so that those who choose, may look it up.)

As soon as Mr. Allan gave the name, mama left the room.

The children could'nt help glancing towards the screen because so often there was something behind it for them, and Grandma noticed it and smiled, but did not say anything. Presently there was a curious kind of knocking on the door.

"Somebody is knocking with a knee instead of a hand," said Grandma, and while everybody was laughing at the new way to knock papa said it was a knee way he thought, which Grandma declared was a very dreadful pun.

Artie had opened the door and there stood Mrs. Allan with a waiter full of dishes and plates. No wonder she had to use her knee to knock with!

"Hugh set this down, please," she said, and was gone again, but soon came back with a kettle.

"Candy pulling! candy pulling! was the joyful exclamation, while everybody clapped hands.

Sure enough this was mama's treat, and what a grand time they had!

"Remember you must give us a hero next Friday," said Grandma to Mr. Allan as he left "the racket" to finish his newspaper.

"Well'm I'll try," he said just like the children would answer.

When the clock struck nine, mamma said:

"Good night children!" and after grandma had a kiss from each of the Guess Club, another happy meeting was over. D.

HAMPDEN SIDNEY NOTES.

Several weeks ago Rev. Cameron Johnson spent some ten days here. He is an old Union Seminary man, and has been engaged in teaching and mission work in Corea, Japan and the Bonin Islands. His accounts of his work were interesting and helpful.

On the third Sabbath Rev. A. T. Graybill and wife were on the hill, guests of Dr. Hersman. Dr. Graybill preached in the morning for Dr. Murray, on the text, "Such an high priest became us," illustrating from circumstances in Mexico. At night he related the story of the Mexico Mission, continuing the address before the students at the Monday morning meeting of the Missionary Society. Such experiences as these will doubtless be blessed of the Spirit as means to a more thorough consecrating of all to the Master's cause, especially in foreign fields.

The interest here in missions is manifested partly by the large attendance upon the regular meetings of the Society of Missionary Inquiry. Why should not a dozen men from the Senior Class volunteer for the foreign field. "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest." A paper read before the society on the subject of "Buddhism" was in striking contrast to an address reported as having been delivered at Nashville before the namely "Parliament of Religion." We have sent a representative to the Nashville Centennial in the person of Dr. W. W. Moore. He delivers an address Presbyterian Day on "Presbyterians and Education."

J. W. S.

The dedication of the new Heminway Public School Building Friday night last was a rare treat to those who attended. The very large hall was well filled. After prayer and singing Dr. E. A. Alderman, President of the University of North Carolina, was happily introduced by Prof. Noble, Superintendent of Public Schools, of New Hanover county. The subject of Dr. Alderman's address was the University and the People. His introduction was graceful and well calculated to gain the interested attention of the audience. The address itself, it need hardly be said, was a masterful plea for education from lowest to highest, but always on a Christian plane. He dealt most courteously with all denominational institutions, indeed took occasion to compliment and commend them, expressing the opinion that the rivalry or competition between colleges was stimulating and beneficial, and when properly pursued could not be hurtful. The objections urged to education by the State were discussed at length, but with courtesy amounting almost to deference. The address was altogether admirable in spirt, clear and cogent in presentation and forceful in argument.

At the conclusion Dr. Alderman was met and congratulated by numbers both of the ladies and gentlemen of the audience.

Forty dollars per month to Canvassers. Address, W. C. Jackson, Winterville, N. C.

THINGS USEFUL.

Pumpkins and squashes can be covered, and baked with a slow heat and some care and stirring.

Lithia tablets are said to be as effectual as the waters of the springs, and convenient and inexpensive.

* * *

The skin of a boiled egg is the most efficacious remedy that can be applied to a boil. Peel it carefully, wet and apply to the part effected. It will draw off the matter and relieve the soreness in a few hours.

Blanc-Mange. — A nice blanc-mange may be made of the juice of fresh cherries, or syrup from canned ones, and corn-starch. The proportion is one pint of juice and two tablespoonfuls of the flour. This should be just stiff enough to mould, and is excellent if served very cold with sugar and cream.

Apple Jelly.—This is fine if made from high flavored, acid, white-fleshed varieties, like the Orange Pippin or Bellflower, boiling the skins and seeds, tied in cheese cloth, with the juice, which heightens the flavor. For the finest jelly press two quarts of cider and put it to simmer; pare five pounds of apples, slice and boil in the cider over a brisk fire till the fruit is melted down; strain and boil again with ten ounces of sugar to the pound of juice. This may be flavored with lemon or orange peel, or quinces may be cut up and cooked with the apples for the sake of the quince flavor.

Eggs May be Kept Fresh for Three Months.—"It is impossible in some sections of the country to get perfectly fresh eggs during the winter season. To guard against this, in summer time, when they are cheap, pack them in lime-water, and they will keep in good condition for three months. Pour one gallon of boiling water over a pound of lime; when settled and cold pour it carefully over the eggs which you have packed, small ends down, in a stone jar, and stand in a cool, dark place. Eggs may also be packed in salt; anything that will close the pores of the shell and prevent evaporation will preserve eggs."—Mrs. Rorer, in Ladies' Home Journal.

AT EVENTIDE IT SHALL BE LIGHT.

Our lives are like the stars, that give no sign
In the full glory of the noontide sun;
But rayless wait, unseen, till day be done,
Masked in the splendor of His light divine,
Then of a sudden, through the gloom they shine,
And lo, a thousand worlds their courses run,
Made holier by that lustre. Weary one,
So, gently favored, doth the soul recline,
And yield not light to any, in the blaze
Of full prosperity; till, sinking low,
Its sun of bliss be darkened, spent its days;
Then through the dusk of grief and tears doth glow
A new effulgence, lighting on their ways
The feeble-hearted. May thy lot be so.
—Robert Clarkson Tongue, in Canada Presbyterian.

SHADOWS OF LIFE.

What He does we know not now, but we shall know hereafter. I remember on a glorious day of all but cloudless sunshine, passing in view of a well-known line of bare and majestic downs, then basking in the full beams of noon. But on one face of the hill rested a mass of deep and gloomy shadow. On searching for its cause, I at length discovered one little speck of cloud, bright as light, floating in the clear blue above. This it was which cast on the hillside that ample track of gloom. And what I saw was an image of Christian sorrow. Dark and cheerless often as it is, and unaccountably as it passes over our earthly path, in heaven its tokens shall be found; and it shall be known to have been but a shadow of this brightness whose name is Love.—Alford.

REV. F. W. FARRIES.

The Rev. F. W. Farries is a native of Dumfriesshire, Scotland. While yet a child, his parents emigrated to Canada, where they purchased a farm. The farm required what aid and service the boys could give, and hence the subject of this sketch, who is the fourth child in a family of thirteen, ten of whom is still living, helped in clearing away the timber, and in all the varied work and duties of the farm. Earnest Christians and devoted Presbyterians, his parents were faithful in instructing the children in the knowledge of the Scriptures. They required them to commit to memory the Psalms and other portions of Scripture, and the Shorter Catechism, and it was a rule of the household for the whole family, in answer to the questions put by the father, to rehearse one half of the Shorter Catechism one Sabbath evening, and the other half on the following evening. The Sabbath was a holy day, and nothing but sickness prevented every member of the family who could possibly go, from attending the services of God's house.

While still young, as a result of faithful home instruction, and the influence of a devoted Christian mother, the subject of this sketch was led to accept of Christ as his Saviour, and to seek full membership in the church. After sometime, the duty of giving himself to the work of the ministry presented itself to his mind and heart, and being led to see that this was his duty and privilege, he began to prepare to enter college: With this view he attended the Rockwood Academy and the Collegiate Institute at Gath, after which he spent sometime in teaching. He then entered Knox College, Toronto, and took at the same time special classes in the University of Toronto. In the third year of his college course, he was appointed by the Faculty classical Tutor, the duties of which position he discharged in addition to the work of his own course. Having taken part of his theological course in Knox College, he, with several of his classmates, was attracted to the seminary at Princeton, N. J., where Dr. Charles Hodge of world-wide fame, was still presiding, and in due time, was graduated from that venerable institution.

He immediately entered upon work, as stated supply, at Otisville, N. Y. During his short stay there, the congregation greatly increased, the membership was more than doubled, and a long-continued and discouraging debt was removed. While at Otisville he was married to Sophia A., eldest daughter of the Rev. H. B. Beegle, who is still spared to him.

From Otisville he was called to Dumfries Street church, Paris, Ont., and for a little more than three years he labored there, amid many tokens of Divine favor, and of the sympathy and kindly appreciation of the people. He was then called to the pastorate of Knox church, Ottawa, to succeed the Rev. Dr. McLaren who had been appointed Professor of Systematic Theology in Knox College, and bidding a reluctant farewell to his loving and attached people in Paris, he took up the work in Ottawa, where he continued to labor for eighteen years. During these years the church prospered, the membership increasing more than threefold. But long-continued and unremitting labor had its effect upon his constitution. His health became impaired, to such a degree, that a complete change of climate was advised, and so with great reluctance to part from so devoted a people, he felt constrained to tender his resignation. The prospect of his removal called forth such an expression of affection and esteem, not only from the session and congregation of Knox church, but also from the Presbytery, and the whole community, as to show the high regard in which he was held. Before leaving he was presented with beautifully illuminated addresses by the Presbytery of Ottawa which bears the signatures of all the members, by the session and congregation of Knox church, by "St. Andrew's Society" of which he was chaplain for many years, by the "Sons of Scotland" of which he was also chaplain, and, what was altogether unprecedented in their history, the city council presented him with an elaborately illuminated address, which was signed by the mayor and city clerk and bears the seal of the corporation. The congregation also presented him with a half year's salary of $1,250.

He desired to come South, and for a time made his home in New Berne, N. C., and accepted work as an evangelist in the Wilmington Presbytery. In the genial climate his health began to improve almost immediately, and in a few months he was so far restored, as to justify him in accepting a cordial call to the church in Goldsboro, N. C., where he still labors. He is now in vigorous health. Since his settlement in Goldsboro, the church has enjoyed a good measure of prosperity. There have been about fifty additions, and the church has been enlarged and completely renovated. A handsome pipe organ has also been recently placed in it. The relations between pastor and people are very cordial

Besides his pastoral work, Mr. Farries has been closely identified with church and benevolent work in every place. For some years he was a member of the Board of Directors of Knox College. For fourteen years he was a member of the General Assembly's Committee on Home Missions, and chairman of the Home Mission Committee of Ottawa Presbytery. He served frequently on other boards and committees of the Church.

He was associate editor of the "Hand-Book of the Presbyterian Church in Canada," and many of his sermons have been published.

The man who has the witness within that his sins are forgiven will not doubt the possibility of the salvation of any other sinner.

THE KESWICK TEACHING.

We have ventured now and then in this paper to acknowledge our great debt to the men who are most prominent teachers of the Keswick school. We are now reading and looking up the references in the margin of a work issued some years ago by A. D. F. Randolph & Co., from the pen of Rev. Andrew Murray with the title, "The New Life." The chapters are short and are simpler and plainer than some of the best later writings of this "modern saint" as Rev. Dr. Clark recently called him in an article written at his home in South Africa.

This book is meant for babes in Christ, beginners in the Christian life, and is admirably adopted to their conditions and needs. At the same time it gives food for Christians of maturer growth and riper experiences. It is on the line of Keswick teachings. The separate chapters are so many studies of the conditions and elements of spiritual growth and usefulness. They are only the studies of one man, albeit of one singularly blessed, owned and used of God in the salvation of sinners and the edification of saints. It is not to be expected that they will be free from error or mistake in the explication of truth. But like the other writings of this godly man, they are held hard and fast by moorings whose anchor is cast within the vail.

This is true of the teachings of the Keswick school. No one man is authorized to speak for all. The object of the annual conference is to hear the views of individual studies and experience and to seek the harmony of all truth in the region of holier lives. And no man should accept the views or particular inferences of any other, however humble or wise. Indeed the Keswick teaching seeks to sink the individual self-life in the prevailing power of the Christ-life, ministered by the Holy Spirit, in those who are fully surrendered to Christ. Individuals may hold and teach that victory over sin begins to be full from the moment of such surrender. But the school holds only that the deliverance from the power of sin is to those who are surrendered, and that the cleansing from the guilt of sin is every moment by the blood of Christ. Cleansing from all unrighteousness is a process, and gradually removes in the work and progress of sanctification all the pollution of sin. This is not perfect in this life.

This school aims and seeks to show the believer the privileges of a life beyond merepeace with God, a life in the peace of God. It calls Christians away from the excuses for sin and its allowance, that it is always to be expected because of ourselves and of the roots of sin remaining, to expect and seek to live above these things in the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

The principle is that this is to be received by faith, just as truly as our justification and the growth of sactification. It is not new. It is what the father's held and taught. It is not to be attained by self-effort. The text here is Galatians iii: 2, "Having begun in the Spirit are ye now made perfect by the flesh?" Here is the greatest hindrance to this truth, that we may accept. We are justified by faith. But we try to work out our salvation. We argue that means must be used, and justly. But we think to use them in our own strength, instead of letting Christ live His life in us. A text here is Rom. v: 10. "For, if where we were enemies we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more, being reconciled we shall be saved by his life."

The Keswick school insists strongly on the merit of Christ's death and the sufficiency of His atonement. It further insists on the efficiency of His life, and says with Paul, Gal. ii: 20, "Nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." It says that the sinner is justified by faith in Christ crucified. It insists further that the saved sinner, so justified, is to be and is being saved by His life, only positing with the apostle, Rom. vi: 11, "Likewise reckon ye yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God."

The experience of each individual in apprehending this truth and appropriating this provision will be different. But all the experiences will turn on accepting and surrendering to Jesus as Lord and Life.

The cardinal text, whether avowed or not, is Romans i: 17, which we have received only in part, if we do not see and receive its truth that as we become just before God are justified by faith, so and much more being just we live by faith. The faith of justification rests on the finished work of Christ by his atoning death. The faith by which the just live takes hold of and receives the sufficiency of Christ's life. It means that of ourselves, in the self-life, we are nothing, but by the life of Christ made effectual by the Holy Spirit, as we abide in Christ, all life, fruitfulness and victory are wrought in us. For, severed from Christ, we can do nothing.

THE FOLLOWING paper was adopted at the recent meeting of the Synod of North Carolina:

The committee on the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN would respectfully submit to the Synod of North Carolina in session at Salisbury, the following report:

The interest of this great agency for the advancement of the Synod's work has received your committee's most thoughtful consideration. The value of a Synodical organ for the promulgation of our plans of work, for a free interchange of thought, for a wide dissemination of Church news, is appreciated by every member of this committee and it is believed is recognized by every member of this Synod.

The strong desire of all is that the influence of this organ may be brought to bear upon every individual and every family in this Synod.

Your committee is able to report that very recently there have been providential developments tending to secure this most desirable result; as will appear by the following most important announcement.

The NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN has passed under new business management and new editorial control, and is soon to be published in a different city. With thorough harmony an arrangement of purchase has been effected by which the paper will be owned and published in the city of Charlotte, its editor to be the Rev A J McKelway, subject to the action of his church and Presbytery. It is believed that the way for Mr. McKelway to assume this responsibility and to undertake this great work will be made clear. It is therefore fully expected that at a very early day this brother will be the editor of the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN.

The contemplation of this very great change justifies your committee in looking both to the past and to the future.

For twenty-three years, with occasional intermissions and interruption the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN has been under the management of Mr. John McLaurin, who assumed all the financial responsibility involved in its publication. Mr. McLaurin now proposes to retire from this work which for so long a time has been bound up with the warmest affections of his heart and the strongest energies of his life. This Synod recognizes and warmly acknowledges the greatness of the service which Mr. McLaurin has rendered the cause of Presbyterianism within our bounds. And now as he withdraws from this work for which he has made so many sacrifices, and in which he has done such noble service, the Synod places upon record its assurance that he has our warmest thanks for the work of the past and our prayers and our cordial wishes for his usefulness and happiness in the years to come. And now, looking to the future, the Synod is happy to know that the editorial responsibility of this paper is, if the way be clear, hereafter to devolve upon one so able to bear it as is the Rev. A. J. McKelway. Quick to think, ready to write and active both to plan and to execute, this brother may be expected to make the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN, a power for good, not only within the bounds of this Synod, but all over the Church. The Synod recognizes his peculiar and eminent fitness for this work, and should he undertake it, pledges to him its cordial support. The Synod furthermore recommends that every pastor endeavor to introduce this paper into every family within our bounds.

It is expected that the first issue of the paper, in its enlarged form with additional space for correspondence and news items, will be made from Charlotte the first week in December.

EUGENE DANIEL,
Chairman.

The above conveys what to most of our readers will be the first intimation of action that must sever the very cordial and pleasurable relations which have existed between them and the writer of this note, for nearly a quarter century. The pen halts here, for it is difficult to realize that this must be. For a few weeks yet we are together, and a formal farewell is reserved until our association as editor and readers shall fully terminate.

And now we beg that all the kindness that has been shown to the present management will be continued without abatement to those who shall take up the work, and that very many new friends will come to the paper to make it, as it ought to be, an inmate of every Presbyterian household in our State.

We very confidently assure our friends that under the regime about to be inaugurated, while the policy of the paper will not be changed, it will be with increased facilities considerably enlarged and greatly improved. In all that the report of the Synod has said of him upon whom the burden and responsibility shall hereafter fall we most heartily concur. It affords us pleasure, most sincere, to look forward to the future prosperity which we predict for the paper of our love.

For the very kind reference to the present editor of this paper most hearty thanks are returned. Yet the testimonial of commendation can come to him only as the representative of those who have so faithfully, so heartily and so persistently, stood by the fortunes and the labors incident to the conduct of the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN during the past quarter century.

No paper could have had more hearty well-wishers, or more helpful friends, and to them belongs in largest measure what of credit is due for any good that may have been accomplished.

ANY ONE willing to be made willing to do the will of God, who to this end humbly and patiently in the light of God's Holy Spirit searches into the deepest recesses of his heart can hardly fail to be horrified at the inherent vileness and the shameful depravity therein revealed; and this humbling experience of the exceeding sinfulness of sin and of man's utter inability to self-cleansing must grow upon him as he becomes more and more renewed in the whole man after the image of God. There is and can be no place for boasting then. He must, even as his desires and his efforts after holiness advance, still like the Apostle count not himself to have apprehended He will still, forgetting, the things which are behind, reach forward to those which are before—always pressing towards the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus; being willing, still like the Apostle, to suffer the loss of all things that he may win Christ and be found in Him, not having His own righteousness, but that which is through the faith of Christ, that he may know Him and the power of His resurrection and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable unto His death; if by any means he may attain to the resurrection of the dead.

Why then should I spend time and effort discussing whether perfection may be attainable? Is it not enough to know that I have not "already attained," neither am already perfect? and is not the one thing to do to "press forward?"

But how? It sounds like a contradiction of terms to say that one can only press forward first of all by absolute surrender of will, and cessation of personal effort, and yet this is precisely the condition precedent to advance in holiness. It is not quietism as is sometimes charged. It is the attitude of the soldier who fully equipped and in perfect alignment waits for the orders of his captain, and they received, moves forward with greater enthusiasm and heartier vigor as knowing that the plan and the purpose and responsibility are not for him, but the duty to press forward, in full faith in his commander and full assurance of a victorious ending of the conflict at the last.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT that Rev Dr. Robert Strange, rector of St James church, of this city, has declined the call to Christ Church, Norfolk, is gratifying not only to his own flock but to Christians of all denominations and to the community at large. Dr. Strange is not only highly esteemed by all for his scholarly ability, but is beloved by his flock and is most highly respected by others for his affable manners and courteous bearing.

Truth is the apostle before whom every cowardly Felix trembles.—Wendell Phillips.

RECEIPTS AT THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY'S OFFICE OF HOME MISSIONS.

For seven months, April 1st to November 1st: For Home Missions, including Church Erection Loans, 1897, $12,428. Same months, 1896, $9,059. Increase, $3,369. For Invalid Fund, 1897, $8,146. Same months 1896, $8,529. Shortage in 1897, $383. We aim to pay out all of the Invalid Fund at the end of each fiscal year, March 31st; then the one only annual collection for this cause does not come until July.

Receipts from April to July generally consist of the odds and ends not promptly sent in before March 31st, and these vary in amount. This year those sums were less than last year by $414. This causes the above given shortage. Receipts since July 1st, have exceeded those of last year by a small amount. But it is clear that a considerable increase must be realized in receipts after this date, or the Presbyteries cannot draw from the treasury more than half as much as they desire, that they may pay the beneficiaries on March 31st next, the sums which Presbyteries say those beneficiaries should receive.

Pastors especially are requested to note this fact, and contributions from all who desire to see these 30 odd old ministers and nearly 100 families of ministers deceased cared for in some reasonable degree, will be gladly received,

Secretary.

Stillman Institute. This school of the prophets is still doing faithful and earnest work. Prof. McAlpine is in charge now, and the students are working hard. For its development by removal to a farm and the introduction of student-labor for partial self-support, the last Assembly authorized the raising of $10,000. Up to July 1st last $4,700 had been promised. Since that time Rev. O. B. Wilson has been canvassing for this fund. Up to Oct. 4th he had secured $1,000. He is now at this same work. Secretary Phillips will soon join in this special effort which will be continued till the money is all in hand, and a farm secured by donation:

Nearly all the colored churches are supplied with preaching. During the summer some of them had large additions. The colored ministers are at their places. Some of them are working with their hands to get bread so that they may continue to preach. All of them are enduring hardness. Two of them deserve the sympathy and prayers of God's people because they are in the midst of yellow fever, facing danger bravely for the elect's sake

The organization of the colored Presbyterian church, postponed on account of the yellow fever, will be effected as soon as cold weather comes.

The treasury is empty. The work is greatly hindered by the lack of money. The committee would probably have lost in valuable services of Mr. Wilson had he not offered to do the year's work without charge, a splendid instance of supreme devotion to the cause.

Secretary.

GOD'S GLORY IN THE HUMAN FACE.

Milton sings of the "human face divine." No material form so combines the lineaments of the divine as does the human face. Neither the face of the sky, nor any of its "bright particular stars," so reflect the divine image and glory as does the "human face divine." Behind the human face sits an invisible, intelligent, free spirit, a fine personality, bearing the impress, and, through the expressive face, revealing the divine personality. No unthinking creature, no matter with what grace and beauty adorned, can so portray the divine Intelligence as that which can "think his thoughts after him," and hold conscious communion with him.

Man is such a conscious intelligence. He cannot only reflect the glory of God as can the stars, but he can feel, as the stars cannot, a conscious fellowship with the infinite Creator. Moreover, he is so constituted as to reveal in feature, form, and speech the wonderful, mysterious play of thought and feeling as these arise and change in the soul. His face is the mirror of the invisible, immaterial spirit which sits behind it, and expresses itself in a thousand subtle, indefinable ways through it.

It is a curious and instructive fact that the means by which faces are recognized, and their language is communicated and understood, are so subjective and subtle that, except in a most imperfect and largely incomprehensible way, language refuses, from sheer inability, to tell what is seen and felt and understood in conversation. No detail of description can so make us see the face of an unknown person as to enable us to recognize it without a personal interview. Language, with all its wonderful power, is thus seen to be but a partial and imperfect medium for the transmission of our impressions. The face, open, free, transparent, must tell the full soul. It hence arises that no printed or pictured page can ever be a substitute for those living epistles, "known and read of all men," which are written, not with ink, but by the divine Spirit in "fleshly tables of the heart." The world will always need and must have the living minister, the personal embodiment of the indwelling Christ.

Since all this is so, it follows that all souls must have a power to mold others, and a susceptibility, in turn, to be molded by them. That this is a fact, and independent of speculation, is proved by all our experience and observation. How true it is that we become conformed to those who are our chosen companions! If we approve of their ideas, and are charmed by their manners, we powerfully and unconsciously grow into conformity with their characteristics. Wisdom has long ago taught us that "he that walketh with wise men shall be wise, but a companion of fools shall be destroyed." It has been observed that those who have long and intimately associated together have acquired, not only similar modes of thought and feeling, but have noticeably become like each other in facial expression and other personal resemblances. Now, if two human beings can thus certainly and powerfully mold each other, how much greater must be the effect, on a human soul, of a close and constant companionship with its Maker?

It is reasonable to believe that the infinite energy of the Lord of glory would work a wonderful transformation in the soul that should live in the divine presence and communion. When Moses came down from the mount, where he tarried forty days without food or drink in the divine presence, his face so shone with the radiance of the glory in which he dwelt that the people could not behold its unveiled splendor. If we shall with open face look into the mirrored glory of God as he is seen in the face of the Lord Jesus Christ, as he reveals himself in his word by his Spirit, or as he comes to those who enter into their closets to hold protracted personal communion with him, as did Moses in the mount, our faces will also shine, our hearts will burn within us, and men will take knowledge of us that we have been with the Lord. Our faces will reflect the glory of God, while we are changed into the same image from glory to glory, as by the Lord the Spirit.—Sunday School Times.

A TONIC FOR THE TIRED.

Watch the faces as they go by you on a crowded street, and just look what a tired look many of them wear. If we could read all the hearts around us, we would find multitudes who are weary in spirit, and sometimes sigh for a pillow in the grave. Some are tired out with life's hard struggles—with bearing the heat and burden of the day. Others persist in piling up anxieties as high as an old-fashioned peddler's pack. They carry a huge load of care as to how they shall make both ends meet, and how they shall foot the bills that accumulate, and how they shall provide for all the hungry mouths and scanty wardrobes. One is tired from trying to do too much, and another of waiting for something to do. A grievous burden of spiritual despondency makes Brother Smallfaith's heartache, and puts an extra wrinkle on Sister Weakback's countenance. Here is a disciple who is tired of waiting for answers to prayer.

Do you suppose that the dear Master does not see all these tired bodies and exhausted nerves and weary hearts? To those who are honestly run down with honest toil he says, "come ye apart into a quiet place, and rest awhile." God puts a night of sleep after every day of work for this very purpose of recruiting lost force. To Christians with small purses he kindly says: "Your life consisteth not in the abundance of the things ye possess. I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich. My grace is sufficient for thee; at my right hand are treasures forevermore." There is not really money enough in this land to give everybody a fortune; but there are promises enough in the Bible and grace enough in Christ Jesus to make everybody rich to all eternity. Just think what a millionaire a man is who has a clean conscience here and a clear hope of heaven hereafter. To poor Brother Smallfaith and sorrowful Mrs. Weakback he gives a wonderful lift in these words "Lo! I am with you alway. No man shall pluck you out of my hands. It is my Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."—Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D.

PAUL RICHTER.

A writer in the United Presbyterian relates the following incident in an article on "The Ministry of Sympathy:"

There are some natures so constituted that they must have love and sympathy. They never have enough, and they make a large return for what is given. The nobler the nature, the greater is the demand. This is specially manifested in the nearer relations of life. John Paul Richter was upheld by the mother who entered into his every trial and shared his adversities. The pastor's widow and her boy lived for each other. He sat by her wheel and wrote wonderful pages which the publishers continued to reject. Four shillings a month was all that mother earned, and when his writings were rejected they wept together over the flax she was spinning. At last the tardy world knocked at the lowly door. All he had written was demanded by an eager public. Fame came just when the old hand was failing and the spinning wheel was running slow. A mother's sympathy made him great and sweetened his wit while it caused him to write in sober mood, "I love God and flowers and little children."

What we all want is inward rest—rest of heart and brain: the calm, strong, self-contained, self-denying character which needs no stimulants, for it has no fits of depression; which needs no narcotics, for it has no fits of excitement; which needs no ascetic restraint, for it is strong enough to use God's gifts without abusing them: the character, in a word, which is truly temperate, not in drink and food merely, but in all desires, thoughts and actions.—Kingsley.

Few if any persons, who persistently sin against themselves, society and God, escape punishment on this side of eternity. A man's worst tormentor is his own guilty heart. "Be sure your sin will find you out" has been proven solemnly true by many an unregenerate sinner, who perhaps has avoided public condemnation.—Presbyterian Journal.

After four years of silence Mr. Thomas Nelson Page gives to the public, through the columns of Scribners, his first long novel entitled Red Rock—A Chronicle of Reconstruction.

It is stated that there is not now an Indian living who can read John Eliot's translantion of the Bible. There are several copies extanct, one of which is in the library of Harvard University.

Mrs. E. M. Gilmer, of New Orleans is well and favorably known by her pen name, Dorothy Dix, and her practical talks are one of the most attractive features of the Picayune.

Francis Turner Palgrave, professor of poetry at Oxford, who died recently, is best known to general readers by his collections of selected poems, such as "The Golden Treasury of English Song," "The Treasury of Sacred Song" and "The Children's Treasury."

BOOKS.

We are much pleased with Lee's Primary History of the United States published by the B. F. Johnson Publishing Company of Richmond, Va. The book is nicely bound and abundantly illustrated with well finished cuts. But more to the point is the fact that Mrs. Lee is a Southern woman and places in the hands of our youth a book that gives them a correct and just estimate of our own people and the part they have taken in the history of their country. The book is highly recommended by teachers and Confederate veterans generally. Price 50 cents

Having heard Rev. Egerton R. Young in the summer of '96, deliver an address at Northfield upon Canadian Missions we received with great pleasure a copy of his work On The Indian Trail from the press of the Fleming H. Revell Co., New York. Mr. Young is a most fascinating speaker and writer. He loves his work and the people for whom he labors. We heartily recommend this work to the young especially boys who will find in the stories of adventure and travel much to interest them But they will also learn how happy are they who deny themselves to carry the Word of God to others and how blest are they who receive these truths.

Trip and Trixy is the title of an amusing story by John Habberton, author of Helen's Babies. Trip and Trixy are mother and daughter. The latter a seven year old who pleases and torments her many admirers and friends. The several adult characters in the story are kept in a state of turmoil, and many embarrassing circumstances are recorded, but all ends well and Trixy is the hero of the hour. CHANGES OF ADDRESS.

Correspondents will please note the following changes of address:

Rev. Frank D. Hunt, from Hendersonville, N. C., to Sanford, Fla.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Wilmington Churches: — Rev. S. H Isler conducted the services at St. Andrews church, in the absence of the pastor.

Prayer-meeting was held in the First church in the morning, no service at night.

Rev. P. C. Morton, pastor of Immanuel church held regular services and reports good congregations, especially at night.

Statesville:—Last week was observed as a week of prayer for Missions, as recommended by the General Assembly, and on Sabbath, 31st of October, the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was dispensed to our church. Rev. J. H. Pressly, of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church, preached for us on Friday night, the other services were conducted by our pastor. Since last communion we have received on certificate six members and three on examination.

Newton:—Rev. Dr. J. A. Ramsay writes:—I have just closed a six days' meeting at Newton. Christians were refreshed and strengthened; two promising young men confessed Christ and were received into the full communion of the church. Others are seriously considering the question, who we hope will soon be "persuaded and enabled to embrace Jesus Christ as He is freely offered in the Gospel."

Midway:—A week's series of meetings closed at Midway on the fifth Sunday of October, on which day the fall communion was held. Most of the week was very unfavorable, being rainy and wet and our members were in the main busy on their farms. Yet those who made the honoring of the Lord first, and their work and convenience second, were well paid. Our pastor Rev. J. McL. Seabrook preached some of his best sermons and those who attended feel revived and strengthened and drawn closer to God, to His work and also closer to our beloved pastor. We feel only sorry for those who were deprived from hearing all of his sermons. We hope to see the fruits of the meeting soon in the more earnest work on the part of the members. W.

Troy:—A protracted meeting was held here on the fourth Sabbath of October extending over the fifth. Order has been taken by Presbytery for the organization of a church. There were fifteen members before the meeting began and eight united on profession during its progress. Rev. Wm. Black conducted the services, assisted by Rev. A.K. Pool in the singing. A good result of the meeting was a renewal of consecration vows by members of other churches and institution of family prayers in several households. A collection taken up amounted to $50.

New Hope Church, Orange Presbytery:—The children of this church had their Missionary Corn Gathering on Saturday, Oct. 30th, and by the kind help of others the day was a most interesting one. In the morning Dr. Thos. Hume of the University made a most acceptable address on missions and after a lunch the congregation again assembled for a triangular service on Korea by Mr. E. L. Harris and Mr. Chas. H. Johnston along with the pastor. After a collection by the congregation to purchase missionary literature for the Sunday-school library, Dr. Hume presented prizes from the pastor to Loula Craig and Alexander Freeland for the largest and second largest yields of corn. The children with their corn planted and worked for Foreign Missions, along with the offerings made by a few of them given instead of their crops, gave more to this cause than the congregation at their two collections in May and October. The missionary corn crop not only raises money for missions, but, better still, develops the missionary spirit in the hearts of the little ones.

Two members have lately been received into this church on profession of their faith in Christ and a congregational meeting has been called for the election of three elders and three deacons. D. J. C.

Chapel Hill:—On last Sunday night the Westminster League as usual on the first Sunday night (when the pastor is away at New Hope), held a public meeting which was conducted by Dr. Thos. Hume who gave a most timely and interesting address on "The Quiet Hour of the Soul," showing the need of private devotion.

Dr. Venable's Sunday-school class is being well attended this year, by the University students and they are well paid for coming. The students are doing better than ever in their attendance on the church services; the church music is now very good through the kindly efforts of the choir leader and organist, Prof. Geo. P. Butler and Mr. H. B. Holmes, and on the whole, we consider the church in the best working condition for several years. Also the sentiment has at last been created for the necessity of the students' bringing their church membership with them when they come to the University. The conditions here are altogether different from what they are at the denominational colleges, and hence we think it very desirable for students to identify themselves with us. D. J. C.

VIRGINIA.

Hoge's Chapel, Giles County:— Rev. Bolling Hobson, pastor. Nine person recently received.

Ben Salem, Rockbridge County:—A. C. E. Society has been organized with eight active members. This society will provide regular services each Sabbath. Rev. C. W. Trawick preaches on alternate Sunday afternoons.

Falling Spring:—Messrs. T. S. Reese and G. W. Effinger were recently elected deacons.

Dinwiddie:—This church was organized at Cook, Carroll county, on October 31st, with twenty-seven members by a commission consisting of Rev Messrs. Alfred Jones, Robert Gray and George H. Gilmer and Elders Jas. N. Lindsey and W. H. Mitchell. Messrs. L. L. Mitchell and Isaac W. Gray were ordained elders and Wm. A. Davis and Franklin D. Mitchell, deacons.

Alexandria:— This church celebrated its regular bi-monthly communion service on Sunday, Nov. 7th. It was one of the most largely attended communion services we ever had, and one new member was received into the church. At the children's service in the afternoon two infants received the ordinance of baptism.

Rev. Dr. A. M. Fraser, of Staunton, Va., began a series of meetings with the pastor, Rev. J. Ernest Thacker, on Monday night. Nov. 8th.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Rock Hill:—Six persons have recently been received upon certificate and three by profession of faith into the full communion of the First church.

TENNESSEE.

Concord:—Rev. J. T. Rothrock, supply. At recent services conducted by Rev. J. M. Evans thirteen were added to the church, ten upon profession of their faith.

GENERAL.

The Y. M. C. A. throughout the world will observe the week beginning Sunday, Nov. 14th, as a season of special prayer and effort for the spiritual welfare for young men.

A band of seven left New York on Monday last for the Klondyke gold fields. They are to do Christian work and establish missions along the route.

On Oct. 22nd a tablet was unveiled in the First Presbyterian church of Elizabeth, N. J., to mark the site of the original site of Princeton University.

The Presbyterian Journal of last week is a Shorter Catechism edition, and is a well arranged and executed issue.

The Salvation Army proposes to give a free Thanksgiving dinner to 1,000 of New Orleans' poor and needy.

The Cologne Volks Zeitung announces that two Rhenish missionaries, Nies and Henle, have been murdered in the southern part of the Chinese province of Shan Tung.

Rev. Dr. John Hall preached his thirtieth anniversary sermon as pastor of Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church on Sunday, Oct. 31st

The Synod of New York has cut itself entirely off from the Home Mission Board resolving hereafter to care for its own weak churches.

The current issue of Our Monthly, the organ of the Thornwell Orphanage, Clinton, S. C., gives the 22nd annual report, and is a valuable number, giving news and full particulars as to finances and line of work.

The Witness, the organ of the Presbyterian church at Rock Hill, S. C., contains most interesting letters from Dr. Mattie M. Ingold, the missionary supported by the First church.

On last Monday the Presbytery of New York celebrated the 250th anniversary of the Westminster Assembly's adoption of the Presbyterian Standards. The Northern Assembly will do the same thing in glorious style next year.

The churches of Kansas City, seem subject to periodical and simultaneous changes in the pastorate. In 1883, all five of the then existing churches had new ministers. In 1889-'90 another change took place in four pulpits. A third change is now going on, With the month of October Dr. H. D. Jenkins completes two years in the Second church Since he came to the city four of our seven churches have welcomed new men to their pulpits, including two installed within the past week. These new workers add much brightness to the somewhat discouraging outlook before Presbyterianism in this city a few months ago, when the resignation of various pastors left so many pulpits vacant. On Monday, October 18th, the Rev. Irwin P. McCurday, D. D., was received from the Presbytery of Philadelphia and installed over the Fifth church, and on Thursday, October 21st, licentiate Paul B. Jenkins, was ordained and installed over the Linwood church. Each of these services was heartily enjoyed by all present. One pleasant feature in each of them was the prominent part taken on invitation of their sessions and the Presbytery by the Rev. S. M. Neel, D. D., of the Central church (Southern), who is usually called upon on such occasions in all of our churches. There is the best of feeling between the representatives of all branches of Presbyterianism found here. The ordination charge given by Dr. Jenkins to his son was much commented on for its exquisite tenderness and Christian manliness.—Interior.

[EDITORIAL.]

ECHOES OF THE SYNOD.

The promptness of the stated clerk saves us from the necessity or the propriety of doing more than touching here and there upon incidents of the Synod of North Carolina which has just closed its labors. Dr. Shearer the moderator, was chosen because of eminent service to the church and especial fitness for the duties of the office and demonstrated the wisdom of the choice. The clerks besides service and fitness have a claim which may almost be said to be based upon immemorial prescription. The sermon by the retiring moderator which it was not our happiness to hear in full, received high praise. The serious illness of Dr. J. Henry Smith called forth the sincerest sympathy of the Synod voiced in prayer that the consolations of God's grace might abound to him. The proceedings throughout were happily harmonious. The little breeze in the pressure of claims between Gastonia Asheville and Raleigh for the honor of entertaining the Synod did not raise a ripple of unkindness. Gastonia won.

Thursday was devoted to the Orphans of Barium Springs. Space fails, to tell of this delightful time. The Centre building, appropriately dubbed Rumple Hall was received and dedicated. Dr. Rose made a capital address as did Dr. W. P. Jacobs, the veteran friend of the fatherless, and President of the Thornwell Orphanage. Rev. C. G. Vardell's eloquent persistence realized a contribution of $875 for furnishing the building.

The meetings in behalf of Foreign Missions and of Home Missions were the very best of their most excellent kind. Revs. Dr. Hazen, Dr. Law, Dr. Lumpkin and Dr. Strickler were heard with great pleasure and profit.

The attendance of members was unusually large, the weather was superb and the hospitality—it was Salisbury that entertained, what more need we say.

OFFICIAL ABSTRACT OF SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA.

The Synod of North Carolina met in its eighty-fourth annual session in the Presbyterian church, Salisbury, N. C., Nov. 2d, 1897, and was opened with a sermon by the retiring moderator, Rev. A. D. McClure, from Deut. 1:19.

There were present during the session of Synod 99 ministers and 44 ruling elders.

Rev J B Shearer, D D, was chosen moderator, and Rev P R Law and Rev W R McLelland, temporary clerks.

Rev J H Lumpkin, Synod of Memphis, Rev J K Hazen, D D, Synod of Virginia, Rev A Walker White, Synod of Texas, Rev J N H Summerell and T H Law, D D, Synod of South Carolina, Rev G D Thompson, Synod of Kentucky, Rev F H Gaines and Rev G B. Strickler, D D, Synod of Georgia, and Rev S P Fulton, Synod of South Carolina, were invited to sit as corresponding members.

Rev J R Scroggs and Rev T F Marr of the M. E. Church, South: Rev L E Busbee, of the Lutheran Church and Rev L E Parish, of the Baptist Church, were invited to sit as visiting brethren.

The Board of Regents of the Orphans' Home tendered to the Synod an excursion to the Home for the purpose of receiving and dedicating the new building which has recently been finished.

A resolution of sympathy for Rev J Henry Smith, D D, and his family in view of his extreme illness was adopted, and the Synod was led in special prayer at the close of the first night's session.

An appeal from John W. Moore and others was presented against the Presbytery of Mecklenburg in employing an unlicensed candidate and putting him in charge for a time of certain churches.

The vote upon this appeal was: To sustain, 8; not to sustain, 68; to sustain in part, 10. The annual report of the Directors of Union Theological Seminary was presented showing the flourishing and encouraging condition of the institution.

An overture was presented from Mecklenburg Presbytery asking for the transfer of Stanly county from Concord to Mecklenburg Presbytery; also an overture from Concord Presbytery consenting to the transfer; whereupon Stanley county was transferred to the Presbytery of Mecklenburg.

A communication was read from Rev J N Craig, D. D., touching Assembly's Home Missions; it was referred to a special committee whose final report will be found incorporated in the report of the Synodical Committee of Home Missions, last recommendation.

Rev J B Shearer, D D, from the Board of Regents of South Atlantic University reported progress. Hon T B Womack re-elected a regent.

Rev J K Hazen, D D, and Rev J H Lumpkin addressed the Synod in the interest of Publication and ministerial education respectively.

Rev A D McClure presented the annual report on Publication and Colportage. The recommendations appended were adopted:

1. Synod urged the Presbyteries to lay this cause more upon the hearts of the people and seek larger contributions.

2 Synod rejoices in the action of the Assembly looking to the appointment of at least one colporteur in each Synod.

3. Synod calls attention to the wise and successful business management of the Publication work.

2. Synod cordially thanks our secretary for his clear, concise and excellent address.

The annual report on Foreign Missions was presented by Rev A T Graham, chairman. Addresses were made by Rev H T Graham, Rev T M Lowry and a collection taken amounting to $50. Among other recommendations, the following very important one was adopted:

Recognizing the inestimable benefit of having a living link between the home Church and the work in distant lands, we recommend that where single churches can support a foreign missionary, they be urged to do so at once, and where one church cannot do so alone it be grouped by the Presbytery, if necessary, with some other churches, that two or three together may have a representative in the field.

On Thursday the Synod went to the Orphans' Home, and met in the new building. Rev R W Boyd made an address of welcome. Rev J Rumple, D D President of Board of Regents, made some verbal statements in the name of the Board and presented to the Synod the new building finished and paid for, but not furnished. Rev H G Hill, D D, Rev T J Allison and Mr. Geo W Watts, were appointed a committee to draft a suitable paper of acceptance.

Rev John M Rose, D D, then delivered an address on "The Church's Duty to her Orphan Children."

The moderator then made the dedicatory prayer, after which an address was delivered by Rev W P Jacobs, D D, President of Thornwell Orphanage. Subscriptions were then made for furnishing the rooms, which amounted to $875.

The following prayer of acceptance was afterward presented and adopted:

1. That Synod with profound gratitude to God, and with thankful acknowledgements to all donors and helpers, would accept the new building tendered this day, in behalf of the regents by the President of its Board, to be dedicated to the service of Almighty God in caring for the fatherless ones whom Jehovah has, in an especial sense, constituted His wards.

2. That in recognition of the multiplied, varied and successful labors during many years of the honored President of the Board of Regents, Rev J Rumple, D D, not only in erecting the Centre building, but the cottages of the Home, and in promoting the welfare and efficiency of the institution, Synod directs that the building dedicated this day shall hereafter be designated as "The Rumple Hall."

Two members of the Synod have died during the year. Rev. Andrew McMillan of Fayetteville Presbytery, and Rev W W Quick, of the Presbytery of Albemarle, and Synod adopted suitable memorial tributes of these deceased brethren.

The annual report on Synodical Home Missions was presented by Rev A J McKelway, Superintendent. Addresses were made by Rev Messrs E E Gillespie, E Mac Davis and J B Morton. (This report will appear with N. C. PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev G B Strickler, D D, addressed the Synod concerning the condition, work and prospects of Union Theological Seminary.

Rev A J McKelway was elected Superintendent of Synodical Home Missions for the ensuing year.

The ruling elders of the Synodical Committee were reappointed for another year, and Rev E W Smith, D D, and Rev Wm Black were added to the committee.

In answer to a request to send delegates to the "Anti-Saloon" convention the Synod adopted the following:

That we respectfully receive this communication as information, but decline to grant request therein stated, not regarding it as within the prerogative of Dr E H Shall was appointed missionary physician of the Presbytery.

W. I. SINNOTT,
Stated Clerk.

HE KNOWETH OUR FRAME.

God knows all things, and, so far as his wisdom is necessary to us, it is at our service freely and fully. If we are trying to live in unity of spirit with him and to do his will, the wealth of his wisdom is available by each of us, no matter how humble and needy we may be. He will not dispel for us all the myteries or solve all the problems which perplex us. That would be to enervate us and to rob us of the opportunity of cultivating faith and courage. But so far as honest study and earnest effort in our own behalf needs the enlightenment which he alone can afford, we may depend upon receiving it.

To realize that he who is our Creator, our daily Guide and Ruler, our tenderest Friend, knows all things and means to use that knowledge for our good is full of comfort. It is a help in the hour of temptation. We are checked, when likely to yield, by the recollection that the divine eye is upon us, and that all the consequences of our sin are forseen by him. It is a help in the day of trouble. It is consoling in some degree to be sure that God knows why we have been afflicted, and how good can be made to result from our bitterest trials. Whatever knits us closer to our heavenly Father is of present, permanent and the utmost benefit, and our consciousness that he is all-knowing as truly as all-loving helps to bind us fast to him.

Even the consciousness that he knows our follies and our faults should have the same effect. For we may remind ourselves that He understands, as no one else does, our struggles against sin. He knows of the secret inner strifes, the penitent resolutions to try again and again the shame which we feel when we have been overcome, and the longings for goodness which in spite of the evil within our hearts, we have. Yes, the more we reflect upon the Divine knowledge the better we comprehend that it throws steady light upon our human way.—London Independent.

FACE SERMONS.

Some one tells of an infidel Swiss artist who was serving the devil to the extent of his ability, who went to Sheffield, England, in 1880. There he was asked to make a caricature of a Salvation Army meeting. He went there on that errand, and scanned the faces of the people: he—with his heart like the troubled sea that could not find rest, tossed and driven by tempests of passion, and tormented by a conscience burdened with sin—looked on the assembled worshippers, and saw peace written on their faces, and an inward joy beaming from their countenaces.

The sight convinced him of his sinfulness. He saw that those people had something which he lacked and which he needed He turned his feet into God's testimonies, believed on the Lord Jesus Christ, found peace through the blood of the cross, and rejoiced with the rejoicing ones.—The Christian Union Herald.

There is so much to be set right in the world, there are so many to be led and helped and comforted, that we must continually come in contact with such in our daily life. Let us only take care that we do not miss our turn of service, and pass by those to whom we might have been sent on an errand straight from God.—Anon.

The greatest fact is, that life is a service; the only question is, whom will ye serve?—Faber.

Golden Text. "Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of His might." Eph. vi. 10.

CATECHISM.

Question 67. Which is the sixth commandment?

Answer. The sixth commandment is: "Thou shalt not kill."

Time. A. D., 62 or 63.

Place. Rome.

INTRODUCTORY.

The imprisonment of Paul was the best part of his life for the Church of after ages. He had opportunity to preach to many whom he could not otherwise have reached and he wrote several letters which are the doctrinal authority on spiritual truth and practical guides for Christian living. This epistle to the Ephesians was a letter addressed to them, but meant for several churches in the same section, "especially those up the valley of the Lycus, as Laodicea and Colossae." Howson, says, "Paul wrote the same letter to them all, but sent to each a separate copy, authenticated by the precious stamp of his own autograph benediction."

The Church at Ephesus was founded by Paul during his three years stay there. Timothy was left to go with the elders from Miletus to be the evangelist and minister there. Ecclesiastical tradition connects the Apostle John with the Church there after the death of Paul, and he was accustomed, when too old and feeble to preach, to lift up his hands and say: "Little children, love one another." It will be well to read the whole epistle and select its best parts for memory as we come to the lesson.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 10. Finally. Literally "as for the rest.'" "From henceforth," in view of the blessed hopes and glorious possibilities of life. Be strong, be endued with strength, R V. margin. Be made powerful. "This strength must be the internal strengthening principle in you, He being the source from which this strength comes." Canon Moule. The idea is to receive Jesus, to strengthen with might by His Spirit in the inner man. In the Lord Jesus Christ who is our Life, and in the power of His might which is of the ministration of the Holy Ghost. That is take Jesus as Leader and Commander, and seek strength through Him by the Holy Spirit.

Vs. 11. The whole armor of God as in this passage the Christian is regarded as a soldier enlisted in the service of the Captain of their salvation, whose arch enemy is Satan called here the devil as the demon of all evil whose weapons are not material and whose warfare is against the soul, to "destroy both soul and body in hell." To stand, be unmoved by attack. The wiles, the crafty claims, the plausible plans, and deceptive disguises with which he comes.

Vs. 12. We wrestle, R. V., "Our wrestling," not against flesh and blood with armament of weapons, offensive and defensive and against men like ourselves. Principalities and powers, servants of Satan the prince of evil. The rulers of the darkness of this world. "World-rulers of this darkness," using world rulers as their tools: Spiritual wickedness, R. V. "Spiritual hosts of wickedness in heavenly places," or in brief wicked spirits having great power. High places, denote the spiritual world in opposition to or distinguished from the material.

Vs. 13. The whole armor, not merely any one piece, of God, as provided and supplied by God. These words were written by Paul chained to a Roman soldier. To withstand, to resist successfully the attack of the enemy. The evil day of trial and temptation when weakest in ourselves and the assaults of Satan are severe.

Vs. 14. Girt about with truth. The belt binds and holds all the other pieces of armor together. The belt also holds the sword and supported the body to give it firmness and strength Truth, sincerity, reality, desire to be true and the truth of the Gospel given in the revelation of God's Word which we should lay hold of and bind upon us. Truth does for us what the girdle does for the soldier. Breastplate of righteousness, imputed righteousness through which Satan cannot send darts to destroy us, and in wrought moral rectitude as the best assurance within to give courage and confidence

Vs. 15. Preparation of the gospel of peace which will both give sure-footing in peace with God, and swift-going to bear the message "Preparation" is readiness to go to fight the battle whose support and motive is the peace of God.

Vs. 16. Above all, over all. The shield of faith, trust in God, as the strongest protection from the darts of the enemy and best wall behind which to be safe, in using the sword. Fiery darts of the wicked (one), temptations slanders, doubts, evil suggestions, anger and any inflammable passions and lusts.

Vs. 17. Helmet, the defense and protection of the head, of salvation, the experiences and confidences of a present salvation will protect from intellectual doubts and fears. The sword of the Spirit, is the only offensive piece of armor needed. By this we attack and defeat the foe. The Word of God, the great weapon of the Christian.

Vs. 18. With all prayer, all kinds of prayer, public, private, personal and social, oral and unspoken.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

The enemy attacks us singly, but our sympathies should be for others, especially leaders, to pray for them as Paul asked:

1. That preachers may speak boldly.

2. That they may make plain the mysteries of the Gospel.

3. That the right word may be given from God in the "utterance of the Gospel."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Nov. 21st, 1897.

GRATITUDE.

Text for the week:

Monday. Gratitude for healing. Mark 5 : 1 20.

Tuesday. A late gratitude. Gen. 41 : 1-14.

Wednesday. A call to gratitude. 1 Sam. 19 : 1-7;

Thursday. Gratitude for food. John 6 : 1-14.

Friday. Be ye thankful. Col. 3 ; 12-17.

Saturday. For the Lord is good. 1 Cor. 6 : 1-11.

Sunday. Topic. Gratitude: To whom? For what? How shown?

Gratitude is a lively sense of kindness received with such a drawing of love toward the benefactor as creates a desire to repay it. It is a feeling which finds its natural and appropriate expression in the giving of thanks, but gratitude is more than thankfulness, it goes further and is more enduring.

Ingratitude is justly regarded as one of the most despicable of vices; its baseness being in proportion to the favors received and the relations between the bestower and the recipients; for gratitude is an obligation which accrues from any benefit or favor received.

Supreme gratitude we owe to God—the author of our being, our Preserver, and Him to whom we owe all the blessings of time and from whom we shall receive all the blessings of eternity.

God's bounteous hand it is that supplies thro nature our daily food; it is He that furnishes the delights we may experience, the bright flowers, the smiling landscapes, the sights to delight the eye and the sounds to entrance the ear.

The blessing of health we receive from Him, and such endowments of mind and body as enable us to live and enjoy life and to serve God and our fellow-men. To Him we owe every good thought; it is He who inspires every impulse to good and bestows the power to perform every good action.

As sinners, pre eminently, we owe thanks to God for His unspeakable gift. For the way of escape thro the atonement of Christ, from utter and irrevocable destruction. As saved thro that atonement we owe an inestimable debt of gratitude for the precious promises which are yea and amen in Christ Jesus. For the blessed relationship of sons of God here, and all the blessing and felicity in the time to come.

And we should show our gratitude by confessing Christ before men, by according to Him all praise and honor and glory, by serving Him with all the powers of body and mind and by surrendering ourselves to Him in all things to do His holy will.

CLARK In Clarkton, N. C., November 4th, after a long and severe illness, Mr. John H. Clark, Jr., in the 35th year of his age. PASTOR.

GREENLEE. On February 2d, 1897, at his home in Greenlee, N. C., David J. A. Greenlee quietly sank into the graceful slumber that knows no earthly waking, a blessed change from the painful, lingering illness that had kept him a prisoner in his room for many weary months. Having been deprived of a mother's care in infancy, he was adopted by his fraternal grandparents and reared by them as their own son. The advantages of the best schools the county afforded were supplemented by a year at Davidson College, from whose halls in the spring of '61, in company with many other noble students, he passed out as a volunteer in the Confederate army, returning at the close of the four year's service, unwounded, but with health much impaired by the exposure incident upon camp life.

In 1867, he was married to Miss Mary Burgin, of Marion, who with seven children, and seven grandchildren mourn the loss of a kind and loving husband and father. His eldest daughter, Mrs. Annie Queen, died five years since, leaving two infant daughters, and these little motherless ones were taken at once into his family, and cherished as his own.

In 1881, during the ministry of Rev. C. A. Munroe, he, with his wife and two eldest daughters, united with the Presbyterian church at Siloam, and though he passed through many and peculiar temptations and conflicts with the enemy of souls, he left his friends the blessed assurance that all was well at last. Fifty-six years of earthly pilgrimage—an eternity of rest! "Thanks be to God, who hath given him the victory."

We take the following from our Washington correspondence:

This is anti saloon week in Washington with all the friends of temperance. The Anti-Saloon League is holding its second annual series of temperance revival meetings, in Washington churches. The series opened at Foundry M. E. Chuch, Sunday night, which was designated on the programe as "general night," which meant a mass meeting for the general pubjic. It was shown at this meeting that among the visible results of the anti saloon agitation was a reduction in the number of saloons licensed in the District of Columbia from 1,100 in 1892 to 689 in the license year just ended, and the number of arrests for intoxication from 5,117 in 1892 to 3,620 in the last fiscal year.

The local committee of the Board of Trade having the matter in charge feel so confident that next year's session of the National Educational Association will be held in Washington that its members have started to secure subscribers to the fund of $10,000, estimated to be necessary to properly entertain the prominent guests during the progress of the convention. The Executive committee of the N. E. A., which recently visited Washington, and which had under consideration invitations for the convention to meet in Los Angeles, Omaha, and Salt Lake City, has, it is stated, decided in favor of Washington, provided the railroads will allow a satisfactory round trip rate. These facts have been put before the railroad officials interested and a favorable response is expected. If it is given, the convention will be held in Washington in June or July 1898.

FOR THE FAMILY.

THE GOLDEN TEXT.

I like to think on the Lord's Day morn,
Of the hosts of children far and wide,
Their faces fair and their brows unworn,
Who blithely sit at a mother's side,
Conning, in tones so low and sweet,
Over and over, with patient care,
Till by heart they know it and can repeat
The Golden Text, be it praise or prayer.

For praise or prayer it is sure to be—
The beautiful verse, a polished gem,
Culled from the sacred treasury,
And fit for a royal diadem.
I like to think that the children dear
Will know that truth when their heads are gray,
That the hallowed phrase their souls will cheer
Many a time on the pilgrim way.

I sometimes muse on the Lord's Day eve,
When the Golden Texts have all been said,
And my tender fancies I like to weave
Over many a small white bed.
The children sleep till to-morrow's morn,
Armed for whatever is coming next;
Their strength and courage alike unshorn!
And the sword they will carry—the Golden Text,

—Margaret Sangster.

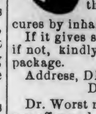
MEN I HAVE KNOWN.

CHARLES KINGSLEY.

I first met Charles Kingsley at the house of Archbishop Benson who had then been recently appointed Head Master of Wellington College. Wellington College is very near Kingsley's Rectory of Eversley, and Kingsley's eldest son was then a Wellington boy. For this reason, and from his natural deep interest in the rising generation as "the trustees of posterity," Kingsley took the deepest interest in the heroum filii—the boys at the college, which was then beginning its career. He used to ride over to the college on his strong, serviceable horse, to accompany the boys in their paper-chases and to encourage them in all manly sports. On this occasion he preached to the boys in the new and then undecorated school chapel. His sermon was extempore; and I can remember how, as we came out of the chapel, his boy took him by the arm and said: "Oh, father, what a jolly sermon!" It was only "jolly" in schoolboy parlance as being interesting and arresting their attention, as otherwise it was a little sad in tone. I still remember it. He was instructing the lads in their duties to each other, how they ought to respect each other and to practice mutual forbearance. One of his illustrations was that they should not be to each other like a lot of hounds in a kennel, snarling and yelping and biting each other, and each determined to secure for itself the biggest bone. In the form of the sermon there was nothing literary, it was a homely, practical address to boys by one who understood and sympathized with them.

He was at that time, as he often was, extremely depressed. His admirable biography leaves on us the true impression that, while he had occasional fits of exuberant gayety, the prevalent tone of his mind was sad. He felt bitterly that isolation in the Church which he shared with his friend and teacher, F. D. Maurice. He shrank from those savage attacks which fell to his lot, as to the lot of all true men, and complained at one time that "the papers were all cursing him like a dog" because, with Carlyle and Ruskin, he thought that there was something to be said for Governor Eyre. At the time of which I speak he had recently finished his most brilliant novel. "Hypatia," and was feeling the subsequent reaction. He said that the doctors told him he had exhausted the phosphorus in his brain, and advised him to give ample time to sleep and to eat plenty of fish. His latter years, when he was Canon, first of Chester, then for a short time of Westminster, were among the happiest years of his life. He neither expected nor desired any further promotion. At both cathedrals he did admirable work. He always loved to see young men about him and to train them in strength and manliness. At Chester he formed a large Natural History Society, and his walks and talks with the members were found to be full of intellectual stimulus. At Westminster he preached again many of the sermons which he had preached at Chester, and they produced a profound effect. It was curious to see him stand in the pulpit and gaze round him on the vast congregations with something of anxious curiosity. He felt the responsibility of those occasions; but he managed to create a sort of electric sympathy between his hearers and himself—a sympathy created by the depth of his sincerity and earnestness.—The Very Rev. F. W. Farrar, D. D., Dean of Canterbury, in Independent.

No matter how much of a business woman a woman may be, when the little love-god makes up his mind to shoot, there is no protection against his arrow. Yet many a young woman whose affections are already engaged, hesitates to assume the obligations of wifehood and motherhood, because she feels unfitted for them by some physical weakness or disease.



The special ailments to which the feminine organism is liable, not only unfit a woman for happy wifehood and motherhood, but incapacitate her for any sphere of action. No woman can discharge the daily duties of any position with comfort or satisfaction who is constantly weighed down by headaches, backaches and dragging, weakening drains.

Troubles of this nature are not by any means a necessity of womanhood. They are positively and completely cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It imparts genuine health and strength to the womanly organs. It was devised for this one purpose by an eminent specialist in this particular field of practice.

"For several years I suffered with prolapsus of the uterus," writes Miss A. Lee Schuster, of Box 12, Rodney, Jefferson Co., Miss. "Our family physician treated me for kidney trouble, and everything else but the right thing. I grew worse and worse. My body was emaciated, hands and feet clammy and cold, stomach weak, with great palpitation of the heart. I dreaded for night to come for I would suffer with nausea all night and so I continued until some kind unknown friend sent me your book with a marked page. I began taking your 'Favorite Prescription,' contrary to my family's wishes, and I began to improve right away. I have taken three bottles and now I am very nearly well and am very happy, and thankful to you."

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

THE LITTLE BOY IN THE HARVEST FIELD.

Out in the fields in the midsummer heat,
The reapers were busy binding the wheat,
And the farmer looked with an anxious eye
At the "thunder caps" in the western sky.
"All hands must work now with a will," said he;
"There's a storm a-brewing up there, I see."

Then the bright-faced boy at his father's side,
To help bind the sheaves most patiently tried;
But he could not manage the work at all,
For those willing hands were too weak and small.
"I can't do this," said the brave little man,
"So I'll give it up and do what I can."

The men are thirsty and far from the spring:
"It will give them a lift," thought he, "to bring,
A pail of that clear, cold water, that flows
Down the mountain side where the sweet fern grows."
And soon he was dipping his little cup
In the mossy place where it bubbled up.

And the joy of doing something he could
Shone on his face as he came through the wood.
"God bless the boy!" every man cried out,
As he passed the pure, cold water about.
'Twas sustaining power—they bound the grain
Just in time to save it from drenching rain.

Then the father said that night, with a smile,
While the mother listened with pride the while:
"My boy, you helped harvest the field of wheat,
Bringing water when we were parched with heat.
Remember through life, my dear little man,
God only bids us to do what we can."

HOW DICK VISITED THE HATCHERY.

BY ALIX THORN.

Dick had been expecting Farmer Bascom for several days. Monday he had stood by the gate watching for him, and had kept his shirt waist unusually clean. Tuesday he walked several blocks down the street to catch the very first glimpse of the team. Wednesday he almost decided that Farmer Bascom had forgotten him, but on Thursday morning, bright and early, before he had time to wonder, up rattled the heavy farm wagon, with Farmer Bascom smiling down from the high seat, and all ready to take the little boy off to the country. His mama bought milk of Farmer Bascom, who drove in every morning from his farm five miles away. Sometimes little William and Abbie Ann Bascom came too, and told Dick wonderful stories about wild little calves and foolish wooly lambs, that scampered over the wide fields, and might be seen at all times of day. But most delightful were the tales of the new house near the farm, where were hundreds of baby fish.

"They truly live there, like real folks, and when you come out, Dickie," said Abbie Ann, "you'll see for youself."

So now, this bright June day, Dick was to view these glories with his own eyes. Away trotted the strong farm horses, through the busy city streets, past meadows where daisies and clovers nodded. The fresh wind blew in their faces. Every moment they were drawing nearer to William and Abbie Ann, till, at last, they drew up before a low yellow farmhouse. Down the path raced the little Bascoms, and bore away their small visitor in triumph to the haymow and barnyard, and so interesting did it all prove that they returned only when the dinner-horn blew long and loud.

"After dinner," announced Farmer Bascom, "every mother's son of us must go down to the fish-works, I tell you it's a sight. Crowds of city folks come out on their wheels to see it."

Soon after dinner they started, the little folks well on ahead, Mr. and Mrs. Farmer Bascom following more slowly. But no sooner had they reached the lane, when across a level field near by came rushing a dog, and welcomed the party. Such a funny dog, with a rough gray coat and the brightest of eyes!

"It's our Trig," explained William. "He's been off all the morning, hunting woodchucks. Goes all over the farm looking for 'em."

Delighted enough was Trig to join them, and quite insisted on leading the way, stopping every few moments to look back and make sure that they were following.

On past the white-oak grove, over a little foot-bridge, down a steep hill, then over another bridge, and they had reached the fish hatcheries.

Inside the one-story building they went, and saw trough after trough placed side by side down the long, cool room. A little rill of water ran into each trough, and through the water darted the little fish,—all speckled trout, the larger ones already beginning to show their colors.

"The fish-eggs are sent to us," the man in charge explained. "They soon hatch out, and now we have nealy half a million of the lively little fellows to feed and look after."

"Why, what do they eat?" exclaimed Dick.

"Raw liver, chopped fine," answered the man. "They learn my call very quickly, and come hurrying to me when feeding-times comes. Once a week we send cans of them away to fill the streams all over the State; but they don't forget me, and if I should visit those streams long after, and give them the call, every youngster would come hurrying as fast as his fins could carry him. See how frisky they are!"

And, taking a tall tumbler, he dipped it into one of the troughs, and instanly it was filled with brown little fish, swimming round and round their shining prison, their bodies glistening, their tails whisking.

But what did it mean? The water began to flow out in a muddy stream, and soon the fish were hidden from view. Behind the house was the great shallow spring that supplied the water. Something or somebody was disturbing it. Up the hill ran the children, and easily discovered the culprit. Who but Trig, taking a beautiful bath in the spring, and seeming to enjoy it immensely, walking round and round, getting it more and more muddy every moment?

Trig refused to come out for William and Abbie Ann, and it was only when Farmer Bascom sternly ordered him to leave that he obeyed. But he shook himself so vigorouly that the small folks were well spattered, and a few muddy drops fell on Mrs. Farmer Bascom's best white apron.

"The fish don't mind the muddy water a bit," said the man. "Every rain makes it just like this. In fact, I rather think they like it."

Back they all went to the farmhouse, and Abbie Ann picked a generous bouquet for Dick to carry home to his mama,—red and white roses, nasturtiums, yellow lilies, candytuft, and geraniums.

Not until the peepers began their merry chorus did Dick start for home, Trig soberly trotting behind the wagon to keep the dark away. And the city lights were twinkling before the house was reached.

"Everything was beautiful," Dick told mama, "the calves, the sheep, and Trig, but oh, the fish and the fish-man were best of all!"—Sunday School Times.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Presbyterian: I am in the third grade and I study four books. They are Harrington's spelling book, Belfield's Arithmetic, Tarbel's Lessons in Language and Barnes Third Reader. I am nearly up with my brother. He is in the fourth grade. He was in the third grade when I started to school, and now I am in the third grade and he is in the fourth grade. There was a great fire here and burnt seven prize-rooms and eight dwelling houses. It was set from Mr. Bass's which caught first. They threw some crumbs of tobacco in the furnace and sparks flew on the roof and set it on fire. It was set last Thursday a week ago and is smoking yet. We can see the front view from our house.

LITTLE EVELYN JONES.
Durham, N. C.

Dear Editor:—I was appointed by the society to write to the PRESBYTERIAN and it is with much pleasure I do so. We have a splendid little society and we meet every Saturday before the second Sunday. Our society had an ice-cream supper Wednesday night. We had a very nice time. I go to school every day and Sunday too. My Sunday-school teacher is Mrs. Reinhardt and my other teacher is Mrs. McBee. I like them both very much. I hope I will have the pleasure of writing to your paper again some time.

Yours truly,
SALLIE MAY QUICKLE.
Lincolnton, N. C.

Dear Presbyterian: It has been sometime since I have written to you. Papa takes your good paper. I go to school now. We have twelve scholars. We write letters one week and compositions the next week. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. My teacher is Miss Lizzie Wooten. Papa is the superintendent of the Sunday-school at Milton. We have preaching twice a month. Mr. Ferguson preaches every second Sunday and Mr. Shamberger preaches every fourth Sunday. I enjoy going to preaching. I wish we could have preaching every Sunday. I will close hoping to see my letter in print.

Your little friend,
EVELENA MCGIRT.

Dear Editor: I will write and ask you to put my name on the "Honor Roll" as having perfectly recited the Shorter Catechism. I recited it perfectly to mama, beatitudes, hymns, prayers and everything. The last time Mr. Evans, our pastor, was here he heard it and said I answered it satisfactorily. I am going to school again and am glad to say that we have our same teacher we had last year, Miss Hall. I will close by asking a question.

Your true friend,
E. MYRTLE WILKINSON.

That the Board of Regents and the Superintendent, Rev R W Boyd, be commended for the prudent and faithful discharge of the trust committed to them.

That in view of the increased number of orphans to be maintained as soon as the "Rumple Hall" is furnished the Synod recommends:

(1) That all our ministers and sessions be urged to make more earnest efforts to secure more liberal contributions to this object on Thanksgiving Day, and upon other occasions.

(2) That the list of monthly contributions be enlarged until every Sunday-school in the Synod shall make a monthly contribution for the orphans, and that our various benevolent societies be requested to make the orphans one of their beneficiary objects.

(3) That farmers, manufacturers, merchants and others be urged to contribute material aid to the orphans by giving of the products of the farm, the mill and the counter for this purpose.

The report of the Colored Academic and Industrial School was presented by Rev L B Turnbull, D D, President of the Board. The Synod directed that all of the December collection for Colored Evangelization be sent to the treasurer of this Board in order to put the institution on a better basis.

The Synod urges all pastors and sessions to give more prominence to the Bible cause and to be more faithful in securing collections for this cause on the third Sabbath of October or as soon thereafter as practicable.

Rev J B Shearer, D D, presented the annual report on Church and Christian Education, showing increased interest in this matter throughout the Synod, larger attendance upon all our colleges and seminaries and increasing contributions for this cause.

Rev E Daniel, D D, from the committee of Peace Institute reported progress in the conduct of the business committed to them and upon request the committee was continued.

A report on the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN was presented by Rev E Daniel, D D, stating that the paper will soon change hands, will be edited by Rev A J McKelway and will be moved to Charlotte, N. C.

In reference to Ministerial Education the Synod urged the Presbyteries to be careful in the reception of candidates, to adopt the Assembly's apportionments and cordially commends Rev J H Lumpkin, the secretary of the Assembly's Committee.

Rev Roger Martin and others presented a protest against the decision of the Synod in the judicial case from Mecklenburg Presbytery. The protest was admitted to record without answer.

After the adoption of a hearty vote of thanks, the Synod adjourned to meet in the Presbyterian church, Gastonia, N.C., on Tuesday before the last Sabbath in October, 1898, at 7.30 p. m.

SAY SOES.

Some idea of the fine point to which platinum wire can be drawn will be realized from the fact that threads have been drawn, two of which can be twisted together and inserted within the hollow of a human hair. These threads are so infinitesimal that it needs a magnifying glass to see them.

The prince in the fairy tale proceeded with his glowing description of the home he had provided for his bride. "A hundred witching odors," he exclaimed, "shall greet thy nostril's!" "Can't you made it ninety-nine scents?" suddenly demanded the princess, who was inclined to be advanced a couple of centuries on such a matter, and whose every aspiration was looking forward to a more practical age.

Whoever would govern a child must first govern himself. A word spoken hastily, a reproof given in anger, may be the beginning of alienation, or a lesson in passion, of which the unhappy fruits will appear long after.

THINGS USEFUL.

An Economical Mat. — Several newspapers laid one upon the other, then covered with a sheet of brown paper and stitched together near the edge, make an excellent mat to lay upon a hardwood floor in front of the sink or range in a kitchen and will save the cook a great deal of work. When soiled this mat can be thrown aside and easily replaced by a fresh one.

Old-fashioned Apple Pudding.—Half-pound fine chopped suet, one pound flour, one teaspoonful salt, and one cup cold water. Sift flour and salt in a bowl, add the suet and mix the whole with the water into a stiff paste. Roll it out on a floured board a quarter inch in thickness, put in the center half a dozen finely cut tart apples, sprinkle one tablespoonful sugar and a little flour between them and add a pinch of nutmeg and one teaspoonful butter in small pieces. Dip a large napkin in hot water, wring out and dust with flour. Cover the apples with the paste, lay the pudding in center of cloth, fold the cloth together, and tie it tightly. Have a large kettle of water with half teaspoonful salt over the fire: as soon as it boils put in the pudding, cover the kettle and boil two hours. Serve with nutmeg sauce. The pudding should be served as soon as taken from the water.

FROM GLORY TO GLORY.

BY THE LATE REV. W. B. TIDBALL.

2 Cor. 3:18.

From glory to glory! All hail the bright way!
Our Saviour has traced it to life's endless day.
We gaze in the mirror, we con "the old story,";
While changed to His image, from glory to glory.

O, nearer and nearer, each day and each hour,
Thou Spirit transforming, Thou Spirit of power,
As Thou leadest us on, le, each feature's made clearer
The nearer we come to Him—nearer, still nearer.

And fairer and fairer grows each radiant form,
From inward thought glowing, from feeling waxed warm,
The form that is worn, like the spirit that's nearer,
Transfigured in beauty, grows fairer, still fairer.

So higher and higher through sorrow and bliss,
Still longing to see Him, and be as He is;
But as we approach Him, He seems to retire
In light inaccessible, higher, still higher.

Then brighter and brighter grows His lovely face;
The more we behold it, the more we would trace
Each beauty resplendent, the white light grow's whiter,
The light of His glory shines brighter, still brighter.

From glory to glory! But shall we aspire
To reach His infinitude? Vain the desire.
Yet when time is dead, and eternity's hoary,
We'll rise in His image from glory to glory.

If you really have the mind that was in Christ, you will desire nothing so much as to do the will of the Father.

REV. A. L. PHILLIPS, D. D.

Rev. A. L. Phillips was born Sept. 20th, 1859, in Chapel Hill, N. C., where his grandfather and father taught mathematics for long years. His mother was a Battle from Edgecombe county. In 1868, Dr. Chas. Phillips removed to Davidson and remained till 1875, when the University was restored to the hands of its friends. His children received most of their early training in private schools at Davidson. In 1874 the subject of this sketch was sent to Hughes' Academy, Orange county, N. C., where he had a careful preparation for college from one of the best teachers of his day, Sam. W. Hughes. In 1876, he entered the classical course at the University, and remained four years, ranking among the best scholars of his class. After graduation he taught one year with Maj. Lynch at High Point. During the University vacations he was a constant attendant on the sessions of the State Normal School, in which by and by he became lecturer in geography, both at Wilson and Chapel Hill.

In 1881, he went to Clinton, N.C., where he was a successful teacher until the summer of 1884.

He joined the church at Chapel Hill during his second college year, and became interested in the Y. M. C. A. work there. After graduation he took a deep interest in Sabbath-schools and prayer-meetings. For some years he felt that he would one day become a minister. The call came irresistibly in the fall of 1883, when he presented himself to Wilmington Presbytery. He was licensed in the Second, (now St. Andrews) church, Wilmington. Continuing to teach through that session he supplied regularly Oak Plains church in Sampson county. In the summer of 1884, the Presbytery assigned him the group of churches, Burgaw, Mt. Williams and Topsail in Pender county. Receiving a call from these churches he was ordained in Rockfish church in 1884. With the addition of the Duplin Roads church he served this group for two years, during which time the Lord most graciously blessed the work, which had been prepared by faithful and experienced ministers before his arrival. In 1887, he was called and removed to Fayetteville. Here too, he was fortunate in following Dr. H. G. Hill, whose eighteen years of earnest preaching had prepared the people to go forward. The Lord added many souls to the church while he was there, and built up His people. In 1889, he removed to Birmingham, Ala., where he became the first pastor of the South Highlands church. This church grew fast because of the great up-building of the city. In 1890, he was elected without the slightest solicitation on his part Field Secretary of Colored Evangelization. In 1891, the General Assembly created the new Executive Committee of Colored Evangelization, and Mr. Phillips was unanimously elected Secretary. For seven years he has given himself without reserve to the development of this, the most delicate and difficult work of our Church.

In Jan. 1883, he was married to Miss Susan J. Moseley, of Clinton, N. C. Three fine children have blessed their union. In all his work he has been greatly sustained by the self-denial, prudence and devotion of his wife.

In 1895, the University of North Carolina conferred on him the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity.

Dr. Phillips has a vigorous body, a clear head, and a warm heart.

God always has an angel of help for those who are willing to do their duty.—Dr. Cuyler.

PERSONS AND PAPERS.

You have not fulfilled every duty, unless you have fulfilled that of being cheerful and pleasant.—C. Buxton.

* * *

It is one of the laws of God's kingdom that the doing of good brings a blessing back to the door. He who makes another person happy wins happiness for himself, while he who seeks only to make himself so fails to accomplish his desire. He who tries, in obedience to the command of Christ, to spread the knowledge of the gospel becomes himself more largely filled with the divine grace. Herald and Presbyter.

* * *

What we all want is inward rest—rest of heart and brain; the calm, strong, self-contained, self-denying character which needs no stimulants, for it has no fits of depression; which needs no narcotics for it has no fits of excitement; which needs no ascetic restraint, for it is strong enough to use God's gifts without abusing them; the character, in a word, which is truly temperate, not in drink and food merely, but in all desires, thoughts and actions.—Kingsley.

It is the singleness of this life in God that gave its uniqueness to the personality of Jesus, referring back all his experiences to the infinitely Perfect, all his sorrows to the eternal blessedness, all his disappointments to the living Fountain of hope. The deluding impressions of a drudging and suffering world were habitually checked and transcended by a recovered contact with the one and only God.—James Martineau.

* * *

Aggressive movement is the demand of the hour. Satan's works must be stormed boldly, steadily, intelligently and unitedly. All churches are feeling the need of enlarged evangelistic efforts. The old methods, good in their place, but not sufficient to accomplish all that is either desired or needed, must be supplemented by something more magnetic, suitable, taking and impressive. Yet the outre and extravagant must be avoided. Everything must be done decently and in order; in a way to command the respect and support of wise and farseeing leaders and of active, thoughtful and reliable workers.—The Presbyterian.

AN EXPLANATION.

We hear, occasionally, such references to an incident of the Summer Conference which was held by and for Christian Workers at Northfield in August last (1897.) that we suppose a full statement and explanation will be interesting. Rev. H. Grattan Guinness, M. D, so closely identified with the Congo Mission work and so well known as such was at the conference. Mr. Moody asked him to lead a missionary meeting one night. He did so, and the interest was so marked that a second meeting was appointed for the next night. In the late afternoon of this second day a band of missionaries was taking tea with Rev. Dr. Mabie, when Dr. Guinness suggested the need and appropriateness of having a Northfield fund to aid any of the student volunteers who could not be sent out by the church committees or boards, so that they might go out under denominational control and authority, supported or aided from this fund. This was thought desirable because the student volunteer movement originated in the hall of Mt. Hermon School for boys associated with the work of Northfield.

At first Dr. Mabie and Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D. D., editor of the Missionary Review of the World, opposed the plan. But they yielded on further discussion and that night proposed and urged the scheme, so that many thought it originated with them, not knowing until later its real author.

As soon as proposed, Mr. Moody with that wise common sense for which he is so noted, objected and left the hall, refusing to accept any monies offered. About $2,500 dollars was raised at once. But seeing Mr. Moody leave, the promoters of the plan, at the close of the meeting, followed him to his home, where he gave such sound and sensible reasons for his objection to the plan, that it was at once abandoned, and the next morning the proposition was withdrawn by Dr. Pierson seconded by Dr. Mabie. Three things should be marked here. First, that Dr. Pierson did not originate the plan, at first opposed it, and promptly yielded to the suggestion of Mr. Moody to withdraw.

Second. This is but one of the many striking incidents of the strong common sense and wisdom of Mr. Moody, as a leader and guide and balance of forces in these great gatherings.

Third. That Mr. Moody paid a ringing and deserved tribute to the great missionary agencies of the churches, declaring that no wiser or fitter men can be found to manage and direct the missionary forces and finances of the churches than these. He said that any additional channel or agency to solicit or receive and disburse funds might discredit these agencies, and he would not be a party to such. This comes with special force to us, if any of us criticize our committee and run off after extra denominational channels to pour out our gifts for carrying the Gospel to all the world. Our Foreign Mission Committee is composed of earnest, consecrated, sensible men, who give time and labor without compensation to manage our missionary interests. We ought to sustain them, and support the work.

A FALLING OFF. Just here it is opportune to remind all our churches, that many have given nothing since last March, and some have given less than last year. So the treasury receipts for the cause of Foreign Missions which began so favorably are now less than last year to this date by several thousand dollars. We urge all our churches to contribute to this cause and to forward at once to Mr. Erskine Reed, Treasurer, P. O. Box 457 Nashville, Tenn.

THE PRACTICAL PHILOSOPHY. This volume by the eminent and beloved father of our Church, Rev. Dr. R. L. Dabney, is sent to us by the Crescent Book House of Mexico, Mo. It is described on the title page as "The Philosophy of the feelings, of the will and of the conscience, with the ascertainment of particular rights and duties." It is enough to say that Dr. Dabney is the author, to commend this book. That we say to add that it is worthy of the author and deserves to be studied by all Christians, especially public teachers and preachers. We wish all our young men who are preparing to preach would study this book. Rev. S. B. Erwin, who solicited subscribers for this book, asks that subscribers send for their copies. He hopes that others will subscribe and send for the book at once as the contract with the printers makes this request necessary. The book is substantially bound in cloth and has 521 pages.

IT HAS BEEN going the rounds that the Synod of North Carolina adopted the following resolution regarding the Princeton Inn and its application for license to sell liquors:

"This Synod deeply regrets that Princeton University, a recognized institution of Presbyterian antecedents and proclivities, has become compromised on the saloon question and that Presbyterian ministers in this connection have given their countenance to the saloon, signing a petition for the sale of intoxicants in Princeton."

It is a mistake. The question, so far as we know, and we think we certainly know, was not before the Synod of North Carolina in any way. Under all the circumstances any action by that Synod could hardly have failed to be invidious, notwithstanding the individual opinions of members of the Synod would be fully in accord with the resolution given above. It was altogether right and proper that the Synod of Catawba, of the Northern Church, should express itself unmistakably on the subject.

While on the subject it may not be amiss to give the following from the correspondence of the Baltimore Sun:

The New Brunswick Presbytery met in the First Presbyterian church here [Princeton, Nov. 11th]. Prof. Charles W. Shields, of Princeton University, who has been censured by members of the Presbytery for signing the petition for a liquor license for the Princeton Inn, presented a letter of withdrawal from the Presbyterian Church in order, as his letter stated, that he might "enter some other portion of the visible church to which the good hand of God may guide."

A resolution was presented by Rev. Dr. John de Witt, professor of Church history in the Princeton Theological Seminary, that the resignation be accepted. There were protests and requests that a resolution of regret should accompany the withdrawal. The argument continued a long time and Rev. Dr. Rogan offered a substitute resolution to the effect that a committee of three clergymen and two laymen be appointed to confer with Dr. Shields.

It was finally decided to appoint a committee to inquire into and report upon the case as proposed. The committee consisted of Dr. Duffield, Dr. Rogan and Dr. Studdiford, clergymen, and Judge Lanning and Dr. Hamilton, elders.

After an hour's deliberation the committee reported that it had first accepted Dr. Shields' resignation from the Church and instructed that his name be removed from the roll. It also reported the following resolution:

"Owing to the previous misapprehension of the action of the Presbytery, we deem it advisable to call the attention of our elders, ministers and members to the deliverances of the assemblies of 1871 and 1877 in regard to the signing of petitions for the sale of intoxicating liquors or beverages."

These reports were adopted and the Presbytery then adjourned.

THE CONSENSUS OF OPINION on this subject seems to be that Prof. Shields and those who acted with him made a mistake, a lamentable mistake, and the best thing for him to have done would have been manfully to have confessed his error, and to have labored as far as possible to undo the infinite harm that has been done through his instrumentality.

The Interior says: "We are informed that the Inn will surrender its license—and there let the matter be dropped." We sincerely hope the Interior has not been misinformed. If the license should be surrendered that would, in the language of the times, "close the incident."

And now let us give credit to the Voice for revealing and exposing this iniquity. Attempts were made to discredit that paper and its statements were denied—never with the backing of evidence—but in the end it has proved that the Voice was correct and accurate in its charges. We give all honor to the Voice.

THE LECTURE ON JOHN CALVIN, delivered by Dr. E. Daniel, before the Westminster League of the First Church, Raleigh, must have been not only most enjoyable, but highly instructive. The News and Observer doubtless characterizes it fitly as "charming." The historical limning, in which the great reformer was placed in the centre with his contemporaries around him, must have been exhilarating to those who love to live among the worthies of the past, and the description of the moral condition of society in Calvin's day, and the causes that worked together to make John Calvin what he was we can readily believe was surpassingly fine. But what a treat it would have been to have been able to avail ourselves of the kind invitation to be present, and hear Dr. Daniel in his own inimitable way discuss:

1. Calvin as a Moral Reformer.
2. Calvin in his domestic relations
3. Calvin as a Theological teacher.
4. Calvin as related to Servetus.
5. Calvin as a man of hard work.
6. Calvin and Calvinism in history, as attested by Bancroft, Guizot, and Froude.

THE REPORT is abroad that the American Bible Society is in such straits that it will be compelled to sell its New York Bible House. It is no secret that the liberality of the Christian public which has heretofore sustained this society and enabled it with the blessing of God to do such a marvellously good work has considerably abated—the more's the pity—but matters are not as bad as they have been represented. The Society, as we understand, lays up nothing—that is expends any increase of income in extending its work. Of course then as receipts fall off there must be retrenchment. The income from rents of rooms in the Bible House has been cut down by removal of the societies that occupied these rooms, and the society now has more room than it needs. Is is therefore not impossible that the present Bible House will be sold and another place be chosen in which to carry on the good work. The work itself under any circumstances cannot be discontinued.

THE INDIA FUND. Rev. T. S. Wynkoop has sent to Rev. A. D. McClure an itemized account and vouchers of the use made of the funds sent to him, all of which Mr. McClure will keep on file. Summing up his statement Mr. Wynkoop says: "I am sure every cent of your remittances has been put to the best use in the name of Jesus." God bless you and all the donors. You will perhaps hear all about it in the final day. Meantime, the Lord knows, and He will accept and bless them.

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE ORPHANS' HOME AT BARIUM SPRINGS, N. C.

The Orphans' Home has passed a happy and prosperous year, and unites with you in praising God for His loving kindness and tender mercies. In making up your thank offerings please remember two things: First, that the number of children to be provided for is much larger than any previous year. Secondly, that there is at this date a deficiency in the Support Fund amounting to $465.

Praying that you every one may be found among the cheerful givers whom the Lord loveth, and upon whom He may pour His richest blessings in all future time,

Yours in the care of the fatherless,
R. W. BOYD,
Supt. Orphans' Home.

DAVIDSON NOTES.

This is the week of prayer, observed by the Young Men's Christian Associations throughout the country, and services will be held every evening at half past six in the Association Hall. We are fortunate in having secured for these services Rev. J. W. Stagg the popular pastor of the Second church of Charlotte. He is a most attractive speaker and is eminently fitted for work among young men.

During the past month several of the members of the Faculty have been temporarily absent attending meetings of various Presbyteries and Synods. Drs. Martin and Harrison have visited Bethel Presbytery and the Synod of South Carolina, while Dr. Shearer, having presided over the sessions of the North Carolina Synod as Moderator, is now at Rome in attendance on the Synod of Georgia.

Rev. A. K. Pool, whose health was seriously impaired by his unremitting labors as pastor of the mission churches near Concord, will spend the year teaching music, making Davidson his headquarters. His plan is to conduct congregational singing-classes in such churches as my desire it. Any church which values congregational singing will do well to secure his services, as he is not only one of the finest singers in the State, but a teacher of long and successful experience. It is hoped that by the close of the year his health will be fully restored.

The inter-class contests for the Alumni Cup are steadily growing in interest. Never in the history of the college, probably, have there been so many men regularly playing in the college teams. Three match games are played each week, but of the five contesting elevens no one can yet spot the winner. L.

HOME MISSIONS IN EAST TEXAS.

There is a vast difference between the practicability of working successfully the Home Mission field in East Texas and the older States. Few, if any, who have not been on the ground and formed some idea of the situation from practical observation, have any real conception of what the field really needs, and how it may be successfully worked. The writer doubts seriously, if even the committee at Atlanta, though the honored and efficient secretary has visited the Church courts in Texas, and conversed with the ministers and elders, if even he properly grasps the situation. To do this, a man must acquaint himself with the people and their peculiar environment. All over this part of the State, isolated Presbyterians may be found, who, for want of proximity to a Presbyterian church, have become practically lost to the Church of their choice. And this state of things may be accounted for in two ways: First, on account of their isolation, the home missionary is not able to reach and gather them into folds. Then again, neither has the Presbyterial or Central Committee the means at their disposal to send out and support a sufficient number of home missionaries to overtake the herculean task. The natural consequence inevitably follows, the people are being gradually absorbed by other denominations.

Take Anderson county as an illustration. The population of the county is estimated at 25,000. Of these, about 11,000 are congregated in Palestine, the county seat. All over this county may be found persons from the States east of the Mississippi who have been raised Presbyterians; and, many of them doubtless, when they moved to the county were members of the Presbyterian Church. They settled in the rural districts, engaged in agricultural pursuits: but too far removed from any church privileges of their own with the Church's present facilities for reaching them with the Gospel, there are not enough of them living near together, to justify the expenditure of carrying them the Gospel. Then the railroad facilities for reaching these various points, are not as convenient, as in localities which have been settled longer; consequently it is not only a laborious, but also a very expensive task. The result is, the people are not reached; and, they are either practically out of the church, or have drifted into others.

But you may say: It is their own fault. A member of the church ought not to settle and raise his family in a community where he could not enjoy church privileges of his own choice. True enough. But men ought not to sin; but facts show they do so; and, it is the Church's business to show them their sin and induce them to repent. And so, men will live where they cannot enjoy the privileges of their own Church, and it is equally as binding on the Church that she hunt up her stray sheep, and feed them with the bread of life. These Presbyterians are scattered all over this sunny land, in the rural districts, and it is the duty of the Church to see to it that the means of grace are brought within their reach. If the retail merchant does not go to the wholesale house for goods, the drummer is sent to him and he is hunted up. The church might learn a useful lesson from business men along this line.

Now what is the local church doing to reach these scattered members and adherents. There is only one Presbyterian church in the county. Its membership is about 225. They have a strong, logical Gospel preacher, employ him for all his time and pay him a salary of $1,500 annually with the use of a large and commodious manse. The Sabbath-school numbers about 120. They have a full bench of elders and board of deacons. But the church confines all her energies to the city. It has been said: To build up a city church you must work the country, (and some of the Texas ministry are doing so) but the city church of Anderson county seem to think they have sufficient work within the corporate limits. Hence, there is no evening appointments in the suburbs or country, no mission Sabbath-schools organized, and as already stated the Presbyterial, nor Central Home Mission Committee have the means to do this work, and the consequence is, the work is undone, and the people are lost to our Church. Why is it that other denominations can go out into the rural districts in this Southwestern field and organize and maintain churches; but Presbyterians must confine themselves to town and cities, we leave for wiser heads to determine.

Two things are badly needed just now in Texas. First, pastors and sessions ought to extend their efforts beyond the narrow limits of their particular organization, and go out into the outlying districts. Then we need Scriptural evangelists, who are willing to go out into the rural districts, away from the towns and the sound of the railroad locomotive among the farms, and gather up the stray sheep, and, while gathering them up, at the same time acquaint the masses of the people with the grand old Scriptural doctrines and polity of Presbyterianism, and we venture the prediction, that if the Home Mission branch of our Church could be manipulated in this, or a similar and better way for a few years, Texas would soon become one of the strong-holds of Presbyterianism. The people are here, and they are pouring in rapidly every year. The population is increasing with gigantic strides, and if we do not reach them with the Gospel, somebody else will, and the question with us is: Shall we reach and hold them, or allow them to be gathered into other fields?

A VOICE FROM ARKANSAS

AYING "COME OVER AND HELP US."

We have appointed a protracted meeting to be held in the Presbyterian church at Monticello, to begin on December 8th and continue through the 19th. All the other churches in town will unite with us. We have the promise of Rev. Wm. Black, of North Carolina, to conduct the meeting. We have also promised a consideration for his services, to your superintendent of evangelist work. We need Almighty God here to overthrow the powers of the Devil and infidelity. The Devil is busy circulating the most blasphemous sheets, that breathe the very breath of hell. His minions are spending their time and money to poison the minds of young men, and to keep the old men in the toils of unbelief. He has hundreds of followers here. His plan is, to bring the only scheme of redemption into contempt. Poor fallen human nature, comes into this world on the Devil's side. Hence he has the advantage of numbers. He has four or five followers in this town to our one. But we have the Almighty God on our side. He alone can make us a new creation—children of God. It is distressing to see men battling their way down to hell, against the powers of truth and the appeals of the Gospel—just going it blind to eternal ruin. What does infidelity hope to gain for all its pains? Nothing, absolutely nothing. Christianity blesses the world with all its spiritual blessings. Infidelity tries to curse and destroy all that Christianity gives. Infidelity wants no God, no Bible, no Sabbath, no Saviour and no heaven. It is the very opposite of Christianity in everything. We have an earnest battle in Arkansas against the powers of darkness. Sometimes Satan uses indirectness or the let-alone policy to destroy souls; but here he is intensely aggressive and will continue that sort of warefare till routed and driven from the field. I earnestly ask the praying people of North Carolina with whom I labored so many years to pray that the God of salvation and of Pentecost, will be with us in mighty power at our coming meeting.

Your fellow servant in Christ,
S. C. ALEXANDER,
Monticello, Ark.

A PURIFIED CONSCIENCE.

When a sin is committed it makes a stain on the conscience, and the stain burns. This pain is the hint of nature to seek removal of the sin. But if it is not taken, the pain in time assuages, and stain may be added to stain until conscience is defiled through and through.

In such a defiled conscience there are terrible latent possibilities, for the pain may at any time break out again. Sometimes it does so in time—when a man is awakened to a sense of his bad past, and in pain and tears cries out for deliverance from it. Sometimes it is by the sudden apparition of eternity, in which it can perceive nothing but a fearful menace of judgment, that the conscience is aroused. We have reason to believe that the latent pain of unpardonable sin, if it is not experienced in time, will break out all the more intolerably beyond the veil.

Can this defilement be removed? This surely is the question for every child of Adam, for what conscience is there which has not been stained with sin? It is a question which the conscience itself cannot answer. Conscience prescribes our duty, and rewards us if we perform it. If we fail, it fills us with alarm and forebodings, but it cannot tell how these may be removed. This honor belongs to the Gospel of Christ. Like the law, conscience is a schoolmaster to bring us to Christ. Conscience may be compared to a stern guide, who gives a lantern to a cripple and orders him to go the way which the light reveals, on pain of death; but it has no concern for his pitiful inability to surmount the difficult path. It is Christ who heals the cripple, putting strength into his feet and ankle bones, so that he walks and leaps and praises God. Yet it is questionable if anyone can appreciate the blood which cleanseth us from all sin who has not felt the shame and pain of a conscience defiled, or if anyone can understand the easiness of the yoke of Christ who has not felt his bones broken by the yoke of the law. Though conscience does not of itself know the way to reconciliation, yet it wanders restless and excited till it catches sight of Calvary, when its eye kindles like that of the exile who sees on the horizon the cliffs of his native land; and when it reaches the cross it pitches its tent there forever.—James Stalker, D. D.

FIVE PRECIOUS WORDS.

There is a group of five precious English words beginning with "H," which may well stand together in beautiful and harmonious relationship, and be happily and sweetly linked in individual experience. The first is Heart, "out of which are the issues of life;" the seat of being; the motive power of action; that which God specially wants; in which grace erects its throne, and Christ loves to abide. The second word in the grouping is Hope, which is the inspirer of the heart's operations, and which draws out its fullest energies. The third word is Home; the sphere where heart and hope come into noblest play and find their purest and sweetest gratification. The fourth word is Happiness, which lures heart, hope and home, and is the resultant of their right cultivation and direction under Christian principle and living. And the fifth word is Heaven, which is the place where the heart meets its God and Redeemer, where hope merges in fruition, where home looms up brighter, more glorious and eternal, and where happiness becomes complete, unalloyed and endless.

How does the flower get its fragrance? From God in its growth according to type. Flowers find their fragrance in God's provision of life and growth. How shall we get influence? By growing according to God's law. Christian life cannot be counterfeited. No substitute can be found for godliness as the source of influence. "By their fruits ye shall know them," is God's law in nature and grace. Influence is the fragrance of the soul. If Christ be in you, Christian influence will emanate from you. To get influence, first get Christ, then live Christ. The most pervasive thing in the world is a Christian life. We should covet its power, not for self-advancement, but for the bettering of the world. The Christian life is likened to many things in its influences. "Ye are the light of the world." Light is silent in its manifestations, but how pervasive and powerful! "Ye are the salt of the earth." Salt saves by the influence of its savor. "Ye are the good seed of the kingdom." The influence of the seed is seen in the harvests. The true child of God is a silent yet powerful influence in the world.

Character is always known. Thefts never enrich: aims never impoverish; murder will speak out of stone walls. The least admixture of a lie, for example, the smallest mixture of vanity, the least attempt to make a good impression, a favorable appearance—will instantly vitiate the effect; but speak the truth, and all nature and all spirits help you with unexpected furtherance. Speak the truth, and all things are vouchers, and the very roots of the grass underground there do seem to stir and move to bear you witness. See, again, the perfection of the law as it applies itself to the affections and becomes the law of society. As we are, so do we associate. The good, by affinity, seek the good: the vile, by affinity, the vile. Thus, of their volition, souls proceed into heaven—into hell. These facts have always suggested to the man the sublime creed that the world is not the product of manifold power, but of one will, of one mind, and that one mind is everywhere, in each ray of the star, in each wavelet of the pool, active, and whatever opposes that will is everywhere balked and baffled, because things are made so and not otherwise.—R. W. Emerson.

SAVING POWER OF MARRIAGE.

I have noticed that a married man falling into misfortune is more apt to retrieve his situation in the world than a single one, chiefly because his spirits are soothed and relieved by domestic endearments, and self-respect kept alive by finding that, although abroad be darkness and humiliation, yet there is a still world of love at home, of which he is monarch. Whereas a single man is apt to run to waste and self neglect—to fall to ruins, like some deserted mansion, for want of inhabitants. I have often had occasion to mark the fortitude with which women sustain the almost overwhelming reverses of fortune. Those disasters which break down the spirit of man, and prostrate him in the dust, seem to call forth all the energies of the gentler sex, and give such intrepidity and elevation to their character that at times it approaches sublimity. —Washington Irving.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

In the Royal Library at Stockholm the most valuable and remarkable book is the so-called "Devil's Bible" (Gigas librorum). It is a manuscript volume, the peculiar name being derived from one of the pictures in the book, which represents the Devil with a cloven tongue and long claws on his hands and feet. The volume is of large size. It contains three hundred and nine (originally three huudred and eighteen) pages, each of two columns, the length being thirty-six inches, the width twenty inches The material used is a thick and beautifully polished parchment, for the preparation of which a hundred and sixty asses' skins were necessary. The cover is made of oak boards with strong clasps. The weight of this book is naturally considerable. When the royal castle was burned, in 1697, it was found necessary to throw the monster book out of the window, in order to prevent its being burned. This seriously damaged the covers, which were not repaired until 1819. It is evident that the book was formerly chained to the library. This and some other valuable literary treasures of the Swedish libraries, such as the famous Ulfilas or Gothic Bible manuscript, now in Upsala, were in 1648 captured in Prague by the Swedes under Konigsmark, and presented to Queen Christine.—Sunday School Times.

It is announced that St. Louis will soon have a magazine printed in twelve different languages and it will be the only publication of the kind in the world. The idea originated with Wm Borsodi, in connection with Alexander Konta. Konta, of that city, will publish a separate magazine for each nationality in their native tongue, but the contents of each will differ but little. The home office of this company will be in St Louis. The promoters of this enterprise have in view a quick way of making foreigners understand the customs of the United States, and they think that this method will cause immigrants to rapidly assimilate with the Americans and correct many erroneous ideas entertained by both. They propose to print such articles as will tend to teach those unable to speak the English language the advantages of the American institutions and just what good citizenship means to them in the future.

I believe I am correct in saying that the grandest music ever written has for its theme religious subjects, and is consecrated to the service of God: and what can be more delightful than to hear a great congregation singing heartily unto the Lord, the "songs of Zion."—Rev. James Stuart.

NORTH CAROLINA.

St. Andrews:—The congregations were large at both services yesterday. One member was received by letter, making six additions since the last notice in this paper. The C. E. meetings, Saturday night prayer circle, and Thursday night teachers' meetings are growing in interest The Sabbath school is well attended and organized.

Madison: Beginning on Wednesday night, Oct. 27th, a series of sermons was preached by Rev. M. W. Doggett, D. D., of Burlington. Bro. Doggett preached two sermons a day. The services lasted through Sunday. On Sunday morning Messrs. J. M. Apple, W. C Parish and Green F Daniel were ordained and installed elders, and Messrs. Chas B. Pratt and J. S. King, deacons. After this Rev. J. A. Paisley was installed pastor of the Madison church for one half of his time The charge to pastor and people was delivered by Rev. S. O Hall of Westminster church Greensboro. In the afternoon at 2 30 o'clock the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by Rev. M. W. Doggett, D. D.

J. A PAISLEY.

Huntersville:—Friday, the 12th inst., was celebrated as Westminster Day by the churches of Bethel, Gilead, Roanoke and Huntersville. The members of the different churches had been studying the catechism and the honor of having the greatest per cent recite them perfectly was conferred upon Gilead. An address upon the influence of the Westminster Standards in the world was delivered by Rev. J. W. Stagg.

Brown School House, Brunswick County: Rev. T. H. Newkirk was with us and preached for us during the last week of October. His preaching was plain and Scriptural and did us much good in that community. This is a new post for Presbyterians, there being only two in the neighborhood, but our church is growing in favor, and while there were no professions or additions yet we had a good meeting. Large and attentive congregations greeted us, and all enjoyed Bro. Newkirk's visit among us.

Red Springs:—Rev. D. W. Fox has entered upon his work here most happily, preaching for us every Sabbath. One Sabbath in the forenoon the next at night Three members have been received recently by letter. Large congregations attend each service.

The session endorsed the action of Presbytery in regard to the plan of working for Red Springs Seminary, and appointed Miss S. M. Black to canvass the congregation.

The Seminary is prospering. The latest arrival (Saturday night) was a young Miss Vardell, daughter of the President. The building is now well heated, the students happy, the faculty working hard. The first recital of this session was given last Friday night, and was much enjoyed by the patrons and friends who were present in large numbers.

[VIRGINIA.

Patrick Church, Roanoke Presbytery:—By invitation of the pasior, Rev J. P. Robertson, Brother R. W. George, from Orange Presbytery, N. C., evangelist, came to this county to Howell schoolhouse about five miles from Stuart, the county seat and began a series of meetings on the fifth Sunday in October and closed on First Sunday in November. There was interest developed from the first. There was only one Presbyterian at this place and no place but a schoolhouse in which to preach. On the fifth Sunday, on his way to the place, and from Stuart, the minister saw fresh plowed ground and people moving a stack of fodder, a little further on was seen meal running down from the mill and the work going on, a little further on another mill wheel was moving regularly over, and arrived at the schoolhouse the report of a gun was heard over on the mountain side perhaps fired by a squirrel hunter. Loaded wagons passed the school-house. Opposition was developed early and towards the close, a young lady, of eighteen, wept bitterly, because as she said, her father forbid her to make a profession of her faith—she was too young. She asked for prayer and her weeping brought tears from many a tender heart and from men who some say had never shed any tears! Some of another faith, objected to our using the schoolhouse during recess for preaching, so only night meetings were held. This opposition aroused the friends, and during the meeting a lot was secured, and some $200 secured for the erection of a Presbyterian church at this place. The people seem in earnest about the matter and mean to build this church. Brother George gave $50 to the enterprise. The visible results of this meeting was nine professions and five united with Patrick county church on profession. Committees were appointed to solicit subscriptions and a building committee was also appointed. Many requests for prayer were made. Much good was done for the cause and men and women who never took any interest in such things appear interested. There is an open door right here. The people have lived in ignorance of the teaching of the pure Word and some are deeply set in the traditions of men; but beneath it all, is a feeling out after God. The pastor, had recently held a series of meetings there with five professions, but the weather and crops hindered and only one came in at that time. Some of those who came in were of the first five Will the brethren of Roanoke Presbytery remember this work and this field? The pastor preaches at Stuart "Wayside" and Howell regularly once a month. He can give but one Sunday a month to this entire county, having the Henry church also, and were it not for the occasional visits of our brother from Orange, much of the work would necessarily go undone. "Truly the harvest is plenteous, but the reapers are few." Patrick church is scattered and are few in number and has no building of its own.

TEXAS.

Sherman:—The Presbyterian church at this place is one of the strongest and most influential in Texas. Our beloved pastor, Dr. J S. Moore, has served this church for about nineteen years, and has done a great work for Presbyterianism in north Texas. Our Sunday school superintendent, Capt. C. M. Roberts, is one of the purest and noblest Christians it has ever been my pleasure to meet. He is a model superintendent and is loved and honored by all. The clerk of our session, Capt. J. E. Wharton, is a native of the old North State and is proud of his nativity. He is a generous neighbor, a kind friend, and a pleasant companion. His sense of justice has seldom been equaled. His opinion is greatly valued by all who are so fortunate as to be numbered among his friends. With such a pastor, superintendent and clerk of session, you may be sure that we are in safe hands.

KENTUCKY.

Bloomfield:—Rev. R. E. C. Lawson of Springfield recently assisted Rev. J. J. Hill in a ten days meeting The church was deeply stirred and twelve united with the people of God.

GENERAL.

There are nine Presbyterian churches in Guilford county—Alamance, Bethel, Buffalo, Greensboro First, Westminster, High Point, Jamestown, Midway and Springwood.

Mendelssohn chapel, Presbytery of Pittsburg, Pa., was dedicated on October 31st, Rev. Henry A. Grubbs is pastor.

There are now 51,578 Christian Endeavor Societies in the world, with a total membership of three million.

The Chicago Presbytery has granted the request of the petitioners at Roseland for a Presbyterian church in that suburb, and referred the matter to the Home Mission committee with full power to act as to when and where this church shall be organized.

Rev. F. B. Meyer will visit this country during the winter. He now expects to arrive the middle of January and remain until the last of February.

The Golden Rule has been changed to The Christian Endeavor World. The change of name to us is a good one and more fully covers the ground under the influence of the paper. The golden rule is still the motto of this excellent paper.

New York City has a Jewish population of 240,000, more than the entire population of Richmond, Norfolk, Wilmington, Charlotte and Columbia.

Mr. Alfred Marriott, of England, has left by will £350,000 to the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. A London churchman who prefers to remain anonymous has given the Church Missionary Society £30,000, the interest of which is to be available for the general purposes of missions.

The membership of the church in Hungary corresponding to the Presbyterian is second in number to that of no other single Presbyterian body excepting the Northern Presbyterian Church in the United States.

The different branches of the Presbyterian Church in New York State have a membership exceeding the membership of our entire Southern Presbyterian Church by more than 100,000.

The Church of the Puritans, New York City, recently celebrated the 25th anniversary. Addresses were by Rev. Drs. Cuyler, Schauffler and R. C. Ogden. Rev. Chas. Y. Young is pastor.

The Bi-monthly Letters of the North Laos Mission report much evangelistic work done with good results. Also the publication of of Dr. Bradley's Life of Christ in the Laos Version and a translation of the Shorter Catechism A live C. E. Society has been organized in Chieng Hai with twenty-six charter members.

We note that the Synods of the Northern Church are adopting the plan of Synodical Evangelization which has been worked so successfully in our Southern Assembly. The Synod of New York has recently moved in this direction. The Synod of Baltimore, we learn, in part at least, conducts its work on the same line. The following is the action of the Synod of Indiana as represented by the Baltimore Sun:

After being in session all day and until a late hour to night, (Nov. 11th) the special committee appointed by the last General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church to reform and harmonize the methods of giving to Home Missions, agreed on a declaration of principles and unanimously adopted resolutions embodying its views. The struggle that was fought out during the day was whether or not State Synods and Presbyteries are to be allowed to manage their own affairs without the aid of the Home Board of Missions, or whether the National Board should be endorsed, such endorsement meaning a granting of practical autonomy to each Presbytery.

This sentiment prevailed unanimously, and although the committee merely voiced its principles and left it to a subcommittee, to be appointed, to draft a plan, the action of the committee was such as to be entirely favorable to the large element in the Church that is opposing to the domination of the Home Board.

The resolutions adopted were "tentative," the members said, and were merely to test the sentiment of the committee, There were four of them, and each was adopted without a negative vote. They all tend to let the home board down lightly, but all speak unequivocally for liberty for the Synods.

The first and most important declaration is in favor of a local administration of the affairs of each Presbytery in every case "where practicable."

The second recognizes the national unity of the home board.

The third is slightly more important. It provides that each Synod that launches out for itself to do its own work, shall incorporate in its plan a provision that will insure the home board from suffering loss and financial decay.

The last resolution reads: "We cordially welcome to all of our churches the secretaries and representatives of the home board and the circulation of its literature."

After laying down these principles, the committee decided to appoint a subcommittee, which is to draw up a plan and report to a meeting of the special committee at a time to be fixed.

FOREIGN MISSION COMMITTEE NOTES.

The Executive Committee of Foreign Missions held a regular session in the Secretary's office, Nashville, on Tuesday, November, 9th.

The meeting was opened with prayer

Minutes of the previous meeting, and minutes of the Directing Committee were approved.

The action of the Southern Brazil Mission in changing its mission year so as to make it correspond with the calendar year, was approved.

Salaries for married couples in the Southern Brazil Mission were reduced to $1,000, with the exception of one special case. Salaries of single ladies in that mission were put at $400 for 1898. After other reductions, appropriations were made for the mission, to be used during next year.

Salaries of single men in the China Mission were reduced to $450 and those of single ladies to $400. Other reductions were made in the estimates sent by the mission, for 1898, before making appropriations for that year.

Allowance for children under eighteen years of age was reduced from $100 to $75, this reduction being made general, so as to apply to all our missions.

The Committee decided to send a letter with these reduced appropriations, to our missionaries, explaining the necessity for retrenchment on account of the stringency of the times, etc.

The report of Mr. Erskine Reed, Treasurer, showed a loss in receipts for the fiscal year up to November, as compared with the previous fiscal year to same date, of $5,335 24. The Treasurer also reported a decline in receipts for November this year, up to date as compared with November, 1896. The Committee was informed that more than $24,000 was still due the mission on appropriations for 1897.

A letter dated Oct. 23rd, from Mr. Robert Whyte, our London Agent, gave the news that Dr. D. W. Snyder and Miss Sophie Wright were expecting to leave for the Congo by steamer from Antwerp which sailed Nov. 6th. Both were well. Mrs. W. H. Sheppard was reported en route to London from Luebo, Africa; having been given permission to come home on furlough.

Rev. W. M. Morrison, writing from Luebo, Africa, June, 30th 1897, mentioned the urgent need of six more laborers for the Congo Mission; two white men, two colored men, and two colored ladies. He also stated that they could use ten new missionaries to great advantage, but that six were needed at once. It was his expectation at the time of writing, to start July 2d, if strong enough, accompanied by Rev. W. H. Sheppard, for King Lukenga's town.

Requests from the Southern Brazil Mission for appointment of Rev. Henry J. McAll as a missionary, and for the appointment of a lady to assist Dr. H. S. Allyn in his work, were both declined for financial reasons.

The Committee was informed that Miss N. Blanche Dunlap expected to return to Brazil Nov. 5th; being in Brooklyn, N. Y. en route, Nov. 4th.

Rev. Charles R. Morton, of Araguary, in Southern Brazil, reported nineteen received into the church, and thirty-five children baptized during an evangelistic tour in July, August and September.

A strong appeal having been received from Rev. S. P. Verner, for a light draught Congo boat, to be used on the upper river for transport, etc., during low water, when the larger steamboats cannot go to Luebo; the Chairman was requested to write to Mr. Verner, encouraging his plan, and informing him that the Committee would like to have the judgment of the Congo Mission in the matter.

The Committee decided that in its judgment, no missionaries should return from Africa at the expiration of three years' service, unless his or her state of health demands it; and that then the question must be decided by the mission; this being especially necessary on account of the expense of returning.

Dr. R. C. Reed, Chairman, was directed to visit the Synod of Georgia, and lay before that Synod the cause of Foreign Missions.

Dr. J. W. Bachman reported that on account of sickness in his family, he had been prevented from attending the Synod of Virginia. The Committee expressed sympathy for him in his recent bereavement.

The following official communication from the Presbytery of Louisville was read:

"Inasmuch as this Presbytery's investigations of the views and practices of Rev. M. H. Houston, D. D., has resulted in a strong presumption of his being seriously out of harmony with the standards of our Church, Presbytery does hereby order that judicial process be instituted against the aforesaid Dr. Houston."

The Executive Committee of Foreign Missions thereupon took the following action:

"Inasmuch as the relation of this Committee with any minister as a missionary is dependent on his relations with his Presbytery as to his doctrinal and ecclesiastical standing; and inasmuch as the Louisville Presbytery has notified the Committee, that it has instituted judicial proceeding against Dr. M. H. Houston.

"Therefore, the Committee hereby revokes the order directing Dr. Houston to return to China Nov. 15th."

Rev. P. M Morrison, D.D., Secretary of the Foreign Mission Committee of the Canada Presbyterian Church, requesting in a recent letter, information as to work in Korea, etc., his church having determined to open a mission in that country, it was ordered that the information be sent.

The Executive Committee was notified that the Ladies' Presbyterial Union of Lafayette Presbytery, Mo., had decided to adopt Miss Grace K. Field as their missionary, holding themselves responsible for her support; and also desired the privilege of paying part (and they hoped the whole) of Rev. Harry Myers' salary as a missionary It was ordered that a reply be sent, expressing grateful appreciation.

The Auditing Committee reported their examination of the Treasurer's accounts and vouchers; and that the balance on hand shown by his report was correct. Recommendations made by this committee, as to readjusting some of the office work, so as to insure greater dispatch, were adopted.

AUSTIN COLLEGE, SHERMAN, TEXAS.

Austin College, founded in 1849, is one of the oldest and most thorough institutions in the West. It has about $1,000,000 endowment. Nothing would give a greater impetus to the spread of Christianity or add more to the strength of Presbyterianism in the Southwest than to increase the endowment and hence the usefulness of Austin College. We hope our friends in the East will help us double our endowment before 1900. Our faculty consist of six professors and three instructors. The president, Dr. T. R. Sampson is indeed a tower of strength to the institution. He is progressive, up-to-date, and energetic. Young men, expecting to moved to Texas, should attend Austin College and thus become identified with the interests of their future State.

WHAT IS HOLINESS?

Since the call of God our Father, the example of Christ our Saviour, and the work of the Holy Spirit our Sanctifier, are all in one direction, it seems to me we ought to know all we can about that to which they would redeem and transform the life. Holiness is separateness in thought and purpose, in speech and behavior, from the world of sin which is about us. Holiness is godliness. As Peter puts it in his first epistle, where he is writing to those who have made Christ the foundation, he says: "But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people; ye should show forth the praisas of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light."

The real Christian is one who is called forth into the light, and who has met with a change of heart. By the Spirit of God he has become a new creature. There must be, there will be a change in his life. Of him it will be said, "Behold, he prayeth!" "Behold, he resisteth the devil!" Whereas in time past he walked as other Gentiles walked, now he becomes separate from them, and walks with Christ and with those who love Him. To say, "I am a Christian," and then to have no change in the life, no setting apart of self from the old temptations and habits of sin, is to almost commit blasphemy.

The name of Christian is nothing without the Christ life. The profession of Christianity is nothing without the fruits of holiness, which the Spirit of God delights to work out in the life that will surrender to Him. And this, strange to say, while God calls us to holiness, and while the Church expects it of us, the world about us also expects it and demands. You know much of the criticism of the world against the Church is concerning its unholy members—is concerning those who live such a low level of Christian life that it is hard to discern where they belong. When any one comes out from the world, puts himself on the Lord's side, and unites with the Church, at once the world expects him to be different—to leave behind the old man of sin, and to put on the new man which shall become more and more like Christ. The world is right in this expectation and demand. But the world is often wrong in its measure and ground of judgment. It often sins against the followers of Christ by its harsh impatience and its stumbling blocks of selfish criticism. It always condemns itself, because knowing so well the way others ought to go, it yet takes no step in the right direction. The holy life is constantly at difference with the world. The Christian must learn to live without regard to pleasing the world. He cannot please it. The world will hate him because he has left it for Christ. Living to be seen of men and to please them will never lead us to holiness, but living to be seen of Christ and to please him will. Face toward Christ, heart toward Christ, life as unto Christ, that is holiness, for it is Christlikeness. As Paul writes to the Corinthians, "But we all, with open face, beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord."—Rev. C. P. Ditmars, in Christian Intelligencer.

UNDER THE MASTER'S HAND.

"A strange instrument hung on an old castle wall"--so the legend runs. No one knew its use. Its strings were broken and covered with dust. Those who saw it wondered what it was and how it had been used. Then one day a tranger came to the castle gate and entered the hall. His eye saw the dark object on the wall, and taking it down, reverently brushed the dust from its sides and tenderly reset the broken strings; then chords long silent woke beneath his touch and all hearts were strangely touched as he played. It was the master, long absent, come back again to his castle.

It is but a legend, yet the meaning is plain. In every human soul there hangs a marvellous harp, dust covered, with strings broken, while yet the Master's hand has not found it. Is there no joy in your heart? Is your soul-harp hanging silent on the wall? Have you lost the secret of glad, happy days?

Oh, could the tender Christ but brush away
And o'er the slumbering tones His fingers sweep,
A world would pause to catch the echoing chord
Of music wakened 'neath the touch of God.

Open your hearts every morning to Christ. Let Him enter and repair the strings that sin has broken, and sweep them with His skilful fingers, and you will go out to sing through all the day. Only when the song of God's love is singing in our hearts are we ready for the day.--Open Window.

THE ANSWER OF PRAYER.

The answer of prayer stands knocking at the door of the prayer-meeting in Acts 12: 13. That was too unexpected an occurrence for the assembly of believers. They avowed that the maid bearing the information was either crazy or had seen a ghost. How surprised faithful Christians often are if a prayer is really heard. Answers to prayer are recounted with unending marks, whereas answer of true prayer ought to be considered the most natural experience in God's universe. Much praying is a mere performance. A farmer coming to town read at a physician's door. "Please pull the bell." He pulled until a head was poked out of the window inquiring, "Well?" "Oh, I've read the sign and thought it not more than polite to pull," was the response. The only response that could perhaps be given by many who feel themselves called upon in the Bible to pray. They do not read that the young Pharisee transacted many a prayer before heaven said of him, "Behold, he prayeth." Their arrows shot heavenward have plenty of feather but no point. They do not spread the fleece, like Gideon, for the dew to descend upon.--F. W. C. Meyer

NOW.

Perhaps there is now a "shy, solitary, serious thought" in your heart about becoming a Christian. If you let it alone, it may fly away like a bird through a cage door left open, and may never come back. Or else a crowd of business cares and plans, or perhaps a host of social invitations will flock in, and the good thoughts be smothered to death. You have smothered just such blessed thoughts before. The thought in your heart is to become a Christian now, and the great bells ring out, "Now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation." No soul was ever yet saved, and no good deed was ever done to-morrow. Be careful, dear friend, lest to-morrow shall find you beyond the world of probation!

FIERY DARTS.

They are called fiery darts because they are so painful and so pernicious. We all know in our own experience the exceedingly painful nature of these fiery darts, and the only way to overcome them is by using the shield of faith. Exceedingly great temptations are often met with which tend to make us distrust the love and power of our Father, and the only means of meeting these is by faith. The best way to illustrate the meaning of faith, as applied to these temptations, is just to give one or two instances.

For instance, here is a child of God; suppose that he is regenerated, and for some time has fought manfully against the evil one and the allurements of this world. But after a time, perhaps two or three years, he begins to be less watchful. What then? He goes back again, and begins to love this present world, and soon the temptation comes, "Well, I am afraid I shall not be successful and after all I shall lose the battle." You all know that a child of God may thus be tempted, and how wretched he will be till he uses the shield of faith to quench this fiery dart of doubt and mistrust. How shall we use the shield of faith? It is stated regarding the children of God. "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee." This is true regarding all the children of God, and it is true regarding you. How quickly, when this is used with child-like simplicity, does it quench that fiery dart!

Or in the temptation which sometimes comes to the child of God, when he is tempted to think that he may, after all, be lost; how does the word of God suit this? simply by believing what it declares: "None shall be able to pluck them out of my Father's hand." I am one of his sheep, and therefore I cannot be lost. How this will quench the fiery darts of the Devil, and give us joy instead of sorrow!—George Muller.

SIDE-TRACKED.

BY CLARA T. HENRY.

Isn't it wearisome waiting on the side-track until our time for active service comes again? The busy trains whirl by, teeming with life, rushing past our staid existence, until the loneliness grows more intense, and the waiting-time more irksome—because we do not understand.

It's so much harder to wait, than to work; to lie idle when nervous fingers and throbbing brain long to move on in the winding procession, yet we're side-tracked, and the days come, and the days go, still we wait.

Quiet, close observation availeth much. There is time now to study the sky, and the stars, and the flowers. Even the birds light on the telegraph wires and carol a sweet message of sympathy and peace. Voices in the grass give assurance and strength. The cricket chirps a monotone of cheer, and the locust drones a lullaby.

Sweet clover waves about our rusting wheels, while goldenrods and aster blooms offer a tribute of color. Bees and butterflies sail through the air, all are messengers, if we but understand their subtle language. Nature comes very near the soul that lingers. We must loiter, if we learn her sweetest messages. Not an aimless vagrancy, but with a mind receptive to her teachings.

Out of the stillness, the passive existence, must come a new growth, a new life. The fetters of pain and discipline cut deeply into the smart-flesh, but there will come a liberty, a freedom, with broader scope of vision, and wider range of achievement, when weariness, bitterness and unrest, shall be fused into strong steel rails that will carry us safely on "our mission."—Interior.

THE MOST ALARMING SIN.

If I were called to point out the most alarming sins of to-day—those which are most deceitful in their influence, and most soul-destroying in their utimate effects—I would not mention drunkenness with all its fearful havoc, nor gambling with its crazed victims, nor harlotry with its hellish orgies; but the love of money on the part of men, and the love of display on the part of women. While open vice sends its thousands, these fashionable and favored indulgences send their ten thousands to perdition. They sear the conscience, incrust the soul with an impenetrable shell of worldliness, debauch the affections from every high and heavenly object, and make man or woman the worshipper of self. While doing all this the poor victim is allowed by public opinion to think himself or herself a Christian; while the drunkard, the gambler, or the prostitute, is not deceived by such a thought for a moment.—Dr. Crosby.

THE CHRIST CURE.

All the ills of time have their root in evil. Prosperity comes by obedience to the law of Christ. The Son of Man knows what ails the world, and He is its only possible cure. One year of universal and absolute Christianity would transform every people under heaven. One year of absolute fidelity to the gospel on the part of its alleged Christians would bring any nation to a transfiguration.

What a sight—"theater to men and angels"—would be a real nation full of Christians. Savorless salt! Judgment shall begin at the house of God! God or mammon! Answer us "even by terrible things in righteousness," O God—do thou save us from the leaven of the Sadducee and the Pharisee! The day for smooth-bore preaching is gone—rifled guns with utmost penetration! It is time to remember Micaiah the son of Imlah. Oh! that America might become more than nominally Christian, and make a new declaration of dependence upon God.—M. Woolsey Stryker, D. D., President of Hamilton, Clinton, N. Y.

God's love is like the atmosphere which fills all corners regardless of their shapes. It is like the flowing river which spreads its beauty into every creek, and fills the shadows as well as the deep holes in its course. It adjusts itself to the hearts which it visits. Its consistency lies in this that it is the same to all. Its earnestness and thoughtfulness lie in this, that it adapts itself to all. It is the same pure, true and beautiful current wherever it goes; but it possesses the capacity for adapting itself to each. It is like the ether, rigid yet penetrating, as fine as steel and yet as flexible as the softest silk.--W. Boyd Carpenter, D. D.

Question 68. What is required in the sixth commandment?

Answer. The sixth commandment requireth all lawful endeavors to preserve our own life and the life of others.

Place. Babylon.

INTRODUCTORY.

Father Gavazzi, the converted priest of Italy told with great interest to the crowds that heard him in his tour of this country a few years ago, how the late Pope Pius IX, challenged him to discuss whether Peter ever was in Rome. The Roman Catholic church taught and holds that Babylon is the mystical name for Rome and that Peter was twenty-five years in Rome and was the first Pope. Father Gavazzi for the Protestants of Italy, especially the Free church of Italy denied this. Hence the discussion which ended with the Pope's paying the expenses of a debate at which the representative of Rome was driven to claim in desperation that Peter was one night in Rome. Peter went far East to Babylon, and there heard of the sufferings of Christians in Asia Minor, and sent them this letter for their comfort and encouragement. The letter is a chain of strong links, each one of fine metal and fairly set in its place. The tone is gentle, the spirit throughout is sweet and tender. It is especially full of echoes of our Lord's teachings which Peter enjoyed for three years and sought to bring to remembrance and put to practice under the ministrations of the Holy Spirit. Much of this teaching was written indelibly on Peter's heart.

LESSON NOTES.

Forasmuch then. Referring back to iii : 18. Suffered for us in the flesh. In his human nature on the cross, to open the way of salvation, with forgiveness of sins, a new heart and a holy life. This atoning death was also an example of patient suffering, the just for the unjust. Arm yourselves. As armor is put on for offensive and defensive warfare so Christians should be furnished for the conflict with suffering and the attacks of Satan to injure us. With the same mind. The same spirit and purpose that Christ had to endure the sufferings He bore for sin—a readiness to suffer and even to die for the cause of religion. He. The disciples of Christ. That hath suffered in the flesh. Has been crucified with Christ. (Gal. ii : 20) and taking the place of crucifixion. Hath ceased from sin. Is dead to sin, Rom. vi : 2, that he should live no longer therein. Thus suffering should be accepted as the means of mortifying (putting to death) "the deeds of the flesh. Christ as our surety died for us to the penalty of sin. Christ as the Head represented us in the death to sin. As we take our place by faith all that Christ has done for us shall be made effectual in us

Vs. 2. No longer. "He has become, through the death of Christ, dead to the world and to the former things which influenced him, in order that he should hereafter live not to the lusts of the flesh."—Barnes. But to the will of God. As Christ died to suffer the will of God and arose to live the life of communion with God, so we dead with Christ by His life in us shall live as God will have us. This is to know experimentally the power of the resurrection of Christ.

Vs. 3. May suffice us. We ought to have had enough of the flesh life such as the unchristian world lived. To have wrought. Lived according to the will, the desire, the inclination of the Gentiles, idolaters. The descriptions of their sins as given in this verse and the first chapter of Romans is borne out by the secular writings of the ages. Lasciviousness. All acts of every kind of impurity. Lusts. The inner principles of licentiousness. Excess of wine. Inordinate desire for and indulgence of the appetite for strong drink. Revellings, carousings and beastly merry-making of the merely animal nature after feasts. Banqueting. Means drinking bouts. Idolatries. The licentious practices connected with idolatrous rites.

Vs. 4. They think it strange. The heathen could not understand how these Christians could refuse invitations to banquets and avoiding acts of prostitution or passing the winecup untasted.

Vs. 5. Who shall give account. No one can sin with impunity, for we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ.

Ve. 6 To them that are dead. Those of their own number who were Christians and referring to their lives and the difference between man's judgment and the judgment of God, and that they lived even suffering "according to God in the Spirit."

Vs. 7. The end of things is at hand. They looked for the end of this dispensation in the coming of the Lord as possible at any moment and made their exhortations accordingly.

Vs. 8. Have fervent charity. The word implies "intense strain," "on the rock," "ceaseless" Charity is love. Shal. cover the multitude of sins It leans to leniency and sympathy and help toward others who sin and enables to overlook and forgive the faults of others. The love of God covers sins with the atoning and cleansing blood of Christ.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

This is the temperance lesson of the quarter.

1. Intemperance is the opposite of the conduct described in verses 1 and 2.

2. Temperance is reached by subduing all forms of sinful passions and desires.

3. This is possible only as we have the mind of Christ by the power of His life working in us.

Notes:

By absolute surrendering ourselves to God to work His will in, through and by us. By standing boldly for the right. Whatsoever we find to be God's will that doing in the use of such means and by such methods as will be approved of Him, amid the circumstances and in the place where our lot is cast.

Manifesting by our own conduct the sincerity of our professions. Practicing what we preach. And now to promote the cause of temperance using the means God has placed in our hands, we commend to our readers the following published by Rev. Dr. T. L. Cuyler in the Evangelist.

"The serpent quality of all intoxicants lies in the deceptiveness. 'Wine is a mocker; whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise.' The drinker fancies that his glass is doing him good and promoting his health. Instead of adding to his strength it excites him for a time and the reaction leaves him the weaker. Thousands of people call for liquors at the restaurants, or set them on their tables to promote digestion; and I have known persons to cling to this fallacy after alcohol had poisoned their stomachs. The heroic Dr. Livingstone of Africa—a physician himself—asserted that he 'could stand any and every hardship best by using water and water only. I had a conversation this week with Nansen, and thanked him for his published testimony that during his exploration of Greenland he found alcohol of no benefit to himself or his men.

"Another deceptive quality in intoxicants is that they steal a march on those who use them, and an appetite for them is formed before one suspects it. The reason is that every glass of liquor increases the desire for another glass. A tumbler of water or milk satisfies thirst; a draught of liquor increases thirst. This fact makes it so difficult to tamper with wine or brandy without becoming addicted to it—and in too many cases enslaved by it. An eminent minister of my acquaintance began to use port-wine as a tonic; it woke up a terrible appetite and not long ago he had to resign his charge under a cloud of disgrace! Women in poor health often resort to alcoholic 'medicines,' or sly 'stiffeners,' and become victims of the serpent before they are aware. I could startle my readers if I dared to mention some of the deplorable cases.

"To break the terrible habit, and to shake off the serpent requires such effort that few are permanently reformed. Some surrender to the inevitable and go over the cataract with eyes open to their doom. A young man said to a friend of mine. 'This awful drink has used up my money, ruined my health, and almost killed my parents. It will soon kill me, and send me to hell! I know it, and yet the habit is so strong that I cannot stop.' And he did not stop; yet when he began to sip his wine he never dreamed that he would die a wretched sot. Of all the deceivers that betray body and soul to damnation none is so alluring and ensnaring as the glass.

"It is strange that parents—many Christian parents—will allow it to come into their homes, and will provide it for guests. It is strange that in spite of all the miseries suffered by drunkard's wives, so many young women are willing to marry young men who are in the habit of taking a social glass; they are playing with a viper; if their hearts are stung with agony it is their own fault. No young woman should ever accept the hand of any man if that hand ever touches an intoxicant. This stand resolutely taken by our women would increase the number of teetotallers immensely. If the above-mentioned things are strange, it is stranger still that churches, Sunday schools and pulpits do not ring out oftener, and more vehemently, this heaven-sent tocsin—'Look not on the wine! look not on the wine! it stingeth like a serpent and biteth like an adder!'"

A fully rounded life has come to its fitting close. The sheaf was fully ripe before it was gathered. The sun completed its circuit before it set. The life was rich in activity for full four-score years, and then there was a little time of quiet waiting before the peaceful end. Her activities were never interrupted by sickness or ill-health, for her last illness was also her first. She passed through almost all the troubles that can come to us—the loss, of husband, of fortune and of children; but through it all her eye was not dim nor her natural force abated. Nor did her faith fail. Trouble only wrote upon her countenance a serenity that was the outward sign of a life hid with Christ in God. The beauty of youth and of bloom was gradually replaced by the beauty of holiness that shown in her face. Always in her place at the house of God, always present where there was work to be done or worship to be offered, her life was a constant sermon in tireless devotion and consecrated fidelity. When the end came no one could begrudge her the rest for which she was waiting and the release for which she prayed, but the children and grandchildren who rise up to call her blessed, and the large circle of friends who loved her as a Mother in Israel, will miss sorely the peaceful face and the loving heart that brought into their life on earth so much of heaven.

ANDERS.—Departed this life at her home in Ivanhoe, on the 3rd of November, 1897, Mrs. Jennie M. Anders, the wife of Mr. E. J. W. Anders and the second daughter of Major Angus Munn, of Maysville, Bladen county. Mrs. Anders came to us as a lovely bride only a few years ago. She identified herself with the Christian community and leaves us to join "the general assembly and church of the first born whose names are written in heaven." While here she impressed us with that meek and humble Christ-like character. Living for the good of others, doing good to all, but especially unto them who were of the faith.

She leaves a husband and two little girls, father and mother, sisters and brother, with a host of friends. May the Lord comfort the husband and all who mourn her so sudden departure.

K. McDONALD.

WORTH.—Virginia Worth, daughter of the late Thos. Clarkson Worth and of Mrs. Allie H. Worth, was born July 14th, 1889, and died at her mother's home in Asheboro, N. C., Oct. 6th, 1897. For one week preceding her death, she was acutely ill with appendicitis. The best medical skill was obtained for her, and twice surgery was resorted to. A trained nurse was with her and loving relatives and friends were unceasing in their devoted attentions. But her "hour had come." The Saviour was ready to take her to his bosom and make her forever happy and blessed. During her sufferings which were often intense in the extreme, she was brave and patient to an amazing degree. She was in many respects a most remarkable child. Her singular beauty, her abounding and unceasing vitality, her acute and vigorous mind, her sweetness of disposition, her thoughtfulness and generosity, were all strongly impressed upon all who knew her. The writer was often a guest in her mother's delightful home, where the servant of the Lord is ever cordially welcome for his work's sake. On his first visit this lovely and loving child attracted his attention as few children have ever done. He found himself many times afterwards watching this beautiful and unique child-friend and wondering what depths of character and what exquisite loveliness would be enveloped as she grew into womanhood. And now she is gone from us and our hearts are sore. The sorrowing and bereaved who are left behind feel that they have sustained an irreparable loss, but they are comforted by the thought that she is with the blessed Saviour and with the loved ones gone before.

FOR THE FAMILY.

"WHY DO WE WAIT?"

Why do we wait till ears are deaf
Before we speak our kindly word,
And only utter loving praise
When not a whisper can be heard?

Why do we wait till hands are laid
Close-folded, pulseless, ere we place
Within them roses sweet and rare,
And lilies in their flawless grace?

Why do we wait till eyes are sealed
To light and love in death's deep trance—
Dear wistful eyes—before we bend
Above them with impassioned glance?

Why do we wait till hearts are still
To tell them all the love in ours,
And give them such late meed of praise,
And lay above them fragrant flowers?

How oft we, careless, wait till life's
Sweet opportunities are past,
And break our "alabaster box
Of ointment" at the very last!

O, let us heed the living friend
Who walks with us life's common ways,
Watching our eyes for look of love,
And hungering for a word of praise.

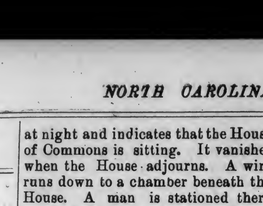
BIG BEN THE LARGE CLOCK.

There is no feature of mighty London probably so widely known in the metropolis as the famous clock of the Houses of Parliament. No visitor to London would think of returning home without seeing Big Ben. During the summer, thousands of foreigners and from the provinces listen to him chiming the quarters and booming out the hours. The tower in which Big Ben is housed is forty feet square and its spire rising to the height of three hundred and twenty feet is the loftiest belfry in London. The clock was constructed under the direction of Sir G. B. Airy, late astronomer royal, and cost £8,734. It is the largest clock in the world. Most of its works are of cast iron. Each of the four dials is twenty-two and a half feet in diameter and each weighs about four tons. The minute hands are fourteen feet in length and the hour hand six feet. The minute division of the circumference of each dial measures fourteen inches. Twenty-two gas jets are employed to light up the dials by night. The clock has a large bell to toll the hours and four smaller ones to chime the quarters, and most people will agree that there are few things more impressive than Big Ben booming out the hour of twelve in his slow measured tones at midnight when the roar of the city is hushed. The tower, particularly the stage in which the clock is set, is embellished with the most delicate covering and surmounted as it is, by a beautiful gilded lantern spire, is a very imposing piece of architectural work.



During the session of Parliament a brillant steady light may be seen at night and indicates that the House of Commons is sitting. It vanishes when the House adjourns. A wire runs down to a chamber beneath the House. A man is stationed there and when the speaker's question, "That this House do now adjourn," is agreed to, he pulls a switch which instantly extinguishes the light on the clock tower.—The Book of Parliament.

With little doubt the longest-lived animal in the world is the giant tortoise of the Seychelles Islands. One has recently been presented to the Zoological Society of London by Mr. Walter Rothschild which weighs a quarter of a ton. Its known length of life is 150 years, its age previous to its transportation to the island of Mauritius being unknown. In 1833 the Governor of Mauritius sent to the Zoological Gardens a tortoise weighing 285 pounds. It was 4 feet 4 inches long, and had been in the island of Mauritius for sixty-seven years. The exact period was known; for this tortoise was brought to that island from the Seychelles in 1766. At that time it was full-grown, so that its real age was probably much greater.

The Palestine Exploration Society has just made an interesting discovery. In trying to trace the old wall on the south side of Jerusalem, a magnificent staircase was uncovered. When the soil and debris of eighteen centuries were removed, thirty-four broad, massive steps were revealed leading down to the Pool of Siloam. There is no doubt that this is the staircase referred to by Nehemiah as "the stairs that go down from the city of David." As the staircase leads to the temple area, it may also have been the "ascent" which so impressed the Queen of Sheba when she visited King Solomon.

There are 15 publications in Japan devoted to the interests of women. Of these, three are Christian. It is said that the late war has given a great impetus to female education in Japan. In the Mitsul Bank of Osaki, the industrial centre of the empire, the book-keepers are all women. The fair sex is pretty well represented in some of the government offices.

How many weeks will any of us be able to live without coming to some spot where it will be felt as a rational comfort to believe that all our way, step by step, trial by trial, surprise, success, failure, loss, removal, was ordered for us by Him who sees the end from the beginning?—Bishop F. D. Huntington.

Life is a battle field. Every day brings its fierce, unceasing conflict; every night leaves its multitudes of dead and dying. The horrors of war are no greater than the horrors of disease. If all the nations of the earth were at war against each other there would be no such carnage wrought within the year as that which is accomplished annually by one dread disease—consumption.

And yet this most fatal of all diseases is not without its remedy. It is no longer the irresistible destroyer that it was considered thirty years ago. An entirely new aspect is put upon the possibilities of this dreadful malady by the astounding remedial action of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which cures consumption by nourishing the lungs with an abundant supply of pure, highly-vitalized blood.

This stops the formation of tuberculous matter, and builds up fresh tissue, muscular flesh and vital energy. It gives digestive power to the stomach which is too weak to assimilate oily emulsions.

Miss Lucy Kloeffler, of Arnada, Mich., writes: "When I was about eight years of age I had inflammation of the lungs, and from that time up I was sick nearly all the time and had a doctor nearly all the time. I would take cold so easily it would go right to my lungs. At the age of nineteen I was very bad; there was pain in my lungs, tickling in my throat and my throat was studded with ulcers; there was hoarseness and partial suppression of voice, and difficulty of breathing. I doctored with one of our best physicians and he said he could not help me and just prescribed cod liver oil and told my mother I could not live longer than three months. I kept getting weaker every day, when at last a friend asked me why I did not try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I thought there was no use, no more help for me as consumption was in our family. My father and also my sister died with it; but after taking the first bottle I seemed to feel better. My appetite was better and I kept right on taking it, with a bottle of the 'Pellets' once in a while, until I felt real well. Before taking it, I weighed one hundred and ten pounds, after taking it, one hundred and thirty. I have not had a cough this winter."

"I'LL BE GOOD TO-MORROW."

"I'm dreadful bad," the wee maid said
At close of day, and shook her head;
"I tore my dress, and slapped at nurse,
I lost my pennies from my purse"—
Eyes full of childish sorrow.

"I guess I'm bad as I can be,"
She hid her face upon my knee;
"I'm sorry, too, and God and you
Will have to let the 'sorry' do,
But I'll be good to-morrow."

Ah, little one, with childish grace,
And earnest, pleading, upturned face,
I, too, must ask to be forgiven,
And send my plea to God in heaven—
My heart is full of sorrow.

For deed and word and evil thought,
And earnest purpose all forgot:
To-day has been unwisely spent,
Misused the talents Thou has lent,
But I'll be good to-morrow."

HOME AGAIN.

The leaves were turning a beautiful crimson, and the crisp October air seemed to lend wings to three pair of feet on their way to Sunday-school. "Miss Nelson will surely be at home again," said the boys, and in a few moments Keith, Willie and Lawrence were warmly welcomed by the dear teacher, whom they had not seen since June.

Such a buzz of voices! All seemed to talk at once; there was so much to tell of their happy times, of all that had made them such, and Mr. Hall had to sound the gong twice before quiet fell and he could kneel for the opening prayer.

Our three friends were reverent, and, seeing how sweetly grave Miss Nelson looked, were not surprised to hear her say, when lesson time came, "Now that we can say 'Home Again', boys, I am going to have you teach me out of a new kind of book; one that is written in your memory;" and she laid her hand on Keith's curly head.

"You remember on that last Sunday in June how we talked about Sundays. Keith, what did you do when they came?"

"I couldn't go to church because we were miles away from any, but I wouldn't go fishing or sailing as I did other days, and"—here the blue eyes dropped—"I taught Billy."

"What, dear?"

"O, Miss Nelson! He didn't know anything; not 'Now I lay me' nor 'Our Father.' He just did the chores up at the house, or hung around the wharves all the time; his mother was dead, you know."

"Willie what did you find to do?"

"Oh, I couldn't turn teacher like Keith. I just ached to go out sailing; the water never seemed so beautiful other days. I couldn't sit still, so I tried to find Sunday work, and—I wheeled the chair."

"Why, Willie," said the others, "Miss Nelson doesn't know there was a crippled boy there with a little bit of a tired-out mother. Willie said, 'That's too heavy for you, ma'am, please let me push it,' and he did, every Sunday, all along the beach, and when they would come to a pleasant spot they would rest awhile, and Mrs. Irving sang such beautiful hymns that sometimes we begged to come too, and listen."

"And what was Lawrence's way of spending Sunday?"

"Oh!" exclaimed his brothers, "the best of all—he was a regular brick." But Miss Nelson said, gently, "Let him speak for himself," and took the little hand, still thin under its coat of tan, in hers. "I had church down on the wharf, at least that's what the old fishermen and the sailors called it. I just talked to them the way you do to me, Miss Nelson. I began one day by telling old Matthew about the draught of fishes, and Peter hung about to hear, and the next Sunday he brought Eben, and Eben asked some other old tars, so the boys said I had a congregation."

"But he wouldn't let us come," said Keith and Willie.

"No, Miss Nelson, I couldn't. They knew it all, but when I was alone with only those rough old men, somehow it seemed to me that Jesus just told me what to say and only when their eyes filled with tears it was most too much for me."

It seemed most too much for Miss Nelson, and her eyes were dim as all stood for the hymn, "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Presbyterian: To-day Synod was here. Yesterday I saw Dr. Rumple. Some saw Mr. McLaurin. I am glad that they gave us that money. We had a big dinner at Synod. I had a very nice time. They called the central building Rumple Hall. We have school in Rumple Hall: Miss Cornelia Deaton is my school teacher. I have ten brothers. Doctor Jacobs was here at Synod. I study Old Greek stories, Word Book and arithmetic and geography. I have a little Testament. I like to read it very much. I have a little brother seven years old. I am ten years old. Goodbye.

Your little friend,
ZULA TURNER.
Barium, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor: I am eight years old. My father and oldest brother died last spring. I like to read the little letters very much. I am going to school. My teacher is Miss Daisy Thompson. There is a William Bingham School near Mebane, N. C. Would'nt you like to send some of your boys? It is just for boys. I have two sisters and five brothers. My oldest brother is at Baltimore. I was sick all last week and week before and had to stay away from school. I am in fourth reader, second arithmetic and spelling book. My brother and I are in the same classes. I will close hoping to see my letter in print.

Your little unknown friend,
ADDIE C. SCOTT.
Mebane, N. C.

Dear Presbyterian: I am a little girl six years old. As I cannot write myself mamma is writing this for me. I want you to put my name on your "Honor Roll." I have repeated the Child's Catechism, the Lord's Prayer, the Ten Commandments and the 23d Psalm to my teacher, Mrs. McLelland. When I learn the Apostles Creed, the Beatitudes and the books of the Bible I will be promoted from the "Infant Class" in the Sunday-school. I have two brothers and one sister. Ralph, Ruth and John. Ralph goes to Sunday-school every Sunday with papa and me, but Ruth and John are too small to go yet. I go to prayer-meeting with papa Wednesday nights. I like to go, and I can keep awake very well. We have a nice new church with a pipe organ, electric lights, &c. The Synod which met in Salisbury last week passed here going to Barium Springs to dedicate the new Central Building last Thursday, and a good many went down from here. I will close as I've written a long letter for so small a girl.

Your little friend,
RACHEL ELIZABETH GILL.
Statesville, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor; As it is raining to day and we cannot go to school we thought we would write to your paper. We are all going to school again. Our teacher is Mr. Horner Cromartie. We have not written this summer, but we have been reading the paper every week and have looked up lots of the answers to the questions if we have not sent them. We certainly do enjoy the Children's column and also the Puzzle Department and think it so kind in Miss Mitchell to send mama your good paper. We accompanied brother and papa to the Carolina Beach this summer where we had a very nice time bathing in the salt water. Mama and papa gave us all a Bible this summer and we were very proud of them. We will close by asking one question and answering one.

Your little friends,
LIZZIE MCD. MARSHBURNE,

THE SYNOD OF SOUTH CAROLINA

Held its annual sessions at Darlington October 29th-November 1st. Seventy ministers and forty-nine elders being in attendance. Rev. Dr. Alexander Sprunt of Rock Hill moderator.

The hospitality of the good people of Darlington was elegant and abounding, the brethren seemed to be in excellent spirits and the whole meeting proved a very interesting and pleasant one.

Foreign Missions were brought prominently forward in the opening sermon from the retiring moderator, Dr. W. M. McPheeters, which, at the suggestion of the last Synod, was a missionary discourse, and which set forth very strongly and impressively the natural difficulties, but spiritual possibilities of evangelizing the world. One evening besides was devoted to a conference upon this subject, when, after the reading of the report of the permanent committee interesting and encouraging addresses were delivered by the Rev. Dr. W. P. Jacobs and Rev. S. P. Fulton, one of our missionaries to Japan, now at home on a furlough. Tender memorials of the late Rev. W. B. White and Mrs. Pauline DuBose Little, who had represented this Synod in China were also adopted.

Home Missions claimed more than usual attention at this meeting, especially because this marked the close of our first year of distinctive Synodical evangelization The committee to whom the inauguration and conduct of this work was interested a year ago, made a very satisfactory and encouraging report. Although only four of our six Presbyteries co-operated in the work, the report showed cash receipts of over $3,800, and the employment of two Presbyterial and one general evangelists all of whom seem to have done good service in the work. Besides this, two of the Presbyteries of the Synod have employed and paid for evangelists of their own in the respective fields. The reports of all this from the Presbyteries, committees and evangelists, made an interesting feature of the meeting, and gave promise of a more complete occupancy and cultivation of the field than has hitherto been known in the history of the Synod. If this work continues, South Carolina is likely to maintain her position, in proportion to white population of any in the South or West.

Education in its several departments, was also largely considered and discussed. The reports showed that the number of candidates for the ministry is not now as large as in some years past, which is probably due to the fact that Presbyteries are exercising greater care as to the reception of candidates, and have also dropped a good many who did not prove themselves worthy Measures were adopted at this time looking to a more thorough examination of candidates for licensure.

The theological seminary at Columbia was reported as having thirty one students, an increase over last year, and as moving on smoothly. But the income is about $1,500 short of the expenses of the Institution, and the churches were urged to take up a special collection the fifth Sabbath in January to aid in meeting this deficiency. In connection with the report on the Seminary a hearty and lengthy discussion sprang up, occasioned by an overture of Rev. Dr. S S. Laws of the Seminary seeking the rescinding of a provision in the constitution which makes a professor's tenure of office expire when he reaches the age of seventy and requires an annual re-election in order to his continuance in office. But the effort was defeated. Dr. Laws has since served notice of complaint to the Assembly against this decision.

The Thornwell Orphange was admirably presented by its worthy President, Dr. Jacobs before a mass meeting of children and others Sunday afternoon, and the Presbyterian College at Clinton, while the Synod declined to accept its control which was offered, was commended and the churches were requested to open their doors to its agent in seeking to raise funds.

Colored Evangelization had a very earnest discussion, especially the pressing needs of the Ferguson-Williams College at Abbeville, S. C. Our churches were requested to send all their funds raised for this cause, to the Synod's Committee, and this Committee was instructed to inquire into the legal status and other matters relating to Ferguson-Williams College, by conference with the Assembly's Committee. Secretaries Hazen and Lumpkin were present and ably set forth Publication and Education.

The Synod gave its first evening to a Westminster celebration, when addresses were delivered by Drs. J. H Thornwell and S. S. Laws.

The next meeting is to be held at Lancaster, S. C., Oct. 18th, 1898.

A HARVEST HYMN.

Thank God that on a thousand hills
His summer gift the landscape fills;
And reapers in the joyous morn
Are busy with the ripened corn.

Thank God for coverlets of snow
That kept the corn-seed warm below!
And for the patient Mother Earth
That nursed and fed it from its birth.

Thank God for all the generous rains,
And the hot sunshine on the plains;
And that the season's gray and gold
Brought increase of a hundred fold.

Thank God for all the corn that stands
In other fields of other lands;
And that where'er His children roam,
Some grateful hearts sing, "Harvest Home."

Thank God with life as well as lip,
With holy prayer and fellowship;
With holier hope and nobler aim,
Sing praises to the Father's name.

Thank Him who for our joy and rest
Has made the Father manifest;
And for His kingdom that shall come,
With righteousness for Harvest Home
—Marianne Farningham.

REST.

"Rest is the sweeter for the toil or waking, the trouble or agony of pain that precedes it. Rest in God is inexpressibly precious to them who have been tossed and torn with doubt, who have groped blindly in the darkness of sin for a ray of hope, who have learned that it is a fearful thing to confront the living God as rebels. What a rest of peace comes to the troubled [soul when it ceases its silly war against God, and knows that all its future battles will be fought with Him against the common enemy! This is rest which comforts and sustains through all the troubles and trials which may be cast into our lot. Unless we have it, the present is without meaning, and the future utterly without assurance."—Independent.

REV. EDWARD PAYSON DAVIS.

The subject of this sketch, son of Rev. Thomas E. and Mrs. S. L. Davis, was born near Rutherfordton, N. C., July 12th, 1851. His father, years ago, passed from the ministry below to the sublimer ministry above, whilst his mother, in a good old age, remains to cheer her two sons, one a minister and the other a skillful, godly, young physician in New York City. Mr. Davis received his academic training in various high schools taught by his father and entering Davidson College in the fall of 1869 graduated in June 1873. After placing himself under the care of Mecklenburg Presbytery he entered Columbia Seminary in 1874, graduated in 1877 and in April of the same year was licensed to preach the Gospel. It was not his fortune to have to "stand and wait." A broad and inviting field awaited him. He immediately became the supply, and Nov. 3d, 1877 was ordained and became pastor, of Hopewell and Willington churches in South Carolina. These churches formerly constituted the charge of that famous teacher and theologian, Rev. Moses Waddell, D. D. In this field Mr. Davis remained for six and one-half years and his faithful, abundant labors were not in vain in the Lord. The churches grew in numbers, in liberality and activity. And here Bro. Davis took a step of far-reaching consequences. He deliberately assumed the condition and duties of a benedict on Dec. 29th, 1880, he was married to Miss Addie Lowry, daughter of Rev. James A Lowry, of the Associate Reformed Church and cousin of Rev. Jos. Lowry, D.D., once pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Selma, Ala., and later pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Louisville, Ky.

In Nov. 1883 Mr. Davis took charge of the church in Shelby, N.C., giving one-half of his time to this church and the remainder to evangelistic work. Presbyterianism at this time in Shelby and the surrounding country was well nigh an unknown quantity. There were so few members that the church was built under the direction of a committee appointed by the Presbytery and for years the church was only partially organized because of the very few male members. But under the organizing hand of Bro. Davis confusion soon gave place to order and weakness to strength. A prayer-meeting, a ladies' aid society, a children's missionary society, and a board of deacons were soon organized. The house of worship was renovated and greatly improved. A manse with three acres of land was purchased, and the membership steadily increased. He remained here four years and the history of this church from this time forward has been one of quiet, constant, progress until to-day under the aggressive leadership of Rev. T. M. Lowry, it numbers 125 members, and added thirty members to its roll last year. A good work was also accomplished at Kings Mountain, where a new church was built, and at Grover, Sandy Plains and Duncan's Creek where Mr. Davis made full proof of his ministry. On Jan. 1st, 1888, he became pastor of the First church, Winston, N. C. Here he found a very different state of things. The church had been fully organized by the former pastor, Rev. F. H. Johnston, D. D. His task now was to build on foundations wisely and securely laid. And that he proved himself a "master builder" let the simple record of five years work bear testimony. In 1888 this church had 164 members and in 1892 there were 251. And the growth of benevolence and activity kept fully abreast of this large, numerical, growth. This church supported its own candidate for the ministry, a young man belonging to its own membership. The interest in Foreign Missions deepened and itensified until the church, felt constrained to support their own foreign missionary, Rev. H. B. Price, of Japan. In 1891, Winston was one of only eleven churches in our General Assembly which contributed more than $1,000 for Foreign Missions. And it must be borne in mind that this steady growth in benevolence was realized in the face of a new church enterprise which involved an expenditure of not less than $15,000. This building, a model of architectural beauty, convenience and comfort, was dedicated free from debt Jan. 26th, 1890; Rev. John L. Girardeau, D. D., of Columbia Seminary preaching the sermon on this occasion. But even this great expense did not exhaust the liberality of the Winston church. To meet the needs of a rapidly growing suburban population a Sabbath-school was organized and a chapel built in North Winston at a cost of about $2,500. A glance at the minutes of the Assembly will abundantly show that the excellent work of Mr. Davis and his helpers at Winston has not suffered at the hands of his successor, Rev. Robt. E. Caldwell. The 251 members of 1892 have become almost 500, the Sabbath-school grown to more than 300 pupils, and contributions to benevolence alone to more than $2,000.

In November, 1892, Mr. Davis received and accepted a call to the First church, Montgomery, Ala. This church has long been one of the largest and most influential in the Synod of Alabama, and has been served by a succession of men of eminent abilities. In this field Mr. Davis has proven himself an earnest, able, preacher, a wise, sympathetic pastor, a tireless worker and splendid organizer. Not strange that his abundant labors should be abundantly blessed! Important improvements in progress on the main auditorium of the church which seats 700 persons were completed in a few months after his arrival. And during the first year of his pastorate about $13,000 were expended for all purposes. Later on the manse was removed and rebuilt with many modern improvements at a cost of $3,500. The location of the organ has been changed and it has been rebuilt at a cost $1,600. The Sunday-school room which seats 450 has

KESWICK.

This little town in England is made the starting point of much discussion and the centre of many debates, all because a yearly conference of Christians meets there to consider what the Bible offers to those who live worldly lives in the churches and to carnal Christians everywhere. Out of these conferences has come a movement toward a life of privilege, a higher plane of Christian living, a more complete consecration to Christ as Lord. No new system of Christian doctrine has been formulated. No new truths have been proposed. Indeed there has not been an effort to form what is called a Keswick School. There is not even a Keswick movement.

This annual conference has introduced kindred spirits and discovered to many who supposed they were toiling alone, that there are many in Israel who are likeminded, looking for a better way, the high way of holiness. Many others have gone to the conference as inquirers after truth, or out of curiosity, who have been deeply impressed and moved to seek the things of which they hear.

In discussing the present effects or results of this annual conference it is a mistake to ascribe to any writer who is associated with the conference or has adopted views held there, the leadership or the right to speak with authority for others. There is no human leadership. The spirit of the conference is to sink all human leadership in the headship and authority of our Lord Jesus Christ by the ministration of the Spirit.

It is therefore unwarranted to put together the writings of several who are prominent in the conference and to condemn the whole or any part of the teachings of the conference by the errors which such writers may individually hold or the extremes to which they may separately go.

One name is put prominently forward by those who discuss the teachings at this conference, which name does not belong to the Keswick conference. That is the name of Hannah Whitall Smith. She is the author of "The Christian Secret of a Happy Life." She belongs to the Society of Friends. She holds to a pietism or quietism which should be associated with its source, the doctrines held by the Society of Friends. Except so far as she separately teaches what others connected with the Conference at Keswick teach, she does not belong to Keswick at all. Multitudes have had a great blessing from reading her best known book. But that should not permit any to use that book to illustrate the teachings at Keswick. The writer well remembers her sweet-spirited son who died as his fellow-students in college, whose life is "The Record of a Happy Life." This is the beginning and the key to her later and more elaborate book which has helped so many. In any study of Keswick this should be separated and criticism of its contents considered on its individual claims. The teachings may be what some teachers at Keswick hold, but they are not due to Keswick conference as such.

The Keswick Conference exalts the lordship of Jesus Christ and the leadership of the Holy Spirit. It humbles the pride of intellect and searches the hidings of self-conceit and the vanity of learning. It will be found that the teachers at Keswick, and the conference, agree on certain truths which need to be exalted and emphasized more distinctly. It is plain that those who are associated in the Conference or accept its teachings are deeply spiritual and are being blessed in the service of the Lord.

In studying the movement among Christians arising from this center at Keswick, the Conference must be studied as to those things accepted generally, and it must be answered whether these are true or false. Beyond that, it is unfair to attribute to the conference and to hold the truth taught there responsible for any errors or infirmities of the teachers as individuals. The conference is not making new laws of life. It is not formulating any system of doctrine. It is the coming together of Christians to ask of the Lord what He offers to His people, and on what conditions and how far short they come of His fulness of blessing, how far they live beneath His life of privilege.

As to the two who most clearly give views which we Presbyterians should study and in what these teachings may be found, we may have a word next week.

DEATH OF REV. J. HENRY SMITH, D. D.

"Our beloved pastor died at 9 o'clock this a. m." Such is the brief announcement from Greensboro, on Monday last, that calls our Synod to mourn the loss of one who has been a tower of strength and wisdom in her councils for over twenty years. For months he had suffered greatly. Death to him was entrance into heavenly bliss. We refrain from any attempt to pay an adequate tribute to the memory of the deceased, leaving that for another occasion and an abler pen.

Dr. Smith was born in Lexington, Va., on Aug. 13th, 1820, received his theological education at Union Seminary, was licensed by Lexington Presbytery in August 24th, 1846, and ordained by West Hanover Presbytery in July, 1847. His first pastorate was at Pittsylvania, Va., from 1847 to 1850; from 1851 to '54 he was principal of Samuel Davis Institute. From 1854 to '59 he was pastor of Charlottesville church. He removed to Greensboro in 1859 and since has been the very successful and greatly beloved pastor of the First Presbyterian church in that city.

Few men, if any, have done more to make the Synod of North Carolina what it is than Dr. J. Henry Smith. He leaves three sons ministers of the Gospel—eminent in gifts and two not less eminent and faithful in the educational sphere. He leaves besides two daughters. To all we extend our tender sympathy.

DAVID G. WORTH.

Mr. David Gaston Worth, the only son of Governor Jonathan Worth passed away on Sunday last at his home in this city a little before midnight. He was born in Ashboro, December 1831. He has been engaged in mercantile business in this city since 1861, and during that time has been identified with every public movement that was made for progress and prosperity. He has been a consistent and valued friend of this paper. He was a deacon in the First Presbyterian church from 1868, until 1891, when he was elected ruling elder in the place of the late George Chadbourn. No community ever had a better citizen, no man ever had a kinder or wiser friend, no church a more faithful officer, than David Worth. His pastor furnishes us with the following sketch of his character:

The first thing that impressed one about the character of Mr. Worth was its integrity. With him this included all that is ordinarily involved in the term—the careful truthfulness of every word, the thorough honesty of every act the scrupulous fidelity to every obligation—but it involved more; He was a man "integer vitae." He had that "wholeness" of nature that belongs to those who have never tampered with conscience, or perverted the powers with which nature endowed them. It was this that gave him the clearness of vision that detected every sophistry by which wrong is made to appear right; the soundness of judgment by which he knew always the best thing to do; and the full-rounded conception of duty, the large and liberal views, that made him so valuable to city and State and church.

When you knew him better, you were impressed with his tenderness—his chivalry towards women, his sweetness to children, his gentle courtesy to all. You saw the depth of his affection for his family and friends, his sympathy with those in trouble or sorrow, and his compassion for all the needy and suffering. The latter took the form of a broad-minded and large-hearted liberality that was dispensed as modestly as it was given generously. His large benefactions to the Y. M. C. A. to the State University, to the Synod's Orphans' Home and to his church, could not escape notice; but there was a steady stream of benevolence which was known only to the beneficiaries and to those through whom it was dispensed. As the only son in a large family, there also fell to him the guardianship of a widening family circle, to all of whom he extended a father's care, and from whom he received an affection and honor which is the reward only of labors of love.

But when you knew Mr. Worth best, you found that a profound spirituality lay at the basis of his character. His habitual modesty and reserve kept him from often speaking of his spiritual feelings. At the close of his life he felt that he had erred in not giving freer testimony to God's grace. But in his public prayers all who heard him felt that he was no stranger to the secret place of the Most High. He had been for many years a most excellent teacher of the Scriptures in the Sunday-school. And when he unbosomed himself to those who were closest to him in his religious life, he revealed a devout faith in God, a simple dependence on His grace for pardon and strength and an humble submission of his will to God's that is known only to those who sit at the feet of Jesus.

His religious character has been tried in the last few years by two great tests. The first was the giving up of his son, Dr. George C. Worth, to go as a medical missionary to China. When he learned of his son's purpose he facilitated it in every possible way, gave him the fullest and most liberal training, equipped him thoroughly with everything necessary for his highest efficiency, and sent him forth with his approbation and blessing. But it rent his very heartstrings.

The other was the sudden and complete prostration of his health, and the weight of suffering that has lain upon him for the last two years. It is not easy for the strong man to bow himself, nor for the busy man of affairs to drop all his plans and activities and leave the reins for other hands to drive. But under this fiery test the gold came out fine gold. It has seemed strange to others that one who had led such a life should be so afflicted. That thought has never been his. His only fear has been lest in the extremity of his sufiering he might sin against God. But his trust knew no wavering. There was no shadow over his soul. He waited for his release as one watcheth for the morning. It came for him, as it did years ago for another honored elder of this church (Mr. Gibbs), on the communion Sabbath. On the day when the congregation that he loved sat at the Master's table on earth, the summons came for him. "Friend, come up higher."

To the above memorial wreath the present writer would add but a sprig from heart-graven impressions of an acquaintance of nearly forty years; an acquaintance in business, and latterly in church relations which ripened into something beyond even most cordial friendship, into brotherly affection. David Worth was a man to admire, to esteem, to love. To a character childlike in its simplicity there was added a tenderness that was womanly, and that wisdom, strength and firmness in unswerving devotion to truth and justice and right which are thoroughly manly. In his social intercourse, in his business dealings, in his relations with his brethren as a servant of Christ and leader in the house of the Lord, he exhibited such qualities and characteristics of mind and heart as made him to the eye of his fellows seem wellnigh faultless and complete. His disposition and his character were so well-rounded, indeed, that one must seek far to find points of distinguishing excellence. We find it in that deep humility before God and that implicit faith in the Saviour that has been justly said to have been the spring of his public and social virtues, his generous works and his noble benefactions.

All who knew Mr. Worth intimately with ready accord will testify to a sense of personal loss. We feel that we have lost a friend, nay more, a brother.

The admirable letter of Miss Virginia Wardlaw, elsewhere, will be found particularly interesting to our young readers not only on account of its contents but as being by one of their number and written for them. Our readers, all, have a treat in the letters of Dr. Chester and Rev. John L Stuart.

Whittier wrote to a friend: "If I ever feel like envying any one, it is not the world famous author, but some serene, devout soul who has made the life of Christ his own and whose will is the divine will."

Conscience is always true to the best light it has. No man can go against his knowledge of right without a sense of guilt; when he goes against his conscience he cannot even respect himself. — The Rev. George Schaffer, D. D.

GOLD DUST.

"Oh, give thanks unto the Lord; for He is good; for His mercy endureth forever."

Be not too busy with thy work and care
To look to God, to clasp thy hand in His:
Miss thou all else, but fail thou not of this;
Thou need'st not all alone thy burden bear;
Listen and wait, obey and learn His will;
His love and service all thy life shall fill.

"I will offer to Him the sacrifice of thanksgiving, and will call upon the name of the Lord."

* * *

Grant me never to complain,
Make me to Thy will resigned,
With a quiet humble mind,
Cheerful on my bed of pain.
In the flesh who suffers thus,
Shall be purified from sin,
And the soul renewed within;
Therefore pain is laid on us.

GONE.

Every day things are forever passing out of our sight and slipping beyond our reach. Of how many things we are compelled to say, "They are gone." We start with life all before us; in a while much that was once within our reach is gone. Time is gone, and cannot be recovered; youth is gone, never to return; opportunity is gone, and often wasted; influence sometimes is gone, through our own follies and misdeeds; money is gone, spent in useless and in foolish ways, and by and by life itself will be gone, and time will be gone, and we must meet the Judge who gave his life for us, and who gave us our lives that we might devote them to his service and his praise.

Moments are slipping by, opportunities are fleeing, years are passing, life is short, and in a little while everything w hich we once could have grasped is beyond our reach; and then comes the time of reckoning, the solemn account, the Judge of the quick and the dead, before whom we must stand. Let us then improve the present hour, grasp each opportunity as it comes, redeem the time, because the days are evil, and so be ready that we at last may meet our Lord in peace, and enter into his presence with joy.

"My days are gliding swiftly by,
And, I a pilgrim stranger,
Would not detain them as they fly,
Those hours of toil and danger.

"For O! we stand on Jordan's strand,
And soon we shall pass over;
And, just before the shining shore
We may almost discover.'

been greatly improved and plans are drawn for the building of a chapel in the suburbs of the city with a view to establishing a Third Presbyterian church. The golden anniversary of the dedication of the church building was held in February last and the excellent addresses delivered on that occasion have been printed in pamphlet form. Since this pastorate began 200 members have been added to the church; 82 on certificate and 118 by examination, thus bringing the membership to 475 and making it the largest church in the Synod with the single exception of the First church, Selma. In the last five years this church has contributed $38,000 for all purposes. And be it said to the honor of this people and their pastor that they have not lived solely for themselves, but have annually given large sums to Home Missions, Foreign Missions, Education and other causes.

Bro. Davis has been trusted and honored in the Synod of Alabama as in the Synod of North Carolina. He is now chairman of the Committee of Home Missions in his Presbytery, Chairman of the Committee of Synodical Evangelization, president of the Alabama State Sabbath Association and moderator of the Synod of Alabama. He has been ambitious in the highest, noblest, sense of that term. His constant prayer has been first to be true; true to himself, to his friends, to his Lord and Saviour, and secondly to be useful in the ministry of reconciliation. And surely this imperfect sketch of his twenty years work in three of our Synods is enough to abundantly prove that his life-long prayer has been honored with a life-long answer.

LETTER FROM DR. CHESTER.

OUR CHINA STATIONS.

Leaving Hangchow at 4 p. m., September 20th, accompanied by Mr. Painter, who has rendered me invaluable service since I reached China, as "guide, philosopher and friend, we reached, about daylight of the twenty-first, our station at

KIAHING.

Our force at this place consists of Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Hudson, Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Blain, Dr. and Mrs. Venable, and Miss Bessie Talbot. After a much relished breakfast with the Venables, I spent the morning in the dispensary. Dr. Venable has one small room which he calls his hospital, in which he was treating a poor fellow with a broken thigh. It is necessary when such cases, in which there is the possibility of fatal issue, are taken, to have papers carefully drawn by which some responsible "middle man" assumes all responsibility as to the result. Otherwise, the physician might be held responsible in case of the patient's death, and there would be serious trouble, and possibly a riot. Mr. Venable and Miss Talbot spent the morning in giving out medicines, according to the doctor's prescriptions, and washing and dressing all kinds of old sores and ulcers, with which these people are terribly afflicted. About one in ten of those you meet have elephantiasis, a form of leprosy, but happily not infectious, brought on by standing in the mud in the rice fields. I have occasionally received letters at the mission rooms indicating that, in the writer's opinion, our lady missionaries out here were having too nice and easy a time.

This was a sample of the kind of time the majority of them have, for the majority of them are connected in some way with this dispensary work. It was something I scarcely had the nerve to look at. I am sure that in itself it is not pleasant to them. Yet they find pleasure in it because it brings relief to these poor sufferers, and by means of it the bitter hostility of the people against the foreigner is gradually being removed.

In the afternoon Mr. Hudson, Mr. Painter, and I, went out to visit one of the church members, the wife of a thrifty farmer, in the country. On our arrival she lifted a tray cover from some viands on a table, and, according to universal custom here, brought us in some tea. When this was over she brought in something else; then another dish and another, until matters began to grow serious, for we had already dined before starting. Presently there was a pause and we hoped the feast was over; but there was a suspicious noise among the chickens, and we soon learned that she had gone out to kill one. By much begging we dissuaded her from this, but not from serving several other courses, one of which was a fish stew of dubious appearance and still more dubious taste. We asked her what it was. She went and brought the skin of the fish to show us. It was a stingaree! A fly, meanwhile, dropped into my tea, which she kindly removed with her fingers and then poured in more tea! We were forced to show appreciation of her hospitality by partaking of it all, because her husband, who was not a believer, and her brother-in-law who was head of the clan, were present, and nothing must be done to offend them. I had excused myself from the chop-sticks by exhibiting a lame wrist, but that only made me the victim of their politeness.

They saw to it that I at least should lack nothing. A very refreshing Chinese custom is to bring on, at the conclusion of a meal, instead of a finger bowl, a towel wrung out in boiling water. The host, in consideration of my lame wrist, took my towel and wiped my face for me. So ended the feast. They meant it in kindness. I trust that we will be rewarded for the infliction by having accomplished some good.

On the way home we saw the first house occupied by our missionaries here. It was a three-roomed mud hovel, in which Dr. Venable and Mr. Hudson passed one whole winter without kindling a fire, except under the dirt oven. In the spring Mr. Venable joined them, and lived there several months. This was all they could get at first, and they were thankful to get that, because opening a new station everything depends on getting some place which you have a legal claim. After the first year they moved from this into a five-roomed hovel. Finally they succeeded in renting the place now occupied, a native house in the city (the first two were outside the walls), where they have room enough for two families, and where they can make themselves tolerably comfortable. But owing to the lack of ventilation and sunlight no native house can be made thoroughly sanitary, and therefore I do not think it right for our missionaries to live in them any longer than necessity compels. We have bought a good location in Kiahing, which has been walled in, and will be large enough for our homes and the small hospital which Dr. V. hopes to build before long. Our friends have been several times in peril of mobs, but a kind Providence has kept them in safety and peace, and I have rarely visited happier homes than theirs. There are now about ten native Christians, one of whom is in training for the ministry and another for a medical assistant. After a delightful sojourn of a day and two nights we boarded Mr. Price's house-boat at Sinchang.

PERSONAL DECISION.

The surest mark of a weak character is the tendency to shift upon others what ought to be decided in person. Not only does this trait exhibit instability of mind but usually it indicates insincerity of purpose. Those who oftenest ask advice usually seek it from a prejudiced source; and the man who falls into the habit of transferring important questions from the forum of his own conscience or judgment to that of his neighbors' or his friends' seeks a change of venue only to confirm some secret wish while appearing to escape responsibility. The boy who wants a piece of pie will go to his mother, but the lad who wishes to go fishing will ask his father's permission, knowing that his mother has a natural fear of the water.

Men are children of a larger growth, and John Doe asks Richard Roe whether it is going to rain, so as to be confirmed in his own purpose of leaving his umbrella at home; while Richard Roe asks John Doe what he thinks of St. Paul stocks, simply because having made up his mind to buy in that market he wishes his neighbor to shoulder the blame in case of loss from the purchase.

In the series of papers which General Porter lately contributed to the Century he notes that the Army of the Potomac began its forward movement when General Grant abolished the almost nightly council of war which previous commanders were accustomed to hold. The corps commander who is always seeking advice wins few victories; the broker who asks his right hand neighbor when to buy and his left hand neighbor when to sell might as well make an assignment now, for it will come to that in the end. A man who takes all the remedies his friends suggest for his rheumatism will not live long enough to die of that disease. It is the mark of a fine character when a man dares to decide all of life's issues for himself, from the putting on of his overshoes to how to serve his God.

What the world needs is not windengines but steam-engines, self-centered forces which do not wait for favorable winds to blow, but generate their own powers of propulsion. Better to make a dozen mistakes than never to makes a decision. One Luther is worth a regiment of Erasmuses; in the long fight between a hero and an empire the hero always wins. No man becomes a Christian who lingers to "confer with flesh and blood." The question of our personal allegiance to Jesus Christ is not one we can transfer to any other court than that of our own conscience, and "he who hesitates is lost." No one else can decide this duty but the individual, and it may be reserved to no other time than Now.—Interior.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

Mr. Ruskin has written some sixty-four books and his publisher pays him $20,000 a year.

Miss Marie Audubon, a granddaughter of the naturalist, has translated from the French the hitherto unpublished journals of her illustrious ancestor. The labor of translation occupied twelve years.

We see it stated that since the middle of November last, over 120,000 copies of J. M. Barrie's books have been sold in England and the United States—100,000 of these being "Sentimental Tommy" and "Margaret Ogilvy." It is said that the sale of the latter book in England is only restricted by the difficulty in reproducing the etched frontispiece portrait of Margaret Ogilvy, which is printed in Paris, and cannot be supplied quickly enough to meet the demand for the book.

Mr. Garrett P. Serviss, the widely known and popular astronomer, will have a most instructive and interesting article in Appletons' Popular Science Monthly for December, in which he discusses the probability of there being planets similar to our own earth, containing inhabitants, among the so-called fixed stars.

The Christmas Ladies' Home Journal will have Christmas stories by Mary E. Wilkins, Ruth McEnery Stuart, Hamlin Garland, Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, Mrs. Mark Morrison and Lilian Bell.

Bells at Evening and other verses by Frances J. Crosby with biographical sketch by Rev. Robert Lowry, D. D., has been published by the Biglow and Main Co., New York. This volume, which is bound in a neat attractive form with two photo portraits, is sold for Miss Crosby's benefit who has been blind for some years.

MAGAZINES.

The old reliable Turner's Almanac has been received. This is the 61st year of its publication. Price 10 cents. Jas. H. Enniss, Raleigh, N. C.

Emerson and Concord is the title of the eighth of the series of American Bookmen in The Bookman for November. The Progress of Fonetik Refawrm, Tantatus, An Epoch-Making Lexicon, Launcelot and Gawaine, In Kedar's Tents, and the always newsy and interesting Chronicle and Comment are among the table of contents.

BOOKS.

Bible Study by Doctrines, by Rev. Henry T. Sell, of Chicago, Ill. Fleming H. Revell Company Publishers New, York, pages 150, price 50 cents, is a book to aid Christians to give an answer to every man of the hope that is in them. It is by the author of "Supplemental Bible Studies" and "Bible Study by Books" and is valuable for the purpose intended.

The Outstretched Hand, by Annie Maria Barnes, is a very interesting little story of mission work in Mexico. It shows forcibly how a young Christian life well lived, can influence those brought in contact, even the most depraved. Published by Presbyterian Committee of Publication, Richmond, Va,

Miss Wildfire, by Julie M. Lippman. Illustrated by Ida Waugh, Philadelphia, the Penn Publishing Co., Presbyterian Board of Publication. Price $1.25. A most readable story teaching the lesson of how young and ungoverned life may be won by noble and self-sacrificing love. The plot is well drawn and the story told in an attractive and easy style.

The Presbyterian Churches, Their Place and Power in Modern Christendom, by the Rev. J. N. Olyilvie, M. A. This volume 16mo of 162 pages with a chapter on the history of American Presbyterian Churches by Prof. Zenos, of Chicago, is one of The Guild Text Books published by Fleming H. Revell Co., New York and Chicago, paper net 25 cents, flexible cloth net 40 cents. This is short and yet prepared with great care and is an excellent concise compend of Presbyterian history from the days of the apostle to the present.

A Concise History of Missions, by Edwin Munsell Bliss, D. D., is a volume of 316 pages, cloth bound. Price 75 cents, published by Fleming H. Revell Co., New York. It gives a summary of the whole field of missionary operations to the present time. It is accurate, clear and comprehensive as far as possible in the limited space.

After Pentecost, What? This cloth bound volume of nearly 300 pages from the publishers Fleming H. Revell Co., Chicago and New York, price $1.00, is a discussion of the Mission of the Holy Spirit from a standpoint rarely taken. The writer is careful in statement, clear in thinking and calls attention to the wider problem and study of the relation of the Spirit to the Christological thought of the present day. The author writes in epigrammatic sentences and holds attention rather by his thinking than by his style. His book is on new lines that justify more attention than is given them generally.

In the publishing of works by Southern authors the B. F. Johnson Publishing Co., of Richmond, Va, is doing a very valuable work. Last week we noticed Lee's Primary History and now we wish to call attention to Lee's Advanced History and Lee's Brief History of the United States also to Southern Literature, by Miss Louise Manly. The last named is the only book of the kind we have seen and the author has done her work well. The sketches close with the year '95; so exclude our North Carolina poet, Henry Jerome Stockard, who published his "Fugitive Lines" in the present year. This work is adapted for class or general use and we would like to see it in our schools and the home.

Disartsville :—Two persons have been received and are awaiting the evangelist to be baptized and received into full membership of the church.

Cherryville :—At last the hopes of the little flock at Cherryville have been realized. The first service in their first church-home was held Friday evening, 12th inst. On Saturday, Rev. R. Z. Johnston (who nearly twenty years ago preached here occasionally) came up and preached morning and afternoon.

On Sunday morning a large congregation was present at the communion service—which to many was a very solemn and gracious season. One member was received by profession of faith in October, and three before the morning service (14th inst), one by letter and two by profession. A Sabbath school with twenty-five pupils was organized. Never, I think, were a people happier and more grateful over the completion of their first house of worship. When all the subscriptions have been paid; they will lack $75 of paying for the building. They have done nobly and feel much encouraged W. R. M.

Church Organization :—On November 9th a commission of Fayetteville Presbytery consisting of Revs. K. M. McIntyre, C. H. Dobbs, Jr., and A. M. McLauchlin met at Troy, N. STEAMSHIP "CITY OF PEKING."

Would the readers of the N C. PRESBYTERIAN like to hear something from the little party of missionaries returning to China. Miss French, Mrs. Stuart and myself started from Nashville on the 20th of September, but our ways parted for awhile at St Louis. Miss F. went the Union Pacific route and Mrs. S. and I took the Santa Fe route, stopping a day in Kansas City with our old friends Dr. and Mrs. S. M. Neel, the last person in our own church from whom we separated. The Santa Fe route is very interesting in some parts, but very dull and dreary in others. We met again in San Francisco and went aboard the "City of Peking on October 2nd We found about thirty passengers among whom were five other missionaries, all but one, Miss McGilvary who was returning to Siam, bound for the land of Sinim. We travelled over smooth seas for nearly seven days, when on the morning of Saturday, Oct. 9th, we saw the land of the Sandwich Islands. We coasted along the side of the one called Oahu, for an hour or more, when we turned into the harbor of Honolulu, and saw the city lying before us, with the hills rising up behind it. It took some time for the big steamer to pick her way up the channel and finally round to and come alongside of the dock, and during this interesting time, the passengers were watching with intense interest. Some agents and the health officers had come aboard by means of a small boat. The divers were on one side, in the water bantering the passengers to throw a nickel for them to dive after. Here goes one through the air, and as soon as it touches the water half a dozen heels go up into the air and the heads go downward after the nickel. Soon they reappear, and one of them holds up the money, which he was successful in catching "on the wing." This is repeated a number of times though sometimes they all reappear empty handed and the money is lost.

About 9 a. m., we got ashore and on feet pressed the firm mother earth again. How beautiful the streets, the long avenues and the thick groves! Everything on this little island is interesting. There are fine broad streets, beautifully paved, and carriages and horses are hurrying to and fro. The streets cars are in operation also. There are large public buildings and stores and everything wears the air of thrifty business

The city contains a population of 29,000, embracing several nationalities. There are whites from the States and Europe. The Chinese and Japanese are in strong evidence. The Portuguese are not a few, and then the native islanders of whom, however, there are very few of unmixed blood. They are generally half-breeds and can be distinguished by their fondness for flowers. Most of them wear wreaths of them about their necks, or the men, around their hats. You see many women sitting on the sidewalks wearing these wreaths. We hurried along to get better views of the country and drove out about two miles to see a building recently erected for schools for boys and for girls and also a very interesting museum of Polynesian articles collected from many islands in the Pacific. These were all very interesting and instructive and we might have spent several hours profitably in looking over them, but our time was limited to a day, and there were many other things to see. In the distance the sugar plantations were pointed out to us, one said to be the largest in the world. Then our road led through fields of rice and the taro. Then by the vineyard and orange grove. We passed by beautiful homes, little cottages surrounded by beautiful trees in full bloom, among which were the marmosa and others we could not name, while the oleander and other flowering plants seemed to abound everywhere. Then we came to a large orchard of the banana fruit and saw the plants loaded with the huge bunches. Further along the tall stately trunks of the cocoanut with a bunch of foliage at the very top, and nestled snugly under the branches and leaves, we saw the cocanuts, like so many big eggs in a nest. Then an orchard grove of fine apple trees hanging full of the lucious fruit. There were other fruit trees which we took to be the mango. And then there were the ornamental trees and shrubs—the stately palm and palmetto, the spreading banyan and the stiff stumpy cactus. Vegetation seems so luxuriant here, but they tell us that when the islands were first discovered there were hardly any trees and very little vegetation. There are five macadamised roads leading to the country and we drove out on one of them to a park and a bathing resort. On the way we saw many other vehicles, and people on horseback going at a gallop. Here goes a woman at a sweeping gallop sitting gracefully in a man's saddle while the divided skirts flutter in the breeze on each side of the horse. Here comes the bicycle, which also has found its way to the island. Now we return to the town and pass by many places of interest. Here are the hospital grounds named after Queen Emma and worthy of the good queen. Here is a street named for her also and there is the home where she lived. That is President Dole's residence, there is the old stone church built by the natives in the early days of mission work and able to seat about 3,000 people. There is the state house, &c., &c. The city is supplied with fine water pumped from an artesian well, and the electric light is used over the city, and the best telephone system in use anywhere. The stores have a fine display of goods of all kinds and business seems to be flourishing. Every one that we came in contact with seemed to favor annexation, and we were told that the popular sentiment among the substantial people was decidedly in favor of it. It seems to me that it would be a good thing both for our country and for the Hawaian Islands, but especially for the latter, as they are in danger of being annexed by some other power, in case the U. S. A. declines the proffered hand. But Senator Morgan is making a careful study of the question on the ground, and he will be able to put the question clearly before the people of the United States.

We enjoyed our stay of twenty-four hours on the land exceedingly, and we met with many of the good people of the community and received a warm welcome and many courtesies from them. We were only sorry that we could not stay longer and see something more of the people and learn more about the wonderful work carried on among them by the American Board for so many years. We had the pleasure of meeting the widow of Rev. Titus Coan, who once baptized 1,900 converts in one day. We also met many sons and daughters of the missionaries of other days whose names would be familiar to many readers. We went aboard our steamer at 10 p. m., and waited for the word that would start our ship on its voyage again, and at 11 p. m., the captain called to "Let go the shore ropes" and soon the big screw began to revolve and the vessel began to move and shortly the land began to fade away from our sight, and our visit to the "gem of the Pacific" was over, but bearing a very pleasant recollection in our memories.

October 21st. We are now in sight of Japan and expect to meet the "Coptic" soon and send our letters back by it. We have had a delightful trip so far and thank the Lord for His great goodness to us. With kind regards,

Yours fraternally,

JOHN L. STUART.

REMEMBER THE ORPHANS ON THANKSGIVING DAY.

In spite of five cent cotton, our dearly beloved Southland will see to it that their orphans have a bright and joyous Christmas. We have much to be thankful for, and as Thanksgiving day is a good time to show it, let the good people everywhere, on that day, remember the orphans! At the Thornwell Orphanage, Clinton, S. C., there are one hundred and sixty-five orphan children Of these ninety are from South Carolina, twenty seven from Georgia, and the rest from every Southern State from Virginia to Texas, from Florida to Missouri The institution is under Presbyterian control, but the children are from twelve different denominations of Christians, and the majority were of other than Presbyterian parentage. No distinction is made on account of religion, in receiving orphans. All of these little people are dependent orphans. They are here taught to take care of themselves. The boys are trained in farm, workshop, and printing office; and the girls in all domestic duties and both boys and girls are given a fine education besides. They are sent out able to care for themselves, and hundreds have been fitted for life. But those who are now at the Orphange are children. They need a father's care and a mother's love. You, reader are asked to be to them father and mother. Send them a barrel of flour, molasses, rice or sugar. Five dollars will feed, clothe and educate one of the orphans for a month. Even a nickel will provide one meal. Who will refuse to help? In fact, who is there that has a heart that does not hasten to have a share in a work like this.

Before shipping donations ask the railroad companies to ship free. They have big hearts and love to help the orphans at all times. Ship to Thornwell Orphanage, Clinton, S. C. Send gifts of money to Rev. Dr. W. P. Jacobs, same office.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent)

Washington, D. C., Nov. 17, '97.

This being set aside by the world's committee of the Y. M. C. A., as a week of prayer for young men and for the institution whose mission it is to work for them, the managers of the local Y. M. C. A.. deemed it a fitting time to circulate a letter appealing for aid for their new building. This letter, signed by a number of Washington's most prominent citizens who belong to the association, is in part as follows: "There are in our city peculiar temptations which come with double force to the vast number of young men who come to the National Capital from country districts. We believe that the Christian churches of this city should make the one institution whose doors stand ever open to the stranger, as well as the resident young man, so sorely beset with temptations, and under which so many fall, a place so beautifully and completely furnished that every young man may find within its walls everything he shall need or desire to make the association a home that shall refine, elevate, educate, and point him to the Master. An active Christian Association is a gain to the church; its doors are open during the hours the doors of the church are closed, and it stands ever pointing young men to the church. The Christian workers developed within the association stand among the foremost in the active work of the church. A Young Men's Christian Association building for the 40,000 young men of our city can be secured if we have the co-operation of the public generally."

The rather one-sided controversy over the Christian Endeavor Society, which created such a sensation at the semi-annual conference of the Lutheran pastors of Baltimore and Washington, held in this city this week, is generally regretted. The C. E. Society was attacked by Rev. Dr. J. C. Burke, pastor of Third Lutheran church of Baltimore, and president of the Eastern Conference, who said he had a Christian Endeavor Society of 400 members in his church, but had little confidence in its value as an organization. The grievance of Dr. Burke is that he believes a large percentage of the C. E. Society place their allegiance to that organization above their allegiance to the church. The Endeavorers were warmly defended by Dr. J. W. Miller, pastor of the Second Lutheran Church of Baltimore, and by several Washington pastors. The

ROMISH CUSTOMS IN BRAZIL.

DEAR MR. MCLAURIN:—I am writing this with the idea that your little readers might like to here about some Romish customs in Brazil. If any of them had been at the window with me this morning, they very likely would have laughed at what would seem to them a very queer little boy indeed. He was colored, and over his white shirt and long trousers he wore a faded green coat, reaching down to his knees, and without any sleeves. He had heelless slippers on his bare brown feet, and carried in his hand a green bag just as faded as his coat, with a silver tinsel ornament on it. He had no hat but held a big umbrella over himself and the bag. He was begging for some saint, or for money for masses for the souls of the dead. Not only little boys, but men go about in these faded green or red coats, with these equally faded bags, and under umbrellas that have also lost their original colors. They never have new coats, but surely the day will come when the Church will have to provide new ones for the alms-gatherers for their saints. Sometimes they have flowers stuck in the ornaments on the boys; I suppose that is when it is for the Virgin, who gets all, or nearly all the glory, adoration, and honor due to the Trinity.

Don't make any noise, now, children, there is a child's funeral coming. The little children rush into their houses, exclaiming gleefully, that a funeral is coming. Every one runs to the windows to see the little anginho. Four little girls are carrying an open, light-blue coffin trimmed with silver braid, and inside, surrounded by flowers is a little two-year-old boy dressed in pink and satin and ribbons, its pale face painted with carmine, and on his black curls is an artificial wreath. It's baby hands are tied together with a pink ribbon and an artificial spray of flowers is between them. One of the little girls is crying, but she does not care if people see her, isn't this her little brother who is going to be put in the damp, black ground? And at that thought she shudders, because she never heard about little children singing "around the throne of God in heaven," or lying in Jesus' bosom.

There is a long train of children behind her, all dressed in white, with bright, blue ribbons put on crosswise. There is a band of little boys also, and behind these, comes the father, his eyes red and swollen with weeping, thinking of the little one who will not run to meet him when he comes back. He doesn't know he is in heaven waiting to meet him there, because he believes that before he can get there, he will have to spend many thousand years in purgatory. You don't see the mother or any women with them. Women scarcely ever go to funerals. The half distracted mother ran out of the house weeping, with the young baby in her arms, and would have followed it, if the women who were with her, had not kept her back. "Don't cry," says a hard-faced, but well-meaning old woman, "you have plenty more." "You will soon forget him with so many others," says another. "Be thankful that he was baptized, and didn't die a pagan," says a third. "Yes, my daughter, have patience, if he was baptized he went to heaven, so console yourself." Yes she has plenty more, eight besides little dead Francisco, but what of that? No other little one will take his place. And inwardly resolving to name the next boy she has after the dead one, she goes to prepare some coffee for the houseful of women, who have come partly from curiosity, and partly to offer their rather rough consolation.

If a baby dies unbaptized it doesn't, according to their belief, go to heaven, but stays forever wandering between heaven and hell. Seven years after its death, it is supposed to cry, and if anyone should be walking near, or on its grave, and hear, they should immediately baptize it.

Now the little band is returning from the cemetery: the children are laughing and talking gaily, and even the baby's sister's tear-stained face is bright and cheerful, as she listens to her companion's lively tales. Only the father, walking behind them, is thinking of Francisco, and planning about the little white wooden cross and railing, he hopes to have put over the baby's grave in a few days.

Formerly, an unbaptized child could not be buried inside of a cemetery, but only outside, at the gates, or at the gate of a cow-pen. Many mothers will not cry when their babies are taken from them, because it is a common saying, that it is a sin to cry for an angel, but in many cases, especially when the parents are not Christians, it is rather because the grief is very shallow. I have heard a missionary say that she has often found that she has taken entirely too much sympathy with her, in going to see bereaved mothers, and has had to bring more than half of it back with her, because there was so little feeling for their loss, on the part of the afflicted mothers.

There is a funeral coming out of the corner-house on the next block. First comes out a hatless man with a long, purple, sleeveless coat, over his black suit, bearing aloft a black cross. Then comes the rest of the brotherhood, similarly attired. They are there, because the dead man belonged to the same order as they. You notice that these men, and all the accompanying ones, have long wax candles in their right hands. At a certain part in the ceremony at the church, they will light them. After them comes the men bearing the coffin, which has a big cross of gold braid embroidered on the top. I think if we were nearer, we could see the gilt ornaments with Requiescat in pace on them. Just behind the coffin comes the priest, with white cassocks and black robe, a black cap, and a handsome white and gold scarf on his shoulders. He is praying for the dead, out of that little book he has in his hand. Then come all the numerous friends and relatives, all with their candles.

The wife and daughters are crying, and screaming. You can hear them quite well, although they live a block away. Brazilians hardly ever control their grief, but often it may be because, they have so little time to realize their loss before it is time to bury them.

On the third, seventh and thirtieth day of their passing away, masses are said, and also on the anniversaries of their death. When a young girl dies she is accompanied by all her girl friends dressed in white. The coffin is always open for young people, and blue for young girls.

Yesterday an old lady came to ask an alms from mother for "Our Lady of Purity," but she declined.

I have a great deal more I would like to write about, but mother says I must not make my first letter too long, so en me assigno sua constante leitora.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS IN ADVANCE.

It is within limit to say that the members of our Southern Presbyterian Church will spend two hundred thousand dollars, next month upon Christmas entertainments, enjoyments and presents to their friends not including what they will give to benevolences.

Please give thought to this: More than half of the Assembly's home missionaries in Florida and west of the Mississippi River, expect this year to receive an average salary, all told of less than five hundred dollars. Deduct house rent, the expense of a horse and buggy or rail road fare and how meagre, insufficient, is the balance for the support of a family!

Now mark: There are important collections appointed by the Assembly for December. Don't think of deducting one cent from that which duty and privilege call on you to give there.

But we ask one thousand persons (of whom the reader is one) to consider and to take something from the amount you will otherwise spend on personal enjoyments, entertainments or presents to friends, and give it to carry some Christmas cheer (in many cases it will supply necessities) to the homes of these missionaries. You will both give and derive happiness from so doing. I have just returned from Florida. A number of our ministers there are on fields in which our churches, because of the great destructive freeze of '94 are now and for two years more will be unable to pay scarcely half a salary. The ministers ask shall we leave these churches to go altogether down or will the children of our God help us to remain. Others west of the Mississippi river in weak but promising churches are similarly straitened.

Now we ask one thousand Christians to deduct from the money you will spend on Christmas a portion, remit it at once, or before December 15th, to the treasurer, W. A. Powell, Atlanta, Ga., and let us send it to the missionaries before December 20th, and cheer their hearts and homes.

With best wishes for the happiness of your homes,

Your friend and brother,
J. N. CRAIG,
Secretary.

CHILDREN AND THE HOME.

The presence of children in the house means life and all that life involves—motion, sparkle, countless activities and pleasures—and with it the tide of new emotions, of joys and sympathies and sorrows, flows through the house. Where they are, one's own youth can never be forgotten; and the perpetual reminders of it keep the heart open, incline it to tenderness, make one wider and deeper, better acquainted with humanity, better acquainted, too, with divinity.

One of the saddest signs of the times is the tendency to substitute social life for home life. Fathers and mothers have so many outside claims, as they call them, to meet that they neglect the home. The domestic circle is becoming a tradition of the past. And yet in the family, as God constituted it, is the hope of humanity.

Dr. Cuyler says: "No two words have a more vital importance than Christianity and home. Underneath the foundations of both Church and State is the household. It is older than either of them. There is no such school of Bible religion in the land as a happy, God-fearing home. No Church is so affected for restraint from evil, and for growth in all Christian graces, as 'the church in the house.' There stands the domestic altar. There is felt the influence that molds character from the cradle to the judgment-seat. Such a home on earth is the surest preparation for the home eternal in the heavens."

And Dr. J. P. Thompson says: "Home, that briefest word of our good old Saxon tongue—there lies in it the wealth of all language, of all affection, of all virtuous joy, of all pure memories, of all innocent hopes—the prattle of the infant, the gleeful laugh of childhood, the song of the maiden, the cheerful labor, the merry pastime, the sweet repose of evening when toil is ended, the united meal, the household stories, music and diversions, the various ages, interests and plans revolving around one center, and that center, love Whose eye does not moisten with unbidden tears at the thought of home? These four letters are the chord of human happiness for every gamut. Wherever the scale of life begins, these letters are its perfect consonance. "God setteth the solitary in families." This was his institution in the beginning and for all time.—Exchange.

HEROISM WITHOUT SUFFERING.

There is sometimes as much merit in taking pains for Christ's sake as in suffering pain. We are more apt to conceive of a saint as one ready to expire for Christ's cause, than as one ready to perspire for it; but the call to duty is oftener one to patient, plodding, thorough-going fidelity in little things, rather than one to yield up the life in some supreme act of sacrifice. A mother who takes the trouble daily to teach her child, patiently and wisely, how to conquer the evils in the world against which it needs to guard, may be more truly the saviour of the child than if she threw herself into the flames to rescue its body from death. The fidelity to details that makes a life luminously consistent and Christ-like may be a stronger argument than martyrdom for the truth. Conscientious living often counts for more than conscientious dying.—Sunday School Times.

WAIT FOR THE MUD TO DRY.

Father Graham was an old-fashioned gentleman beloved every one, and his influence in the little town was great, so good and active was he.

A young man of the village had been badly insulted, and came to Father Graham full of angry indignation, declaring that he was going at once to demand an apology.

"My dear boy," Father Graham said, "take a word of advice from an old man who loves peace. An insult is like mud: it will brush off much better when it is dry. Wait a little, till he and you are both cool, and the thing is easily mended. If you go now, it will be only to quarrel."

It is pleasant to be able to add that the young man took his advice, and before the next day was done the offending person came to beg forgiveness.

Answer. The sixth commandment forbiddeth the taking away of our own life, or the life of our neighbor unjustly, or whatsoever tendeth thereunto.

INTRODUCTORY.

In Lessons I and II, Third Quarter we have an account of the first visit of Paul to Philippi and the founding of the first church in that city, as well as of the imprisonment and the earthquake and the conversion of the jailer. This city was about ten miles from Neapolis, on the river Gangites. It was named for its builder Philip of Macedon. This letter to the church at Philippi was written as one of four, the others being Ephesians, Colossians and Philemon, by the Apostle Paul during the first imprisonment at Rome. He writes nothing of reproof as to most of the other churches to which he wrote. Four times the church had helped to sustain him in poverty and imprisonment. After the founding of the church the apostle visited the city twice and had hopes, when writing this letter, which we have reason to think were realized, of visiting it again. This letter was written and sent by Epaphroditus who had come from the church as one of its members, to bring supplies for the apostle. The letter is beautiful, revealing something of the character of the church at Philippi, giving especially in the third chapter one secret of the apostle's life and revealing the deep inner joy of his soul as a prisoner, growing old, weary and cast out by his own countrymen. His one great message was of his personal experience—"Rejoice in the Lord alway, and again I say rejoice." The object of his rejoicing was the Lord now exalted.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 1. If there be: a double argument and plea, if what makes Christian unity possible is among you, if also what would make me full of joy can be found, I would plead for that unity and joy. He names the things. Consolation. A form of the word translanted Comforter as a name of the Holy Spirit in the Gospel of John, meaning here, comfort, encouragement, strengthening. Comfort of love is from another word meaning incentive which love brings as by putting one word beside another. If any fellowship of the Spirit. That word "fellowship" is one of the richest in the New Testament. It is translated "communion" in the full form of the apostolic benediction found at the close of Second Corinthians. It covers the relation of the Father and the Son with the Holy Ghost in the benefits of the Gospel. It is that in which we are "made partakers" and have "fellowship with the Father and with His Son Jesus Christ." It is participation in the ministration of the Holy Spirit which marks and distinguishes this dispensation. If any bowels, R. V. "tender mercies," where we would use the word heart. Mercies, R V. "compassion," meaning "pity for the sorrows and weaknesses of others and loving forgiveness for their sins and mistakes."—Peloubet.

Vs. 2 Fulfill ye My joy, make it full, complete it. Likeminded, thinking of the same thing in the two senses of unity of affection, having the same love, and of sentiment. of one accord "repeated in a stronger form of one mind, thinking the one thing."—Vincent. This is true unity a very different thing from uniformity.

Vs. 3. Through strife, a contentious spirit. Vainglory, self-conceit. For selfishness manifesting itself in contention with others is the great enemy of Christian unity. Personal vanity is the most prolific source of contentions. In lowliness of mind, not mock humility like Uriah Heep's, nor ignorance of what powers or possessions God has bestowed, but realizing that God gives all we have, submitting to Him to be searched and shown our real selves and conditions and asking to see ourselves in comparison of our Saviour Jesus Christ and not in comparison with fellowmen. Each esteem other better than themselves. Fix attention to those things in which others excel us, not on those in which we excel others.

Vs. 4. Look not every man on his own things. Do not be absorbed in self but in others.

Vs. 5. Let this mind be in you. Imbibe the Spirit of the Master, receive Him as life and live by Him.

Vs. 6. Who being, means "existing," both in past and present attributes and nature of God. The form of God, not the shape, "but the essence of the person." "No one can appear, or exist, in view of others, 'in the form of God,' that is manifesting all divine perfections, who is not God."—Hodge. Thought it not robbery, R. V. "counted it not a prize," did not think His divine equality as a prize to be grasped at and held at all hazards, but laid aside the manifestation and glory of it.

Vs. 7. Made himself of no reputation, did not enrich Himself, but emptied Himself not of His divine nature, but of its glories and prerogatives. Took upon Him the form of a servant, grasping not sovereignty but service.

Vs. 8 In fashion as a man, possessed of a true body and a rational soul, a soul to grow in wisdom as a body in stature. Humbled Himself. The emphasis is on the word humbled, to submit to death, even the death of the cross.

Vs. 9. Wherefore, honoring humility and obedience. God hath highly exalted Him in His mediatorial office with the name above every name, as seated on His Father's throne, yet to come in glory, and now Head over all things to the Church.

Vs. 10. The name of Jesus, not merely the calling of His title, but acknowledging His authority, willingly or of necessity.

Vs. 11. Every tongue should confess. Quoted from Isaiah xlv. 23. To the glory of God the Father, as He came to glorify the Father, the Spirit to reveal Him and so we should honor the Spirit.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

1. There is only one way of true greatness—service.

2. In this way alone can we ever have true unity in the Church.

3. This comes by the Spirit of Christ, showing us Christ and ourselves in comparison with Christ.

Christ is the ideal Man.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Dec. 5th, 1897.

SERVING OTHERS.

Text for the week:

Whosoever will be chief among you let him be your servant. Matt. xx: 27.

Daily Readings:

Monday. Preferring one another. Rom. 12: 10-21.

Tuesday. "Inasmuch." Matthew 25: 34-40.

Wednesday. "What she could." Mark 14: 3-9.

Thursday. Relief. Acts 11: 19-30.

Friday. Feet to the lame. Job. 29: 1-25.

Saturday. The reward. Luke 6:30 38.

Sunday. Topic. "Not to be ministered unto, but to minister." Matt. 20: 20-28.

Notes:

The duty of serving others is enjoined by Christ, not so strongly and directly by word as by his example and by the general precepts of unselfishness and love which he constantly taught and which he placed at the very base of all Christian service.

We should serve others for Christ's sake, and in the spirit of the Master as illustrated by His work for us on earth. His service was in humility. The example He gave in washing the feet of His disciples set forth the duty of ministering unto others as no words could. It implies that no selfish ambition finds approval in heaven, and that doing for others in ways however humble and lowly manifests most clearly the true principles of Christianity. This act of our Saviour stamps the seal of approval on all work done for His sake, however little or however menial it may appear in the sight of men.

But Christ's service was always in love. Service without love is never a service acceptable to God. It is love that dignifies and ennobles any service even the least. The cup of cold water given in love for the Master to one of His disciples goes not without reward. The commendation given to the woman who broke the box of ointment and anointed Him was that she thus expressed her love—and so doing had done what she could—and the way is open to us to do in measure or manner, great or small, such deeds of love and kindness to Christ's children and servants on earth as will manifest our love to Him. The poor ye have always with you.

Service in humility and in love must always be wise service. We need always even in the sincerest efforts to do the will of God, the wisdom that comes from above—the direct guidance, direction and control of the Holy Spirit, and for this we needs must seek earnestly and with full intent to be governed by Him implicitly.

Christ now, as regards service, is represented by his followers—and so service to them for His sake is true service to Him." Inasmuch as ye have done it to one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me.

Suggestions:

In doing for others most carefully avoid everything that might suggest a feeling of superiority in condition or circumstance over the person served—"all ye are brethren."

Let the love which prompts the service show out freely, especially in gentleness of manner and meekness of spirit.

Never lecture or chide, or reproach, even in pointing out what is wrong and should be corrected, and yet be frank and uncompromising against all evil. It will require God's grace abundantly to do this.

Let the grand end of all service be to lead to the Master—or to place the afflicted ones in the loving arms of their Saviour.

WORTH. At his residence in Wilmington, Sunday, Nov. 21st, 1897, David Gaston Worth, in the 66th year of his age.

CORRELL. In Edna, Texas, on Nov. 7th, 1897, Mrs. Agnes E Correll, wife of Mr. E. M. Correll and sister of Rev. W.L. Lowrance, in the sixty-fourth year of her age. Mrs. Correll was a native of Iredell county, N. C., where she spent the most of her life. Uniting with the Presbyterian church early in life, she bore the "burden and heat of the day," but now she "rests from her labors and her works do follow her." She exemplified in her life to an eminent degree the Christian graces of meekness, patience and consecration. She had that "faith which worketh by love." Her love to the Saviour and to all the saints, led her to a life of self sacrificing devotions. Nor did her love stop here, but it went out to the perishing heathen. Mrs. Correll was the honored and beloved president of the Ladies' Missionary Society of the Presbyterian church in Edna. Her beautiful missionary spirit and her zeal for God's glory in the salvation of the perishing, made a profound impression on every member of the society. Having performed her part in the Church militant, she has been called "up higher" to join those around the throne in ascribing salvation to our God.

Her testimony to the saving power of the Gospel was a benediction to the community in which she lived and the hallowed influences that went from her devoted life will never die. "She being dead yet speaketh."

Her body, which was a "temple of the Holy Ghost," was borne reverently from the church, where impressive services were held, to the cemetery, where it will sleep in undisturbed repose till the morning of the resurrection.

"With us her name shall live.
Through long succeeding years,
Embalmed with all our hearts can give,
Our praises and our tears."

Tribute of Respect.

MRS. RACHEL DEWEY WILDES. The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Presbyterian church of Raleigh, has again been called upon to mourn the loss of a devoted member, Mrs. Rachel Dewey Wildes, whose mission on earth ended September 13th, 1897.

Mrs. Wildes is justly entitled to be mentioned in the honor roll of our society, as she was one of its organizers, and ever since to the time of her death has been a regular and willing contributor to its work.

While of a gentle, retiring, almost shrinking disposition, she was ever ready to manifest her interest in this cause so dear to the Redeemer, not only by her regular contributions, but by active sympathy with the various fields of mission labor in all of which she was well-informed. She obeyed the command of our Saviour in sending the Word to a dying world, and this society is blessed in feeling that another of its beloved members is added to those who have gone before and whose names constitute a rich legacy to those who remain in the field of active work.

Resolved. That this memorial be spread on the minutes and published in the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. W. S. PRIMROSE,
President.

In Memoriam.

On Monday, September 13th, at her home in Raleigh, N. C., Mrs. Rachel Dewey Wildes passed from the trials and sufferings of earth to the happy mansions prepared for her above. She was a devoted Christian, a fond mother, a beloved sister and a warm friend.

She joined the First Presbyterian church early in life and remained true to her vows to the Master, dying in full faith, and with the happy anticipation of receiving that blessed reward and crown of righteousness prepared for the faithful.

She was a woman conspicuous for her rare virtues, lovable disposition, true, warm heartedness and sympathy for all classes, and was widely known and esteemed in our community, although for many years she had led a quiet and retired life.

She was identified in all church work, and especially did she devote time and means to this society and her wisdom, council, and benefactions will be missed by us. While we deeply mourn her loss as a member of the society, we feel that each of us has been deprived of a tender-hearted and loving friend, and we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father who doeth all things well.

MRS. P. C. ENNISS,
Com. of Ladies' Aid Society.

ASSEMBLY'S HOME MISSIONS AND BOXES.

Rev. Walter S. Scott one of our missionaries among the Mexicans in Texas, began work in San Marcos, April '92. He has organized five churches with an increase in actual active members of from fifty to three hundred. Four church buildings have been erected, the last one having been erected by the hands of Mr. Scott and the Mexicans, without any hired help. Property has been accumulated worth $3,800, of which only $300 was paid for by Assembly's Treasury. Mr. Scott says he has more work than he could attend to if he had ten Sabbaths in each month.

BOXES.

Several parties have kindly sent clothing to our teachers in the Indian Territory, which can be used to great advantage among poor children. An additional effort on this line can accomplish much good. Send to Rev. T. B. Lunsford, Cameron, Indian Territory. He can use them right away.

A box of clothing for a Mexican elder, lay worker, with wife, two daughters fifteen and thirteen, two sons eight and six—would be a boon. I will gladly present the address.

Don't forget the Christmas offering, a part of what will otherwise be spent on personal and home enjoyments, entertainments, presents, &c. If you be willing to do so send a contribution out of that to Assembly's Treasury to go as a Christmas present to most needy of the Home Missionaries in Florida and west of the Mississippi River.

MY THANK OFFERING.

BY MRS. AUGUSTA M. CHANCE.

The following lines, were suggested by a very touching incident, in connection with a recent Thank Offering to a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of this city. A single penny, very carefully wrapped in a piece of paper, was found in one of the envelopes, which had been prepared for the Thank Offering. It was probably all that the giver had, or could give to this object:

Only a penny! oh how can I bring,
Such a poor offering, to Jesus, my King.
Only a penny, yet dare I withhold,
My mite, because 'tis not silver, or gold?

Only a penny! but no one, will know,
Of this poor little penny, which I bestow
But the dear Jesus; and He will not chide,
But bless me, and love me, and call me His child.

Only a penny! dear Saviour, for Thee,
In return for Thy countless mercies to me?
Yet with it, I bring my being entire,
Consecrate me, Lord, with heavenly fire.

Only a penny! How I wish it were gold;
But I'm sure He'll bless it a hundred fold;
And one day I shall learn that good was done
Through it, and a crown of glory won!

Only a penny! but He'll not despise
The offering though poor, which before Him lies,
For 'tis all I have; but offered in love,
And I know He'll own, and approve it, above.

Only a penny! yet the Master knew,
That it came from a heart both warm and true,
Like the Widow's mite, which the dear Lord blessed.
As trembling, she laid it down with the rest.

Only a penny! yet hallowed by prayer,
And placed in the wrapper with sacred care,
Longing and wishing for power to give
A thousand times more, for souls to be saved.

Only a penny! yet gladly, 'twas given
To help some lost soul to God and to Heaven,
To shine in the splendor of glory above,
Ransomed, redeemed, through His infinite love.

PLANTS THAT EAT MEAT.

THE SUNDEW, AN INTERESTING INSECTIVORA.

Godey's Magazine for October has this to say about ptants that eat meat: "One of the most interesting of the insectivora is the sundew. The five or six small leaves lay close to the ground, and each of them bore a crown of dewdrops, which sparkled in the sunshine like rubies and diamonds. A slender scape sprang from the rosette of leaves, and from one side of it drooped some small white flowers.

"Sundew is the poetic name given it because of the gleams of the gem-like drops on the leaf surface, but, in spite of its beauty, it is a little savage of vegetable life. Most plants absorb nourishment from the soil and atmosphere, but the sundew will drink milk and eat beef and mutton and hard-boiled eggs, if they are fed to it. It does not keep a cook, however, so it catches its own dinner. Each leaf is covered with a number of tiny reddish tentacles, and at the end of each tentacle is a little gland, to which adheres a drop of sticky fluid.

"While watching the sundew we saw a gay little fly in a gauzy coat draw near. Hovering over the leaf, he lightly poised himself above it and prepared to sip the viscid drops. In a moment his feet were entangled and he was a prisoner.

"The second the feet of the insect press ever so lightly the glands—the motor impulse, as it is called—flies with unimaginable rapidity down through the tentacles, communicating with all upon the leaf, and they at once bend in the direction of the exciting object—the fly, in this case.

"As soon as the feet of the fly touched the tentacles, that wonderful change in them, which is called aggregation, began. The purplish protoplasm, which flows unceasingly in their cells, separated into tiny masses of purple matter floating in a clear liquid. The fly had alighted on the leaf a little to the left of the center, and the tentacles nearest him naturally bent first and deposited upon the next, and so on until he was gradually rolled to the center.

"Meanwhile every gland secreted a digestive fluid which is strongly acid, and is, so far as can be ascertained, identical with the digestive fluid of animals. This fluid poured over the fly, drowning him, the tentacles bent closer, and the leaf hollowed itself like a cup and closed; when, after several days, it should expand, all traces of the insect will have disappeared, digested and absorbed into the life of the plant.'

The longer I live the more I am satisfied of two things: First, that the truest lives are those that are cut rose-diamond fashion, with many facets answering to the many plain aspects of the world about them; secondly, that society is always trying in some way or other to grind us down to a single flat surface. It is hard work to resist this grinding down action.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

A Desperate Woman.

Experts in insanity tell us that when anyone goes insane, frequently their whole nature is reversed. They do and say exactly the opposite things to what they would do in their sane minds. A mother whose mind breaks down under extreme nervous tension may turn upon the one object in all the world most precious to her—her baby.

The terrible nervous tension under which many women live and suffer because of some weakness or disease of their sex, keeps them on the very verge of insanity. The constant drag and drain upon the complicated and delicate organism affects the whole nervous system and works upon the brain with an almost irresistible madness.

Thousands of suffering women have been literally saved from the insane asylum by the timely influence of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is the one perfect and positive specific for every derangement of woman's special organism. It is a scientific and permanent cure for those severe, chronic, complicated cases which doctors usually consider hopeless. It is the only medicine of its kind devised by an educated and skilled physician.

Mrs. Sarah E. Rains, of Dayton, Cass Co., Mo., in a letter to Dr. Pierce, writes: "It was in the winter of 1890 that my sufferings commenced. It was close to my time of confinement. I took the grip, and that with the labor pains all went to my head. I suffered dreadfully, and when I gave birth to my little boy I kept getting worse. I doctored but nothing did me any good. I had nervous spasms and was delirious—Oh, no tongue can express my sufferings. I was advised by a lady to try your medicine and I did. I got one bottle of the 'Favorite Prescription' and one of the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I had taken two-thirds of the medicine when it commenced its work. I began to feel better, and still continued getting better. In a short time I felt like another woman. I gained strength and flesh. I am now forty-one years of age. This is true, and it was your medicine that saved my life."

Dr. Pierce's 1000-page illustrated book, "The People's Medical Adviser" sent, paper-bound, free for the cost of mailing only, 21 one-cent stamps; or, cloth-bound 31 stamps Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

AUTUMN LEAVES.

BY MARY JASPER MUNSON.

Gay little autumn leaves, lovely and red,
Aren't you sorry the summer is dead,
Sorry the flowers have faded and gone,
Leaving you here by yourselves all alone!

Gay little autumn leaves why hurry by?
Are you glad that soon on the ground you will lie
Wrapped in your blanket of snow white and cold,
Huddled together like sheep in a fold?

Gay little autumn leaves, you are heartless and cold,
To be dancing so merrily, so gay and so bold,
When the flowers have faded and gone to their rest,
And even the birdies have left their soft nest.

Gay little autumn leaves golden and bright,
Do the angels paint your colors at night,
Or are you their palettes on which they mix paint,
To touch up the sunset with rays pure and faint?

Good-by, little autumn leaves, merry and gay,
Although I would keep you, you hasten away,
But always I'll look for your colors so bright,
When the sun sinks low in the fading light.

BIBLE HEROES.

CHAPTER 7.

Papa's Hero.

The children were all ready for the Guess Club the next Friday evening. They seemed to think that papa's evening would be an occasion of more importance than even grandma's or mama's and so begged to be allowed to go to the woods after school, to get autumn leaves to decorate grandma's room.

"Papa is an honorary, you know, mama, and we have to do something extra for him."

"Yes," mama said laughing, "and I wonder how you will treat the other honorary."

"You'll see! you'll see! maybe your turn will come next."

About four o'clock the children burst into the sitting-room where grandma and mama were at work.

"I think the maple trees have all come to town" exclaimed grandma holding up her hands, for every one of them had large boughs of brilliantly colored maple, and a gorgeous sight it was!

"Grandma, let us decorate the room by ourselves, before you go in, we will be very careful not to hurt anything or make a mess," said Hugh, who knew what an old maid grandma was about her room.

"Well," answered grandma, trying to look very doleful, yet with a merry twinkle in her eye, "I suppose I'll have to submit as you are six to one."

And so the children took possession of grandma's room.

They put up two large crimson branches behind her pretty brass bedstead and pinned clusters of leaves on the curtains and on the screen, and small branches behind the pictures. Then they borrowed the umbrella stand and filled that with a beautiful branch and set it in the corner, and when Mrs. Allan peeped in to see how they were getting on, she was surprized to see how much taste they had shown, and as she believed in praising people, she told them so.

"Now, let's call grandma, they said, so Artie was sent on the errand. Come, grandma, come kick! Its dus lovely. Its de pitties' place you ever did see."

Of course grandma was delighted and surprized because most of them were boys.

Then she turned them all out, locked the door and opened a drawer in that wonderful bureau of hers that had held so many good things for the children. She took out three large paper bags and emptied their contents on the bed, then she found some small bags and filled them with candy, and some more with nuts and tied them around the top with strings. Then she took apples and oranges and bananas and the candy and nuts and hid them under pillows and the bed, and behind the bureau and under the book case, and even in the bottom of the scrap basket.

At last she sat down and said: "Now!" in a very satisfied tone, and smiled at everything, for she knew how much fun she had hidden away for six happy children to find.

They were at the supper table when Will and Nellie came over, and in a little while the Guess Club met.

"You will have to call your honorary or he will forget to come, I'm afraid," said grandma.

"Oh, gamma pease sen' me dis time" begged Artie.

"Well, what will you say?"

"Artie don't know what to say" said Jack "he'll just go an say, papa tum on to de Dess Crub."

Artie's eyes flashed and he replied in an indignant tone:

"Yesh I do know." I say: "Mitter Honowawy, de Guess Crub glad to have you come wight now in a huwy. Now, gamma aint dat somefin' sides papa tum te de Dess Crub?"

Grandma thought it was very nice and told him so with a kiss, an he ran off.

When he was gone, grandma said: "Jack, I don't think that I would teaze my dear little brother that way if I had one. He tries so hard to be a big boy and to talk plainly."

Just then here came Artie looking very important and leading Mr. Allan who pretended to be badly scared. He sat down and began right away.

My hero never was in a war, nor was he a king, nor a rich man, and yet I think he was a true hero. His home was in a heathen town, and his father was not a Jew, and was probably a merchant, but he was blessed, like some other boys that I know, with a grandmother and mother who were Christians, and he inherited their faith, and though he was quite a boy when we first hear about him, he was so useful as a Christian that the greatest preacher and letter-writer that ever lived, loved him and wanted him to go on his missions with him.

From what we read in his mother's letters to him we think he was naturally very timid, but that is often the kind of boy that God's grace converts into a grand hero.

We know that he lived to teach and preach Christ in a large and wicked city, and that it was while he was there that his mother wrote him two splendid letters that have much good advice in them, and we know too, that when his beloved mother was in prison in another great city, he took a long and dangerous journey to go to her that he might cheer her, and last of all we think that God gave him courage to die as a martyr for the faith he professed.

Mama's hand was up. I think one of the best things that is told us about your hero was what his mother wrote him "that from a child thou hast known the holy Scriptures."

Grandma's hand, and Hugh's too, were up now, and so Mr. Allan called out:

"His name then! his name!"

"Timothy!" they all said at once.

"Yes, it was Timothy and I hope you agree with me that he was a hero?"

Everybody said yes, and then Hugh reminded his father that he had never told the name of Grandma's hero and they wanted to know it.

"Well! well! why Jabez—and all we know about him is found in 1 Chronicles 4:9, 10."

Artie was beginning to look sleepy, and Grandma said:

"Now, lets all see if we can find anything besides autumn leaves in this room. As she said it, she gave a little kick against the bureau with her foot, and out rolled an orange right against Artie's foot! Then every one took Grandma's hint, and such a search party as they were! and such a racket as they made! It was a good excuse for Mr. Allan to run away, and get back to his beloved paper, but the children frolicked on until bed time.

attack of Dr. Burke was not seconded and the matter was soon dropped by the conference, but it left a bad taste in the mouths of those who heard it, and is calculated to do harm on the outside, without accomplishing any good anywhere. The wisest ministers recognize that the C. E. and other young people's Christian organizations are with them to stay, and seek their co-operation for upbuilding their churches, with good results. There are, of course, many ministers who look askance at the mighty growth of these young people's societies, and who are in more or less doubt about giving them their unqualified approval, but the number is constantly growing fewer, while the membership in the aforesaid societies is constantly on the increase. The faculty of being able to make use of the means at hand and to adapt one's self to existing circumstances is no less valuable in the pulpit than elsewhere.

The committee of ministers and laymen, which held its meetings in Washington, completed the work of preparing the International Sunday School Lessons to be studied for six years from January 1st, 1900, a few days ago, but the result will have to be approved by the representatives of European churches before it is officially announced. There will be another meeting of this committee held in Chicago, March 31st, 1898, when it is expected that the full program will be announced. It is known, however, that the committee decided that the lessons should be largely biographical, and that three and one-half years should be devoted to the characters of the New Testament and two and one-half years to those in the old. The course will open with a study of the life of Christ, which will continue for eighteen months. The Old Testament series will open with the story of the creation. After much consideration the committee decided it inadvisable to adopt the suggestion made that lessons on different lines be prepared for the infant classes. Following is the full membership of the committee: Bishop Warren, of Colo., chairman; Dr. Warren Randolph, R. I.; Rev. B. F. Jacobs, Chicago; Rev. A. F. Schauffler, N. Y.; Rev. A. E. Dunning, Boston; Rev. J. S. Stahr, Pa.; Rev. J.P. Pepper, Tenn.; Rev. E. B. Kephart, Md.; Prof. J. S. Sumpey, Ky.; Rev. M. Rhodes, Mass.; Dr. John Potts, Toronto; Rev. B. B. Tyler, Conn., Prof. J. I. D. Hinds, N. J.; Prof. W. W. Moore, Va.; and Prof. E. I. Rexford, Montreal.

The Columbia Association of Baptist churches held its twentieth annual meeting this week, and the association, which includes all the white Baptist churches in the District of Columbia, was demonstrated by reports submitted to be in a flourishing condition. Steps were taken to push the home missionary work of the churches during the coming year, to a greater extent than has been done in the past. It may not be very easy to do that, as the Baptists of Washington are famous for pushing things all the time, but if they try they will probably succeed.

A meeting was this week held under the auspices of the Presbytery of Washington City, in the Church of the Covenant, to commemorate the 250th anniversary of the adoption of the West minster Standards. Dr. Wallace Radcliffe was the orator of the occasion, his address being a scholarly review of "The Westminster Assembly—Its Men and its Work."

The thirty-first annual meeting of the Washington Conference of Congregational churches, which embraces fourteen churches in Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia, all reported to be in fairly good condition, was held this week. At an evening session Dr. Whitman, president of the Columbian University, delivered an address on "The Kingdom—An Ideal and an Obligation," and Rev. E. L. Hunt, of the N. Y. Avenue Presbyterian church, conducted a "quiet hour" service. This participation of ministers of other denominations was somewhat unusual.

Every Teacher . . .

In the Sabbath-school should be well equipped for the work of teaching, and they would be greatly helped in the preparation of the weekly Lessons by studying the pages of a monthly journal, issued under the order of the General Assembly. It is full of helpful and useful hints, drawn from many sources. It is carefully edited by Rev. Jas. K. Hazen, D. D., Secretary of the Presbyterian Committee of Publication, so that no error will be found in its columns. Its Expositions are able, illustrations happy, and its teaching hints exceedingly valuable. There are from 32 to 40 pages every month, and will be sent for a year for 60 cents, or in clubs of five or more at 50 cents each.

A specimen copy will be cheerfully sent. Address—

SAY SOMS.

Edith—He told me I was so interesting and so beautiful.

Julia—And you will trust yourself for life with a man who begins by deceiving you even at the commencement of his courtship.

A lighthouse has been built in Japan of bamboo, which is said to have greater power of resisting waves than any other kind of wood, and does not rot in water.

Then He Was Sorry.—Mrs. Burdock: "That man Cale is absolutely worthless. His wife told me they did not have a stick of wood on the place."

Burdock: "And we have two cords. That is the difference between him and me."

Mrs. Burdock: "Well, you had better go out and split the difference"—Black and White.

THINGS USEFUL.

The Thanksgiving Pie.—Select a small sugar pumpkin of a deep yellow, cut into inch slices, pare off the rind and then cut into two-inch lengths. Put it in a stew pan with a steamer underneath; add a little water (boiling), barely enough to cover the steamer, and let it cook quickly at first until there is considerable steam, then slowly until the pumpkin is soft. If you like only a delicate flavor of the pumpkin, take it up as soon as it is soft enough to mash, but if you prefer the rich, strong flavor of the pumpkin of grandmother's day, let the kettle stand where the pumpkin cannot burn and steam or cook from four to six hours, until the water has all evaporated. Then turn into fine colander and press the pulp trough. Stir into the pumpkin while hot a tablespoonful of butter or three of thick sweet cream. For each pie of the usual deep size, an inch or more, allow one cup and a half of the sifted pumpkin and one cup of scalded milk. Beat the yolk of one egg, add a half cup of sugar, a saltspoonful each of salt and cinnamon, and stir into the pumpkin. Then beat the white stiff and mix it in lightly. This will help to make the pumpkin brown better on the top. Turn it into a plate lined with plain paste, with a fluted rim, and if this mixture should not quite fill the plate add carefully a little more milk. Bake slowly. Some people prefer to sweeten pumpkin with molasses.

THE VOICE OF MY LORD.

LUOLA.

Fear Not. Luke xii. 22.

Lord! I am like a little child
Who in the dark has lost its way,
Afraid to turn—afraid to move,
Lest I should farther from Thee stray.

And I can only cry for help
With trembling hope that Thou will hear,
Remembering I am only "dust"
Will make me feel that Thou art near.

"Fear not," 'tis Thy command my Lord,
And oh! how gladly I'd obey;
And have no fear of tidings ill,
No dark foreboding night or day!

That filial fear give Thou to me,
That "casteth out all other fear"
That I with perfect love and trust
"With holy boldness may draw near."

This "the beginning," Lord I know,
Let this my inmost soul pervade,
And I in every storm will hear;
'Tis I, My child—be not afraid."

REV. NEILL McKAY, D. D.

In presenting a sketch of the late Rev. Neill McKay, D. D., the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN is pleasantly reminded of the fact that its own history is closely associated with his honored name. About forty years ago, a few gentlemen in Fayetteville Presbytery, realizing the urgent need of a religious journal published primarily in the interests and adapted specially to the wants of Presbyterianism in North Carolina, began a discussion which brought the matter prominently before the minds of their brethren. The idea, having received the formal endorsement of Synod, soon assumed a definite aspect. Then it was that Dr. McKay, one of its most zealous advocates, together with one or two others, furnished or procured the means for starting the paper. And on the 1st of Jan. 1858, the first number of the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN was issued, under the able editorship of the Rev. Geo. McNeill and Mr. Bartholomew Fuller. From that time he continued an earnest and life-long friend of the paper, often enriching its columns with the product of his vigorous pen. This reminiscence well illustrates the generosity and public spirit of the man.

Dr. McKay was proud of his descent, on both sides of his house, from a race of stalwart, God-fearing, liberty-loving Highlanders, whose robust type of character was the joint product of the kirk and the school, the Catechism and the rod.

He was born Feb. 11th, 1816, at "Flint Hill" place on the upper Cape Fear, in Cumberland (now Harnett) county, N. C. He was one of eight children, all of whom, save one, lived to advanced age. His brothers were Archibald McKay, of Prairie county, Ark., Malcom McKay, of Harnett, county, N. C., Murphy McKay, of Madison county, Tenn., and Dr. John W. McKay, of Cheraw, S. C. Of these three were ruling elders, as were their ancestors for at least three or four generations. His sisters were Isabella (Mrs. Col. A. Murchison, of Cumberland county), Catherine (Mrs. Capt. Elias Bryan, of Haywood, N. C.), and Mary (Mrs. Col. K. Murchison, of Harnett county.) His parents were Neill and Flora (McNeill) McKay. He was yet but a lad when his father, a man of sterling character and an officer in the church for forty years, an elder first of Barbecue church, afterwards of Tirzah (Summerville) church, organized about 1815, died at the age of sixty-four, and was buried at Summerville, N. C. His paternal grandfather was Archibald McKay, one of the three original elders of "McKay's Church," (now Longstreet church), where he is buried. His paternal great-grandfather was Alexander McKay, who, it is supposed, came with his clansmen from Scotland early in the eighteen century, and settled about fourteen miles west of Fayetteville and became one of the founders of Longstreet church; which as a place of worship was originally designated by his family name. The writer has seen a record which alludes to him as "the bold, brilliant, beloved chief," and stating that "he died on the Island Eumna (Bahamas) April 23rd, 1793." Dr. McKay's mother, Flora, lived to be 82, and was buried at Summerville, N. C. Many now living remember her as a woman of deep piety, strong common sense, great generosity, coupled with very uncommon energy and executive ability—a generous supporter of the Church and one who "looked well to the ways of her house." His maternal grand parents were Malcom and Janet (McAlister) McNeill. His grandmother, Janet, was a daughter of Col. Alex. McAlister, a man of great worth and influence, (a native of Scotland and a brother-in-law of Farquard Campbell.*) His grandfather, Malcom, was the son of Archibald and Janet (Smith) McNeil. This Janet, (daughter of John Smith), was "the celebrated 'Jenny Bhan' or 'Van' (Garlic term referring to complexion) 'the fair,' who, for beauty, sprightliness and wit, was regarded as second to none in the Scotch settlements; and for† energy of character second only to Flora McDonald herself." (See centennial sermon and historical address delivered at the Bluff church and published by order of Presbytery in 1858.)

Her descendants in the Cape Fear region are numerous, none of whom perhaps reproduced her characteristics more fully than her granddaughter, Flora McNeill, the worthy mother of Dr. McKay. "Jenny Bahn's" husband, Archibald McNeill (Dr. McKay's great-grandfather) was a son of Lauchlin and Margaret (Johnson) McNeill, of Scotland. These last named never came to America. Dr. McKay's grandmother, Janet McAlister, spoken of above, the daughter of Alexander and Flora (McNeill) McAlister, was a granddaughter of Neill McNeill ("Black" Neill as he was called,) and Grisilla Campbell (an Aunt of Farquard Campbell, whose daughter Flora married Col. Alex. McAlister.) This "Black" Neill McNeill, was the great-great-grandfather of Dr. McKay. He came to America from Argyleshire, Scotland somewhere about 1742 or '43, possibly earlier. And "during the rebellion of 1745, he traversed the wilds of New York, Pennsylvania and North Carolina." In 1747, he visited Wilmington and ascended the river, exploring its banks and affluents as far as Buck Horn Falls, almost within sound of the spot where Dr. McKay was born. Pleased with the pure water, healthful climate and fertile soil of the country, as promising a happy asylum for his persecuted countrymen, he returned to Scotland in 1748. The following spring, he landed in Wilmington, attended by his family and a colony of Highlanders, variously estimated at from three to six hundred, "who settled, some in Anson, others in Bladen, but most of them in Cumberland." (See Caruther's Life of Caldwell.) The tradition is that this hardy pioneer was swarthy and angular, "tall and muscular, bold and daring, well qualified in all respects for the position he assumed. He entered for himself and his colonists lands in Brunswick, Bladen, Cumberland and Harnett, and after serving his generation faithfully and well he was called to rest." (See Banks Centennial Address.) "The Bluff"—McNeill's "Bluff"—the site of one of the oldest Presbyterian churches in North Carolina, was so called in honor of this intrepid leader of the Highland Scotch from Argyleshire to North Carolina. From this, one of his maternal great-great-grandfathers, the Rev. Neill McKay derived a name and traits of which he might justly have been proud. The law of heredity is full of beneficence. It is a fact, of some interest in this connection, that the names of at least three of Dr. McKay's lineal ancestors were affixed to

TWO TEACHERS.

Speaking of Keswick last week we entered our protest against holding the conference responsible for the separate teachings of individuals and using names and writings to illustrate the teaching at Keswick when the writers were not part of the conference.

There is a well known name which we delight to honor, and the bearer of this name has been a teacher at Keswick and holds the views taught there most generally; but in discussing the Keswick teaching it is unfair to use this name and the blessed books of the bearer of that name. We refer to Rev. Andrew Murray, of South Africa. He has written many books. Out of these many, we prefer "Abide In Christ," "With Christ In The School of Prayer" and "Like Christ," to be read and meditated upon in "the quiet hour" or "the morning watch" or "the time fenced in." After three month's daily readings in these books, it will be well to take his simple book written for young Christians called "The New Life." Or this last may be read first in daily readings if each reference is carefully looked up, verified and studied. This will be a good years work to read and reread these books, and they will be of great blessing. But they must not be taken to represent Keswick and it is unfair to judge Keswick by the writings of this mighty man of God which God has given him in that work in South Africa. We know not how to characterizes this life as the more remarkable in its practical power or its spiritual strength. For us Presbyterians to study the teaching at Keswick and to take warning against any dangerous tendencies of these teachings, or to find out what their message is to stir us to greater zeal or to humble us to deeper lamentings for failure and to point us to the source of strength and the conditions of success two writers should not be overlooked. We may study others with due caution not to hold the conference responsible for the opinions or writings of any individual. Indeed the conference and its best teaching were against any attempt to give names or to formulate statements. The danger is of getting it and missing Him. It is the fullness of Christ and His all-sufficiences they seek, not isms or its.

"The Life of Privilege," by Rev. H. W. Webb-Peploe is a volume of addresses delivered by the author at Northfield, Mass., in 1895. They do not pretend to represent Keswick or to import Keswick teachings into the marts of our Christian commerce. They are all the better suited to represent to us the teachings at Keswick as they may be presented to an American audience of Christians seeking to live "the life of privilege." In this book we Presbyterians will find learning, critical scholarship and social station laid at Jesus' feet and consecrated to His service. We commend this statement to the critics of Keswick amongst us.

No one need expect to find faultless teachings at Keswick. Do any who cannot accept these teachings or take fright so seriously at the tendencies that they refuse the truth taught, do any critics of Keswick amongst us claim to be faultless? It is high time to seek out and accept the truth taught at Keswick for the conference there is bearing fruits in all lands, and amongst us, and to avoid its errors.

In doing this fortunately for us Presbyterians, a true blue Scotch Presbyterian preacher is at hand with his works to be examined and his words to be tried. He is a young man. He is descended from a clan of fighters in former days. But he is for peace, a man of peace, a follower of the Prince of Peace. He is pastor of a Presbyterian church in London whose ministry God has greatly blessed. To test the soundness of his teachings and the safety of those who accept them, there is no need to call attention to his addresses delivered at Northfield this summer and published in number 4 of the "Northfield Echoes" for this year. It is better to take his two books which should be studied together. "So Great Salvation" a small volume of sermons published by T. and T. Clark, Edinburgh, Scotland, and a larger work. "A Holy Life," published by F. H. Revell Co., New York. Rev. Geo. H. C. Macgregor is the author, raised on por ridge and trained in the Shorter Catechism.

In studying Keswick we Presbyterians should give his writings due consideration. He is a leading, impressive and influential speaker in the annual Christian Conference at Keswick, England.

WHAT A PITIABLE state is that of the side-tracked Christian. He entered upon the race perhaps with high enthusiasm, and no work for Christ seemed too arduous, no sacrifice of time or convenience or even means seemed too great in manifestation of his love for Him to whom he owes the pardon of his sins and the assurance of eternal life. But now his zeal has grown cold; his duties have been neglected; he has withdrawn from that sweet communion that was once his daily delight. The Scriptures no longer are sweet as honey to his taste; prayer has become a grievous burden; assembling with the saints for united worship has been neglected. He has become shunted off and the clouds and darkness of doubt and perplexity envelope his soul. Pitiable! truly so. The charms that the world seems to hold out so lavishly to its devotees he full well knows are only hollow deceptions; he has tried them and they have failed him, they cannot replace what he has lost and yet he cannot muster the spiritual energy which would throw him at his Saviour's feet to receive the pardon which awaits every returning prodigal. O how many of just such Christians the churches contain; who have left the path of duty and of spiritual privilege to seek the husks of worldliness; who having a name to live are dead. What need there is of the reviving power of the Holy Spirit to breathe upon the dry bones that they again may come into vigorous life. And what a power for good the Church of Christ would in the world if only these side-tracked Christians again were brought into service, these cold and dormant forms again were made to strive as those who seek the eternal prize.

ON THE AFTERNOON of last Sabbath services in memory of Mr. David G. Worth were held in the auditorium of the Young Men's Christian Association of this city. Most appropriately the benefactions of Mr. Worth to the Association—so many and so large and yet so quietly dispensed that few even of the members had ever known of them—were referred to; his helpfulness by advice and counsel also received due testimonial in the addresses delivered. Many letters which had been received were read. Letters from those who were with him as Christian friends in the days of the shadow and had profited by his patience in suffering, letters from those who in their Christian life had been benefitted by the helpfulness of his advice and counsel, and letters from some who had received impressions for good simply from his conduct and bearing in casual business relations.

A suggestion in the Messenger that the commercial guilds of this city take measures to perpetuate the influence of Mr. David Worth and Mr. George Chadbourn among the young men of our city seems to us worthy of consideration. In this connection the remarks of Rev. W. B. Oliver of the First Baptist church of this city at the Y. M. C. A., last Sabbath, seem specially pertinent. If we had space to spare we would gladly reproduce them. Would that every young man looking to a commercial life could read and treasure them. Among much, equally well timed and excellent, Mr. Oliver says:

"There is in the minds of our young men as they begin to look out over the field, and plans for active participation in the strifes of the business world are being formed, a trend toward the unwise and hurtful conclusion that to succeed in meeting competition, to make one's self secure financially, certainly to hope for the amassing of anything like a fortune—one must learn tricks in trade, take advantage of nigh cuts, smother conscience, and know no rights of other men.

* * * * *

What an excellent thing it is for our community that we can point to the life of this worthy man and to those who have been associated with him in business as an example of unusual success attained by honest methods. Honesty means more than simply meeting financial obligations—it embraces right dealing towards our fellow man in all directions, and it is in this sense that I would characterize the life just closed as honest.

* * * * *

"I do not feel that our duty regarding such a life is ended when we have covered the new turned sod with flowers which so soon droop and shatter and are forgotten. I feel that we can and should draw its rich lessons for the world and in our own lives reproduce them."

IT IS USUAL to say that the fault lies always with him who first begins a quarrel. The first word stings and the second follows in scorching retort. The first word truly is the aggression, but is the second faultless? There can be no quarrel where there is no unkind retort. Where grace is given to employ the soft answer wrath is turned away. The first word is answerable for the beginning of dispute, but the second word is responsible for its continuance. Surely a note, it were well to make just there.

Admirable is the old Quaker's recipe for controlling one's own temper, and for subduing the temper of another. It is merely: "Talk low and talk slow." One never gets excited himself who can so far control his own speech as to speak in deliberation and in quiet tones; and nothing so subdues excitement in another as the sense of being opposed by one who is perfectly self-controlled.

A TELEGRAM from Rev. Dr. A. L. Phillips, Tuskaloosa, Ala., Nov. 29th is as follows: "Colored Convention unanimously decided for separate self-governing Church. Organization will be completed next May."

The Standing Committee on Colored Evangelization in regard to this matter reported to the General Assembly the following recommendations:

1. "Should the independent Presbyteries call a meeting for the organization of a colored Presbyterian Church, that our Executive Committee be directed to confer with them in fixing the time and place for such meeting, and the Assembly does hereby authorize, any of its Presbyteries, or ministers and churches on the consent of their Presbyteries, to withdraw on their own motion from its jurisdiction to join said Church.

2. "A committee of five be appointed to represent this Assembly in the event of such a convocation being held, and to convey to these brethren our fraternal salutations, and the assurance that it is our determination to continue our financial help, and give them a hearty co-operation in every good work."

The action taken by the Colored Convention is wise, if they are prepared to take hold heartily and to measure up fully to the new responsibilities which will devolve upon them. They will henceforth have fuller opportunity for the expenditure of energy and for the exercise of the wisdom and prudence which it is to be hoped they will show they possess.

Our Church should regard as most sacred the obligation entered into to continue our financial help and to give them a hearty co-operation in every good work.

The conference above referred to was held in Birmingham last week. The Picayune says it was composed of leading colored Presbyterian ministers from various parts of the United States in conjunction with the colored evangelization committee of the Southern General Assembly (white) and representatives of the Northern General Assembly.

The conference was called to order by Dr. G. T. Goetchius, of Rome, Ga., moderator of the Southern General Assembly. He read the action of that Assembly on the subject, which was favorable to the organization. A like view was taken in the reports of the action of the Independent colored Presbyterians, which were also read. Rev. L. J. Washington, of Tuscaloosa, Ala., was then elected moderator, and Rev. E. W. Benjamin, of Vicksburg, Miss., clerk.

THOSE OF OUR readers who have received the PRESBYTERIAN into their homes from its very earliest days will welcome the poetry on our first page from "Luola." In those days the contributions of this gifted lady were one of the most attractive features of the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN. And this recalls how very few who read these words can go back with us to the days when Mrs. Willis L. Miller and Mrs. Cornelia Spencer were the most eagerly welcomed contributors to the paper; their articles, the one in choicest poetry, the other in most graceful prose, were the very life of the paper. God has still spared them in the full strength of their intellectual powers, and our columns yet bear occasional evidence that their hearts are yet with the paper of their early love.

A Psalm of David, [a] when he was in the wilderness of Judah.

O GOD, thou art my God; early will I seek thee: [1] my soul thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee in a dry and [2] thirsty land, [3] where no water is;
2 To see [4] thy power and thy glory, so as I have seen thee in the sanctuary.
3 Because thy lovingkindness is better than life, my lips shall praise thee.
4 Thus will I bless thee while I live: I will lift up my hands in thy name.
5 My soul shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatness; and my mouth praiseth thee with joyful lips:
6 When I remember thee upon my bed, and meditate on thee in the [5] watches.
7 Because thou hast been my help, therefore in the shadow of thy wings will I rejoice.
8 My soul followeth hard after thee: thy right hand upholdeth me.
9 But those that seek my soul, to destroy it, shall go into the lower parts of the earth.
10 They shall fall by the power of the sword: they shall be a portion for foxes.

the first formal call for the pastoral services of a Presbyterian minister in North Carolina. This called issued from the churches of Long-street, Barbecue and the Bluff. It was dated Oct. 18th, 1758, was extended to Rev. James Campbell (late of Pennsylvania, but a native of Campbelltown Scotland), was given under bond, covenant, seal, &c., pledging an annual salary of 100 pounds sterling, was underwritten by twelve subscribing and two attesting names, and was duly recorded in the Register's office of Cumberland county. This call and the method of its preservation will be regarded by the future historian of the Synod as a thing of greater significance than a mere ecclesiastical curio. Succeeding generations may well revive the memory and honor the names of these original founders and liberal supporters of the Presbyterian Church in North Carolina.

Dr. McKay was prepared for college at the Donaldson Academy in Fayetteville, under that veteran educator, Rev. Simeon Colton, D. D., whose ashes rest in the cemetery at Summerville. Upon leaving Dr. Colton he entered the Sophomore Class at Princeton New Jersey in 1835. After spending two years in Princeton he went to Union College New York, then under the presidency of the famous Dr. Nott. Here he was graduated in 1838. Just when he first realized his vocation to the gospel ministry is not known. There is a family tradition that in boyhood he was accustomed to "play preacher" among his juvenile companions, and would lead them after "sermon" to a stream and "baptize" them after the Baptist fashion. It is not improbable that his inclination to the ministry dated from childhood. When quite a child he once came near drowning. Crossing the Cape Fear with others, he was washed from his horse and borne down the stream by the swift current, until his little body was caught by projecting boulders, from which he was rescued in an unconscious condition and with difficulty resuscitated. This remarkable preservation impressed his pious mother that he was spared for some special work. And it is easy to suppose that in a spirit of gratitude she solemnly dedicated him to the service of God in the ministry of His Son.

Repairing to the Theological Seminary at Columbia, S. C., he completed the course there in 1841, with the class which gave to the Church such men as Rev. Geo. C. Gregg, Rev. Jas. B. Dunwody, Rev. Samuel H. Hay, and Dr. B. M. Palmer. On Nov. 13th, 1841, he was ordained by Fayetteville Presbytery, with which his whole ministerial life of fifty-two years was associated. His principal pastoral work was in connection with the churches of Tirzah (now Summerville), Sardis and Buffalo. His connection with the last named, one of the largest country churches in the Southern Assembly, lasted about thirty years. His sphere of ministerial labor however was much wider, covering at various times, as stated supply or otherwise, large sections of Chatham, Moore, Harnett and Cumberland counties. Much of his time was gladly given to gratuitous work in destitute places and feeble churches. At times, he and his devoted friend, Rev. Evander McNair, D. D., (of precious memory), seemed to act as self-constituted evangelists of the Presbytery, planning together long and tedious trips embracing a succession of appointments and meetings. He would sometimes playfully intimate that there was at least one point of sympathy between himself and the methodist circuit-rider--like them he was very fond of a good horse. And his good horses were made to do good service in the Home Mission field. The churches of Haywood, Salem and Flat Branch owe their existence more perhaps to his influence, work and liberality than to that of any one else.

A large slave-holder himself, he felt a profound interest in the moral and religious condition of that people, and he not only embraced every opportunity of preaching to them, but gave liberally of his means to provide chapels and houses of worship with especial reference to their accommodation.

He was an excellent Presbyter. His strong common sense and unfailing urbanity, coupled with a lively interest in church enterprise, an accurate knowledge of church law and dialectic ability of a high order rendered him a sagacious and influential counsellor in the courts of the Church.

His preaching was eminently sound and edifying rather than imaginative and emotional. The writer retains from childhood a vivid impression of his appearance and emanner in the pulpit—so serious, so devout, so earnest, so humble! His sermons, as a rule, were written with care and in full, and were effectively delivered, usually from the manuscript. But at times he would employ the extemporaneous method with ease and with magnetic power. The great doctrines of grace formed the staple of his pulpit work, and his presentations of them were thorough, sound, lucid and urgent. His voice was full, resonant, and sympathetic, his presence was commanding and his manner, especially in prayer, was marked by a profound nd tender solemnity. One who had been his co-Presbyter for forty years (the late Rev. D. D. McBride) laid upon his bier the following generous tribute: "Dr. McKay was a staunch Calvinist, a theologian of the old school type. His powerful mind enabled him to grasp and to digest the profound mysteries of this system of revealed truth. The doctrines of grace sustained his own faith and he preached them to his dying fellowmen, not shunning to declare the whole counsel of God. He was a profound thinker, a clear and logical reasoner; and the truth, once apprehended, was to him a reality, on which his faith, as upon an immovable foundation, rested. This was the distinguishing characteristic of Brother McKay, mentally, morally and religiously. Truth was not to him a variable or unknown quantity. He was a man of polite and polished manners, of culture and refinement, blending in his character, as very few do, the two extremes, the fortiter in re with the suaviter in modo. He was a genial companion, gifted in conversational powers, a true friend, and an intelligent and public-spirited man."

In nothing did his public spirit evince itself more signally than his earnest and active interest in educational work. The number of young persons whom he directly or indirectly aided in acquiring an education is large. The Cumberland Academy, a high school located at his home in Summerville, and which, under the direction of such teachers as Rev. Dr. Colton, Rev. John Calvin McNair—who died in Edinburgh and was buried near Dr. Chalmers and Hugh Miller—Rev. Dr. Jas. Johnson and Prof. C. M. Andrews, attracted a large patronage, extending beyond the State, was organized and sustained very largely through his personal effort. At one time his name was prominently mentioned in connection with the presidency of the University of North Carolina, a proposition however which he positively declined to entertain. This institution he served, as one of its wisest and most influential trustees, for more than a quarter of a century. The same institution conferred upon him the degree of D. D., about the year 1870.

In social life Dr. McKay was highly magnetic. Blessed with excellent health, warm-hearted, sunny and vivacious in disposition, he was an exceedingly genial companion, and in his once happy home piety, intelligence and hospitality reigned with the force of natural law.

Thus nobly was the promise of youth realized in the development of the strong, useful, godly, well-rounded man. In the chronicles of the Whig Society at Princeton is to be found this picture of Neill McKay as a college student—"He was unmistakably Scotch Irish in every fibre of his body; genial, bright, companionable, attractive, muscular, of clear and strong opinions, held tenaciously, which he was always ready to argue for, or even to fight for if necessary, a grand player, and industrious and faithful student." Over against this picture of the boy, we place another of the man—sketched a half century later and found in the Presbyterian Cyclopedia—"Dr. McKay lives in the region of his birth, an intense North Carolinian, a conspicuous and respected figure in the history of his State, a sturdy champion of all her interests, but recognizing the fact that the field of Christian work is the world, his heart, his worldly means and the high resources of his mind are consecrated to the Gospel agency without respect to race or country." His centennary sermon, delivered before his Presbytery in 1858 and published by its order, is replete with interest and makes a distinct contribution to the history of the State and the Church which he loved and served with unselfish devotion.

Dr. McKay was thrice married. He first married Miss Sarah Adaline James a daughter of the Rev. Robert W. James, of Salem, Sumter county, S. C. From this marriage his two surviving children are Cornelia Adaline (Mrs. Maj. McLaughlin, of Cheraw, S. C.,) and Mary Louise (Mrs. Salmon of Lillington, N. C.) He next married Miss Annie B. Shepard Pettigrew, a daughter of Hon. Ebenezer Pettigrew, of Tyrrell county, N. C. His third marriage was to Miss Margaret Murchison, a daughter of Duncan Murchison, of Manchester, N. C., who with one daughter, Fannie Reid, survives him.

For seventy-five years his splendid coustitution grandly met the demands of a nature intensely active and energetic, and robust health supplied the nerve and strength for effective work. Then symptoms of approaching feebleness, readily recognized by him, gave warning that his work was almost done. He presently penned his touching farewell letter to his beloved Presbytery and set his house in order. For about two years he was led steadily, but gently down to the valley, consciously leaning on the strong arm of the Beloved. During this season of patient suffering his mind felt the chill of no eclipse, his soul the torture of no doubt. The same "rod and staff," on which he learned to lean in the days of his youth, still comforted him amid the feebleness of age. His faith remained clear, calm, strong, satisfying. His strong mind grasped no truth more firmly and tenaciously than the assurance of God's covenant mercy through faith in the merits of our atoning Saviour. To a brother, visiting him in his last illness, he expressed this confidence in the exclamation: "O the precious covenant! the precious covenant!" He had "fought a good fight, he had finished his course, he had kept the faith." What for him was death but the Master's summons to come up higher and receive the crown laid up? On the 28th of February, 1893, in the 77th year of his age, this veteran soldier of the cross fell asleep in Jesus to wake in heaven.

In sight of the beautiful and happy home in the village of Summerville, where he had passed so many bright and useful years, stands the neat church edifice in which he had so often led the devotions of God's people. Hard by this building is an old cemetery, in which is garnered the dust of many of his kindred and life associates—a beautiful spot—the crest of a lofty "divide"—an elevation which overlooks the valley of a river on each side. Here he sleeps. Fit resting place for the mortal part of a man of broad sympathies, noble impulses, elevated character and conspicuous usefulness!

*During the Revolution Gov. Martin complained to the British government that Farquard Campbell gave him great trouble by giving information of his plans to the Whigs thereby causing their miscarriage, and he could not tell how the information was obtained. But Campbell had two sons-in-law who were British officers (Captain Malcom McKay, an uncle of Dr. Neill McKay, and another named Farthingham.) Their wives sympathized with the American cause. It is well Gov. Martin did not possess this key to his perplexity.

†Jenny Bahn's energy was noted. The tradition is that she entered or located most of the immense tracts of the McNeill lands, and had several large ranches for stock, to which she gave much personal attention.

THE HELPFUL WIFE.

"Oftentimes," says our Autocrat, "I have seen a tall ship glide by against the tide as if drawn by an invisible tow line with a hundred strong arms pulling it. Her sails unfurled, her streamers drooping, she had neither side wheel nor stern wheel; still she moved on stately in serene triumph, as with her own life. But I knew that on the other side of the ship, hidden beneath the great bulk that swam so majestically, there was a little toilsome steam tug, with a heart of fire and arms of iron, that was tugging it bravely on; and I knew that if the little steam tug untwined her arms and left the ship it would wallow and roll away and drift hither and thither and go off with the effluent tide, no man knows where. And so I have known more than one genius, high-decked, full-freighted, wide-sailed, gay-pennoned, who, but for the bare, toiling arm and brave, warm-beating heart of the faithful little wife that nestled close to him, so that no wind nor wave could part them, would have gone down with the stream and been heard of no more."

Giving money to the Lord is just as much an act of sacred service as offering a prayer, or singing a hymn or sacred praise, or teaching in a mission school, or coming to a sacramental table. In the Bible the consecration of our substance is not made a mere incidental, it is put in the forefront of our religious duties. —Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

The municipality of Florence placed in 1861, the year of her death, in the house where Mrs. Browning lived and wrote and died the inscription in Italian which fully translated reads: Elizabeth Barrett Browning. Her woman's heart combined the learning of a savant with the soul of a poet, and her verse wove a golden chain to couple England and Italy.

Her remains lie in the still lovely Protestant cemetery, once backed by the old city walls, now encircled by splendid drives."

Dr. Robert Wallace, M. P., has almost completed his book on George Buchanan, the Scottish historian and statesman, for the Famous Scots Series. Professor A. F. Murison has been entrusted with the preparation of the volume on Sir William Wallace.

Jacob A. Riis will contribute an article to the December Century entitled "Merry Christmas in the Tenements," with a great number of illustrations by Jay Hambidge depicting life on the East Side of New York.

The prizes $600 and $400 offered by the American Sunday School Union for the best written stories on Forming and Maintaining Character on the Principles of the Bible have been awarded to Samuel Zane Batten of Morristown, N. J., and Julia McNair Wright of Fulton, Missouri.

The biographer of Tennyson, his son, says that, sitting with his father a week before his death, the poet talked long of the personality and of the love of God. "I should," he said, "infinitely rather feel myself the most miserable wretch on the face of the earth with a God above than the highest type of man standing alone." "Who knows," was another of his sayings, "whether revelation be not itself a veil to hide the glory of that Love which we could not look upon without marring the sight and our onward progress?"

Select Notes. A commentary on the Sunday School Lessons for 1898. By F. N. and M. A. Peloubet. Illustrated. Cloth, $1.25. W. A. Wilde & Co., Boston and Chicago.

The remarkable and yearly increasing sale of "Peloubet's Select Notes," wherever Sunday-schools are found, proves conclusively its great value to every student of the Word.

The issue for 1898, just received, bears upon every page marks of the careful, painstaking work of its compilers and publishers, and it will undoubtedly prove to be the most valuable volume of the series, now twenty-four years old.

The Sunday School Lessons for 1898 need, more than usual, earnest work on the part of the teacher, and we heartily urge every teacher who desires to be completely fitted for the position to purchase a copy of "Select Notes" for daily use.

These "notes" hold in connection and logical order the results of careful study of many commentaries together with a vast amount of information useful in the study of the lesson and illustrations to aid in making the study pleasant and the teaching plain. Its treatment of doctrinal questions is sound and judicious. Most of the best practical points of each lesson are suggested and young teachers will have invaluable aid in training for wider reading and later studies.

The printing is clear, on good paper and the book is well bound in cloth. There are three truthful maps, five full page illustrations and a host of smaller pictures scattered through the book, such work as those editors and publishers always do.

NORTH CAROLINA.

First Church, Wilmington:—At the Sabbath morning service Dr. Hoge announced that arrangements had been made with Rev. Dr. Jos. R. Wilson as supply for this church during the pastor's absence. Dr. Wilson will be warmly received by his many friends here, where he served as pastor previous to Dr. Hoge's occupancy.

Thanksgiving at Sanford and Cameron:—This writer has abundant reason to be thankful to Almighty God for that kind providence that has cast his lot among such a people. Without attempting to enumerate their many Thanksgiving presents we simply thank the kind donors and pray the kind and loving God repay them with His blessing. At Sanford by the pastor a thanksgiving sermon was preached at eleven in the morning and at Cameron at night. A collection was taken at each service for Barium Springs Orphanage. Sanford also sent a box to the orphans.

M. D. M.

Concord:—On last Sabbath morning a the Forest Hill Presbyterian chapel, the pastor, Rev. C. F. Rankin, baptized two infants, received five members into the church, baptizing four of them, one having been baptized in infancy. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was then celebrated. The service was the first ever held at this mission point, and was very largely attended and enjoyed by all. These additions were the result of a ten days meeting just closed. Rev. Jonas Barclay of Charlotte was to have assisted us in this meeting, but was providentially hindered. Bro. J. M. Grier preached once for us. Bro. W. C. Alexander twice, and Bro. A. K. Pool was with us a few days and assisted in the singing. In spite of the disadvantages under which the meeting was held, the Lord was with us, and blessed us. Five souls were added to the church, and perhaps there will be one or two more additions soon. The people were revived and a new impetus is given to our mission work at this point. We hope to have an organized church soon.

Nov. 25th, 1897.

Winston:—On Sunday, the 21st inst., the congregation of the church here unanimously voted their pastor, Rev. R. E. Caldwell, a leave of absence until September 1st. Mr. Caldwell will sail from New York on February with a party for the Holy Land. The itinerary is by way of Gibraltar, visiting Granada, Algeirs, Malta, Egypt, Palestine, Damascus, Constantinople, Ephesus, Athens, several places in Italy and Central Enrope, spending a month in Great Britain. Mr. Caldwell will supply his pulpit during his absence.

White Plains:—Two members were received on profession of faith and two children baptized, making seven additions since the last notice in this paper.

Charlotte First Church:—On last Sabbath Messrs. R. A. Dunn, E. T. Cansler and H. A. Banks were elected ruling elders in this church.

Westminster Church, Charlotte:—This church was organized at Long's Chapel in Dilworth by a commission of Mecklenburg Presbytery consisting of Rev. Dr. J. R. Howerton, Rev. Messrs. J. A. Stagg, Mr. Archibald Graham and Capt. Wm. Anderson. The following persons were elected ruling elders: Messrs. A. M. Young and I. H. Foust, Jr., and these deacons: J. W. Long, C. C. Hook, R. E. McDonald and Lee Phillips. After the sermon the officers, except Mr. Hook who asked time to consider, were duly ordained and installed.

VIRGINIA.

Bay View:—Rev. B.E. Wallace assisted Rev. A. S. Venable for two weeks in November in a series of meetings. Thirteen professed their faith in Christ, among them two heads of families. Christians were revived and the Holy Spirit's power was present in great measure.

Belle Haven and Powelton Churches:—Rev. B. E. Wallace was installed pastor on Sunday, Nov. 21st, Rev. A. S. Venable and Rev. J. H. Henderlite conducting the services. At the same time two elders and two deacons were installed in the Belle Haven church and one elder and two deacons in the Powelton church, making four elders and four deacons in the former and two elders and two deacons in the latter. On November 15th a Christian Endeavor Society was organized in Powelton church with eight members. Prospects bright and encouraging. Three members received into this church since present pastorate.

Dr. Guerrant in Norfolk:—Rev. Dr. Wm. S. Lacy writes: We have had, holding a meeting for us in the Second Presbyterian church in Norfolk for twelve days, Rev. Dr. E. O. Guerrant of Wilmore, Ky. The session directed me to invite him to come at the earliest date he could give us, and he came Nov. 10th and left Nov. 22d. There had been a week or ten days of special preparation, prayer-meetings, and some activity and anxiety for the unsaved, on the part of church-members. Dr. Guerrant began his series of sermons on Wednesday night, and his earlier sermons at night and all his admirable morning meetings were to awaken the Christian people, to stimulate them to prayer, to zeal, to concern for themselves and their unconverted friends, and one of the great results, if not the greatest, of this great meeting has been the quickening of spiritual life and power and the direction of Christian zeal and energy. If it would not wear you, and be palpably unjust to the earnest evangelist, I would give you the texts and topics of his evening discourses and brief outlines of the discussion. But nothing could portray the intense earnestness of the man, with his nervous movement and ardent manner, his logic on fire and his inimitable illustrations. He seemed to me sometimes inspired—like some rapt prophet or stern John the Baptist crying in the wilderness. Absolutely self-forgetful, burdened with the value of souls, filled with an awful anxiety for the lost, believing the precious Gospel which he proclaimed so lovingly, so fearlessly, so fully, and confident of its power to save and of the willingness and power of the Holy Spirit to apply it; believing with all the intensity of his intense nature the solemn truths he uttered, he preached like a dying man to dying men, like a saved sinner longing for the salvation of the lost.

I need not tell you that the effect of such preaching was tremendous. Ours is one of the smallest of the churches in the city of our own denomination, and our denomination is surpassed certainly by two other Protestant churches, possibly three. And yet these meetings were the talk of the town and greatly moved the city. The last meeting, the church was crowded to overflowing. More than fifty openly confessed Christ, and our church will have the largest accession ever known in its history.

Dr. Guerrant preaches the truth, and relies on the Word, applied by the Spirit and that only. He never began to preach without asking his "dear brethren to pray that God would bless him as he tried to preach His precious gospel." He held no aftermeetings, or inquiry meetings. He appealed to those who had accepted Christ to come forward and give the pastor or himself their hand. This he did with great directness, simplicity and intense earnestness.

I know many dear friends in North Carolina will rejoice with me because of the great blessing that has come to the church of which I am pastor, and to our city. Dr. Guerrant has done me untold good, and has written his name in the hearts and lives of hundreds.

MISSISSIPPI.

Carrolton:—The Southwestern Presbyterian states that the new Presbyterian church at this place was to have been dedicated on the fourth (last Sunday). Rev. G. E. Chandler of West Point delivering the sermon.

Bethsalem Church:—Rev. R. L. Benn was installed pastor on Nov. 14th, Rev. Angus McDonald, D. D., and Rev. G.W. Patterson conducting the services. Dr. McDonald recently held a series of services here, and several persons united with the church.

TEXAS.

Dallas:—The congregation of City Park church enjoyed their communion on the afternoon of the first Sabbath in November. The acting pastor, Licentiate F. A. Sale, welcomed four accessions to the church, two by letter and two on profession. He was assisted in these services by Rev. Robert Hill and Rev. W. M. Anderson.—Christian Observer.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

A Month's Review. Since the last report in these columns the Superintendent has visited the church of New Bern where a rainy day congregation subscribed $140 to the cause of Synodical Missions; and the church of Durham which, in addition to its important city mission work, contributed this year $278 for the cause of Synodical Missions. A visit was also paid to the little church of Gulf. It cannot be said to Brother Thom, "The people that are with thee are too many" for Gulf has only one-tenth the number of Gideon's army. But like that devoted band they are faithful and true and after a simple presentation of the facts of the work, on Sunday morning, they subscribed $110 for the cause this year. All honor to little Gulf. May her zeal provoke very many.

The successful work of the General Evangelist at Old Concord, and at Troy, where an organization has been ordered, has already been mentioned by special correspondents. Mr. Black is now at Elizabeth City, the only Presbyterian church north of the Roanoke River.

Dr. Alexander's letter from Arkansas in a recent number of the PRESBYTERIAN may convey a slightly incorrect idea. The Superintendent has not taken the responsibility of sending Mr. Black to Dr. Alexander's aid. But as a month's vacation is allowed the General Evangelist, he prefers to use it in this way and declines to receive any salary for that month. He expects to leave for Arkansas in December. Our prayers should follow him, for a great outpouring of the Spirit.

Rev. Edgar Tufts sends the following notes:

Banner Elk: On Sunday, the 14th inst., we had a communion service which was well attended. Four persons were baptized and received into the church. This was the first time that we had opened the doors of the church since Bro. Gillespie preached so acceptably for us during during the first part of October.

Pineola: Mr. Powell, our school teacher at this point, reports 47 day pupils on roll and that the Sunday-school is very encouraging. We have preaching here once a month and we hope in the early spring to organize a church.

DAVIDSON NOTES—HOW FOOT-BALL IS PLAYED THERE.

On Saturday, the 20th, the Charlotte Y. M. C. A. foot-ball team came up and played a hotly contested match on our athletic grounds. Half of the visiting team were Davidson football men of former years, and the rest were from former University and college teams. So there was some trepidation on the part of the Davidsonians, and much doubt as to which class-team or combination would make the best showing. Finally the Sophomore team was selected as the basis, and a few substitutions made from the other classes, and amid wild enthusiasm Davidson scored another victory over Charlotte. The score was 14 to 6 in favor of the home team. Rev. Mr. Graham, our pastor, and Dr. Martin, Professor of Chemistry, were umpire and referee, and during the whole game there was not a trace of dissatisfaction, nor any protest against a single ruling It was a clean game, entirely free from slugging, played in perfect friendliness and harmony, and leaving no disabled players on either side. As everybody knows, the Davidson teams are never under any circumstances allowed to leave the college to engage in match games, but the class teams play twenty matches each season to determine the championship of the college. The winning class has its name engraved on the Alumni Trophy Cup, which is a beautiful specimen of the silversmith's art, and has raised class rivalry to the highest pitch. Including the Medical College team, this system of interclass athletics keep five football teams actively at work during the whole football season, thus giving nearly one-third of the students the advantages of constant training, instead of allowing one eleven to monoplize the gridiron and its training. The matches are all played between friends and college-mates, hence slugging, illfeeling and disputes are practically unknown, and the players and games are at all times under the supervision of the faculty. To those who have watched the abuses of the inter-collegiate system, it is a source of gratification to see the whole country slowly, but surely coming to the conclusion which the Davidson authorities reached long ago, and the position which they have held almost single handed for many years, i. e., that the abuses and disadvantages of travelling teams and inter-collegiate matches far outweigh any attendant advantages. VOICES FROM PEACE INSTITUTE.

After a long summer's rest the girls came back in September with renewed zeal. Contrary to the general expectation on account of hard times, the number was increased by four or five boarders over last year and the character of the patronage was never better. There is a noble band of young ladies here whose energy in every Christian work and whose zeal for the things that make for their eternal peace and that of their classmates cannot be surpassed.

Our thanksgiving "special offering" was devoted this year to furnishing a room in the Barium Springs Orphanage. We raised about thirty dollars for this purpose.

There has been a fine tone in the Institute all the year and the work in every department has been earnest and intense. The pupils' entertainments every other Saturday night have been excellent, their music both instrumental and vocal, being very superior, and their work in elocution and reading has been beautifully rendered. Their exhibition of culture and refined manners has been especially complimented by all visitors.

The teachers' concerts regularly given every few weeks constitute a marked feature of Peace, and they are particularly useful in giving the pupils models of the practical interpretation of the masters in music. There were not many here who were not the professed servants of the Lord Jesus; and, during the services now being held in the city by Mr. Needham, most of those have accepted the righteousness of the Lord and are rejoicing in His salvation.

We rejoice that the students of dear old Peace are not neglecting the one thing needful, but are seeking the peace which passeth all understanding, which flows into the soul like a river and will fill us with the peace of God.

"THE CHRISTIAN AND HIS CROSS."

"His cross"—his own, not chosen by himself, but the cross God has selected specially for him, the cross which alone suits his character. Perhaps you think your brother's cross would suit you better. But you err. The cross you require is your own. Were it lighter it would not be sufficient for thee, were it heavier it would weigh thee down. This truth is clearly brought out in Chamisso's beautiful title poem.

"I sighed," it says, "beneath the cross that God had given me to carry, and while murmuring fell into a deep sleep. Suddenly it became bright around me, and I saw the Lord Jesus standing at my side. He said, 'Thou art discontented with the cross that I have chosen for thee. Wouldst thou like to choose another?' Delighted and astonished, I said 'Yes,' I eagerly followed him, and I soon found myself in the middle of a quantity of crosses of various sizes and beauty. 'Choose,' said my Heavenly Guide, who had so shortly before freed me from my cross. 'You can take which you will.' The choice was not difficult to make. From the first I had been attracted by a golden cross, which sparkled beyond all the others. 'This, I thought to myself, 'is much more beautiful than mine,' and I hastened to seize it, but to my astonishment, I found it so heavy that I could not not move it. 'Now, this will be lighter," I cried, and I seized another cross, which I could easily lift. It looked lovely, and seemed composed of twisted branches, with exquisite flowers twined among them; but it had scarcely touched my shoulder when I screamed and let it fall. The flowers concealed prickly thorns, which penetrated my flesh. I turned to the Lord and asked if it were necessary that I should choose a cross? He answered softly, 'No cross, no crown.' So I again began to seek. I took up a cross which at first seemed very pleasant, but soon I reeled under the burden, which became heavier every moment. I tried another, but it also I had to throw away. A length I saw another that seemed of moderate weight. There was nothing conspicuous about it, but the longer I carried it the better it suited my strength and my shoulders, so I begged the Lord that I might keep it. He allowed me, and we went on our way.

"I laughed beneath my burden, quite happy that I had the privilege of choosing. When nearing my house my Guide stood still, and, pointing to the cross, said—'Examine it narrowly; do you not know it?' I looked at it a moment; it was my old cross!"

Beloved reader, this dream concerns all of us. The cross that God has chosen for us is the very one that we would have chosen had we known ourselves as God knew us, and loved ourselves as God loved us. The burden which He lays upon us will not retard our progress; on the contrary, it will further it. "Via crucis—via lucis," says an old church father, and not only the Holy Scriptures, but experience testifies to the truth of these words. "The path of the Cross is the way to light" but on one condition, viz, that in carrying our cross we follow Jesus, for the light comes from Him, not from the cross.—Exchange.

PREACH CHRIST.

The never-ceasing theme of the pulpit is Christ and Him crucified, yet this is the largest of all possible themes, and has infinite latitude for diversity of treatment and application. He who faithfully preaches Christ must of necessity be an opposer of the heresies of every social and political anti-Christ. It devolves upon John the Baptist not only to point out the Lamb of God, but to uncover the secrets of the king's adulterous house. There is no evil done under the sun which does not fall within the jurisdiction of the herald of the cross. In the name of the crucified One he must pronounce anathema upon all wickedness in high places and in low places, and benediction on every onward movement in favor of right and freedom and human brotherhood. There is a certain point where the Gospel touches every great moral reform, and infuses life into it as Jesus did when He laid His hand on the sleeping maid, saying, Talitha Cumi!

All great social and political revolutions in which life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness have been contended for at the ballot box, in the forum, or on the field of battle, have turned upon some pivotal centre of Christian truth. Reform is not religion; yet so subtle is the distinction between them that no man can say, "Lo here!" or "lo there!" The dividing line is like the tropics which are laid down clearly enough in the maps, but on the surface of the earth are so broad that a man may live and labor in two zones at once.

I do not mean that any setting forth of mere piety or human advancement can by any possibility be regarded as the preaching of the cross; but, as the sunlight of Calvary went forth into the uttermost parts of the earth, and nothing was hid from the heat thereof, so he who proclaims it must needs be familiar with all questions of progress and civilization, and must apply the virtues of the great elixir, the balm from Gilead, to every malady of nation, cities, homes and individual souls.

The right method of preaching Christ is surely not a mere repetition of "the name that is above every name"—a ringing of sweet bells that cannot chime because all are pitched on a single key. The beauty of light may be shown as well from the variegated tints of pansy and morning-glory as by analyzing the solar spectrum. So the power of the Cross of Christ may be displayed not merely in its redemptive aspect as the power of God unto salvation but also as the life-giving factor in every movement of true progress and civilization, the great lever of which Archimedes dreamed resting upon a fulcrum beyond the earth, and lifting it up, with all its hopes and prayers and travailings, into the purity of manhood and godlikeness. —Rev. David James Burrell, D. D., in Christian Observer.

"LETTING OFF" MOODS.

There are nervous, energetic, excitable, yet sweet, lovable and helpful persons who must be indulged in what may be regarded as "letting off" moods. Generally very considerate, thoughtful and responsible, yet at times they get so highly wrought up in work that they must have some outlet to their feelings, when they say many things, in a random, off-hand and reckless sort of way, that seem inconsistent with their natures. At such seasons they are not to be severely criticised or coldly misjudged. We know of a most devoted, self-sacrificing and loving girl who will do any thing at a great deal of personal inconvenience for any body, who is warm-hearted, bright, forgiving and co-operative, and who is forward in every good work at home, in the church and in the community, yet who is subject to re-action from the high pressure under which she works, when she says some seemingly sharp and inconsiderate things very foreign to her usual disposition. Those who know her, know that she does not mean all she says and she is only relieving an overwrought energy, and when the spell is over, she is her own true, sweet, noble and kindly self again. People are not all alike constituted, and must not be judged by a too finely adjusted standard. Human nature requires some latitude or appropriate outlet. One must be judged by his general and uniform character and life, not by exceptional conditions.—Presbyterian.

THE SIN OF FRETTING.

There is one sin which it seems to me is everywhere and by everybody underestimated, and quite too much overlooked in valuations of character. It is the sin of fretting. It is as common as air, as speech, so common that unless it rises above its usual monotone we do not even observe it. Watch any ordinary coming together of people, and see how many minutes it will be before somebody frets—that is, makes more less complaining statement of something or other which probably everyone in the room, or in the car, or in the street corner, it may be, knew before, and probably nobody can help. Why say anything about it? It is cold, it is hot, it is wet, it is dry; somebody has broken an appointment, ill cooked a meal; stupidity or bad faith somewhere has resulted in discomfort.

There are plenty of things to fret about. It is simply astonishing how much annoyance may be found in the course of every day's living, even at the simplest, if one only keeps a sharp eye out on that side of things. Even holy writ says we are prone to trouble as sparks fly upward. But even to the sparks flying upward, in the blackest of smoke, there is a blue sky above; and the less time they waste on the road, the sooner they will reach it. Fretting is all time wasted on the road.—Helen Hunt.

"A LITTLE HARDER."

Those of us who are inclined to give up to discouragement when things go wrong might learn a helpful lesson from a young woman who had left home because her father was a drunkard. When she became a Christian, however, she announced her intention of returning, and doing what she could to reclaim him.

"But what will you do when he finds fault with all your efforts to please him?" some one asked her.

"Pray a little harder," she answered, with a soft light in her eyes.

"Yes, but when he is unreasonable and unkind you will be tempted to lose your temper, and answer him angrily. What will you do then?"

"Pray a little harder," came the answer with a fearless ring in the words.

The discourager had one more arrow in his quiver. "Suppose he should strike you, as he did before. What could you do but leave him again?"

"Love him a little harder," said the young Christian steadily.

It is pleasant to add that her splendid faith conquered. Through love and prayer and patient effort, her father was not only reclaimed from his besetting sin, but proved Christ's power to save to the uttermost all that come unto Him.—Selected.

HOW TO LOOK AT IT.

Look at your mercies with both eyes, but at your troubles with only one eye. Look at your mercies and your privileges often, and at your troubles when you cannot help it. If adversities press heavily, draw all the honey you can out of the hard rock, and oil out of the flinty rock. Saadi, the Persian poet, tells us that he never complained of poverty but once, and that was when he had no money to buy shoes; but meeting a man who had no feet, he became contented to go barefooted. If a heathen could keep cheerful by his philosophy, why should a Christian believer ever complain who is the heir through Christ to a magnificent eternal inheritance?—T. L. Cuyler.

INTRODUCTORY.

Luke closes the record of the Acts leaving the Apostle Paul a prisoner in Rome, but in his own hired house where not only the soldiers who were his guards, but any who would come to him, heard the Gospel preached by him. In this way the Gospel message reached the household of the Emperor and was carried wherever these soldiers went. After two years of this life Paul was released and probably went on with his missionary work for three or four years. He was then arrested and brought a prisoner to Rome the second time. But his condition was very different from the former. Now he was cast into the dark, damp dungeon of the Mamertine prison which even now it makes one shudder to enter. He sent for his cloak to Ephesus as if he suffered from the winter's cold. He is lonely too, deserted by all his friends save Luke. This came because a great persecution had arisen against Christians in Rome. A terrible conflagration raged in Rome. It was strongly felt and rumored that Nero had caused the conflagration. To turn the suspicion from himself he charged Christians with it and instigated the persecution so as to prevent friends from seeing and aiding Paul. It was in this prison and in this condition the apostle wrote this epistle so full of faith, hope and triumph.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. I charge thee. As my dying request. Therefore. In view of the statements of the preceding chapter which should be carefully read. Before God. In the presence and as seen by and accountable to God, the Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who is God and equal with the Father and the Holy Ghost, and is here mentioned as the Judge of the quick and the dead. Those who shall be alive at His coming and those also who may be dead and whom He will raise from the dead and bring with Him. At His appearing and His kingdom. R. V. "By His appearing, &c," makes this another "therefore" why Paul wrote his appeal and his charge to Timothy. It is to be remarked and noted that every form of Christian activity is urged and every variety of appeal to every kind of service is made by the apostles "by the appearing and kingdom."

Vs. 2. Preach. Proclaim as a herald, make known, the goapel. The Word. Of revelation of the will and plan of God for redemption by His Son, who is "the Word of God." Preach that. Preach Him. It is a warning against preaching anything of man's making or devising and an assurance that he alone will never want materials for sermons, he alone will never grow dull or tiresome who shall "preach the Word." Be instant. Give attention, be earnest, press the claims. In season out of season. At appointed times and wherever an opportunity arises in any form, at any time. Reprove. Same word as John xvi: 8. It means "convict," showing one his fault that he may forsake it. "Rebuke" is a sharper word like Christ's word. "Woe unto you Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites," and to be used with humility and tears. There is great danger that our rebuking be with a feeling of superiority. Exhort. Is from the same Greek word as "Comforter," the name of the Holy Ghost, and means to plead the cause of Christ and the claims of the Gospel with sinners, and the call of righteousness with the saved. Long suffering. Patience with the slow progress and doctrine teaching of the ignorance.

Vs. 3. Will not endure sound, Scriptural and searching doctrine, teaching and preaching. Their own lusts. Desire of evil things. Heap up. Load themselves with teachers who will pander to their lustful lives. Having itching ears. That is the people will have ears open to trash and trifling and tortuous turnings from the truth instead of hearts that tremble at the Word of God. Nothing but the truth faithfully and fearlessly preached can cure such.

Vs. 4. Turn away. It is common for those who have not faith for the Word of God to have credulity, to be bewitched by fables of superstitious and false doctrines.

Vs. 5. Watch thou. Be on your guard.

Vs. 6. For. Because my work is done; which he explains in several phrases to be carefully studied. Offered. Poured out as a drink offering. Departure. Loosing of cables to set sail.

Vs. 7. A good fight. The fight of faith which is a good fight, not a boast that he had fought well.

Vs. 8. A crown. Recognition and appreciation of Jesus Christ. Of righteousness. Awarded to a life lived in His righteousness and in the cause of right. Love His appearing. Live in expectation of the coming of Jesus Christ, as in Heb. ix: 28. "Them that look for Him."

Vs. 16. First answer. After His second arrest. No man stood by me. As all were terrified and scattered by the bitter and malignant persecution of Nero.

Vs. 17. The Lord stood by me. In such a way as to support and comfort him when all human help failed.

Vs. 18. The Lord shall deliver me. The sword of Nero could not prevent the real deliverance of God.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

1. The coming of Christ was the desire, and comfort of the apostle.

2. That day is a word to describe the series of events in the coming of Christ.

3. A crown is laid up for all who love "His appearing."

LESSONS FROM PAUL.

Text for the week:

Thursday, Suffering, Acts 14: 8-20.

Saturday, Praising, 1 Tim. 1: 12-17.
Sunday, Topic—One thing I have learned from Paul's life or writings, Acts 9: 1-22.

Notes:

The epistles of the Apostle Paul and his life as we gather it from the Acts contain so much that bears upon the Christian course and upon Christian conduct that it is hard to know where to begin when we would point out things to be learned from his life or writings.

He was distinguished by zeal even before he had been arrested in his evil course, and we learn just here that conversion does not destroy the natural characteristics, or sap the energies or in anywise impair the natural powers, but that it only diverts them into channels where they maybe exercised for good. We note that the Apostle after his conversion never boasted of his evil life. When it was necessary to refer to it, it was always in a way that recognized it as that for which he was deeply repentant; as that which indeed he felt to be so shameful as that he could only in deepest humility regard himself only worthy to be reckoned the least of all the apostles. Humility then is one of the things to be learned from the apostle's life and writings. Another thing was his godliness. His thorough conformity to the commands and entire surrender of his own will to that of God, leading to the practice of all the Christian graces and the putting forth of all the energies of body and mind and soul in advancing the kingdom of Christ. He gloried in the cross, counting all things as less than naught if indeed he might win Christ, and so living always under the smile of the Master we find him able to rejoice in the tribulations and persecutions to which his strict adherence to duty subjected him. To this too we must ascribe his patience, his cheerful contentment, his fearlessness, his conscientiousness, his hopefulness, his perseverance, his candor in dealing with those doing wrong and his love to all those who like himself set the love of God above all earthly attainments or all earthly possessions.

TO THE MINISTERS OF ORANGE PRESBYTERY.

DEAR BRETHREN:—Synod has ordered all collections for Colored Evangelization to go to the support of our Academic and Industrial Institute of North Wilkesboro. Orange Presbytery, however, has ordered that the sum due Rev. S. G. Walker, as evangelist (about $80) be first paid out of the December collections. And now, brethren, I do hope that we shall all take hold of this work in earnest and do our full duty toward this faithful, self-denying brother and the good and promising work which he has begun in our own Presbytery. Do not let us hesitate to press the claims of this cause because of its unpopularity among some of our more ignorant and prejudiced members. One of the largest collections that the writer has ever secured was in response to a plea for this despised cause. Brethren Lazarus lies at our gates full of sores and desiring to be fed with our crumbs, and what are we doing for him! "Verily, inasmuch as ye did it not unto this negro, ye did it not unto me."

Be sure to send collections to our treasurer, Mr. T. B. Fuller, Durham, N. C.

McKAY.—After an illness of only a few days Dr. John W. McKay died of acute pneumonia at his home in Cheraw, S. C., at 1 a. m., on the 24th of August, 1897.

He was born at "Flint Hill" Place in Cumberland (now Harnett) county, N. C., on the 15th of February, 1818, and therefore was in his eightieth year. He was of Scotch descent on both sides, his ancestors having emigrated from Argyleshire to North Carolina early in the eighteen century. He was the youngest son of Neill and Flora (McNeill) McKay. His accademic education was obtained at the Donaldson Academy, Fayetteville, N. C., and his collegiate course was taken at Princeton New Jersey. After graduation he entered upon the study of medicine; taking his degree at the Medical College of Pennsylvania. He then settled upon his ancestral estate and entered upon the successful practice of his profession. On Oct. 21st, 1846, he married Mary Elizabeth James, a daughter of the late Rev. Robert Wilson James, of Salem, Sumter county, S. C., and the only sister of Mrs. Sarah A. wife of his brother, the late Rev. Neill McKay, D. D. This union was a peculiarly fortunate and happy one, Ever growing more close and tender, it lasted for more than half a century. His beloved wife and five children, two sons and three daughters, survive him.

In 1850, he made a profession of faith, and subsequently became a ruling elder in the Presbyterian church, as were his father, grandfather and great-grandfather. And in this church of his fathers he ever felt and manifested a profound interest. From educational considerations he left his "Belle Haven" home in Harnett county, N. C., and in 1870, settled in Cheraw, S. C., where his mortal part sleeps after a long and well spent life. As a business man Dr. McKay was clear-sighted and sagacious, prompt and conscientious. His judgment was eminently sound, his will was resolute and the energy displayed in the execution of his well matured plans was marvellous. In the social sphere, although naturally sedate and reserved, he was kind and considerate, modest and unselfish, generous and hospitable, conspicuously frank and transparently sincere. Consequently he commanded, it is believed, the respect of all who knew him and enjoyed the cordial esteem of a host of personal friends. Those who often came in contact with him could not fail to feel the impulse always given by a positive, lofty and quickening character. While those who were privileged to know his inner self—the unselfishness, depth, tenderness and purity of his affections—loved him as greatly as they venerated.

As a Christian he walked before God in sincerity of heart and humility of spirit, a living illustration of the divine command, "Not slothful in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." His daily life measured up well to that crucial test of the Master, "He that hath My commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth Me."

In the private walks of life such men inevitably constitute centers of great and gracious influence. In the public walks of life they become worthy and honored leaders of men.

The life so imperfectly sketched was beautifully rounded out. It fulfilled its promises. It matured its fruits. He served God and his generation long and well. The frosts of eighty years placed their "crown of glory" upon his head, yet never touched his heart with any chill. Old age neither benumbed his fine affections, nor abated aught of the clearness and vigor of his strong and active mind. He knew no "second childhood." He rejoiced to see all his children embracing the faith that cheered and sustained his own heart. The beloved wife of his youth, the worthy helpmeet of his mature manhood, and the sweetest solace of his age, was spared to cheer and gladden and help him till the very last. The summons found him ready. The last illness was brief and the end peaceful. Surely goodness and mercy followed him all the days of his life, and now he dwells in the house of the Lord forever.

W. J. McKAY.

in company with Mr. Paxton of that station. Our transporiation this time is by "Rice Boat," a small craft that will only carry—(I was about to say, comfortably, but that word would be preeminently misleading, and out of any conceivable relation to rice boats)—two people; with a roof of bamboo matting open at both ends, and propelled by one crooked oar from the stern, that operates by a motion exactly like that of a fish's tail.

The two boatmen tug away, by turns, all night long, accompanying their stroke with a melancholy, dirge-like song. The night is dark and rainy and the bamboo matting leaks. An intervening town is named Bin-bon. Ever and anon the boa man calls out to people on shore "How far t, Bin-bon?" Answer: "Three nines—two nine—one nine," (i. e. nine li=three miles.) "Is he road (canal) pencil straight?" Answer. "Pencil straight" (The canal is very winding in its course.)

Occasionally other boats meet us and a controversy ensues over the right of way, and in fiercely strident tones compliments are exchanged by the contending boatmen to the effect that their respective mothers were the most disreputable characters known to Chinese history.

As we are spreading our "pon-kays" (beds) Mr. P. inquires of the boatman, "Any bugs on this boat." Answer. "A couple; but they are family bugs (i. e. his own peculiar property) and will not draw nigh you." Any mosquitoes?" Answer. "If you keep moving, none, but if you stop, one and a half," (i. e. a very few.)

Early in the morning we arrive at Soochow and go first to Sibley Home, where we are welcomed by Misses Fleming and Sloan with a cordiality such as only people in far off lands receiving friends from home know how to extend, and only the traveller in far off lands can fully appreciate. Sibley Home, originally a plain four-roomed house, built by Miss Safford, has received the addition of a front porch and two additional rooms, built by Miss Fleming. The addition of a house for the girls boarding school, authorized by the mission at its recent meeting, will furnish the necessary equipment for the work in which its present occupants are planning to engage.

After dinner we proceeded on foot through the crowded streets to the north end of the city, stopping by the way at the City Temple, a dingy old pile, the inner court of which is a sort of Vanity Fair, where all the appurtenances of idolatrous worship are for sale by dirty swindlers, and every variety of humbug side show and pitiful imposture is in full blast. The professional story teller, the ventriloquist, the juggler and the lazy, filthy and despised Buddhist priest here ply their trades and extract from the stupid and superstitious crowd, the cash that buys their rice.

Professional beggary, which is a legally recognized and, in some cases, an honored institution in China, has attained its highest pinnacle of development in Soochow. Like all other trades it is organized into guilds, and the initiation fee to the Soochow guild is $30. If one undertakes to carry on the business without joining the guild, the guildmen watch for a convenient opportunity some time when he is crossing a bridge and, by a knock on the head and a toss into the canal, bring his career to an inglorious termination.

His modus operandi is to promenade the street, with matted hair and ragged garments indescribable filthiness, stopping before every shop and singing a lugubrious tune, with the view of making the place too disagreeable for customers to stop at, until the shopkeeper hands him a cash as the price of moving on On some shops we notice a piece of printed paper pasted over the entrance, signifying that the merchant has paid a fee to the guild in consideration of which he is entitled to immunity from this annoyance for the space of twelve months.

Reaching Dr. Davis' house we find him waiting for us with ponies saddled for a ride out to the new hospital grounds. To ride horseback through streets from eight to ten feet wide jammed with men, women and children, would seem to be impracticable. But the ponies are furnished with collars of bells to give the alarm, and the rider keeps shouting "Molay — mo lay"—(Horse comes—horse comes) and the crowds sidle into the gutters with backs against the houses, and so we press through at quite a respectable pace. Dr. Davis seems to enjoy this, but as for me, I trust that by the next time I visit Soochow some other mode of rapid transit will have come into vogue.

The hospital grounds have been walled in, an eight room dwelling has been finished and is now occupied by Dr. Wilkinson and family, Mr. Paxton and Miss McKnight, and the foundations of the other buildings have been laid. Probably by the time this is printed enough of them will have been completed to permit of the regular work being begun.

The location is about two miles outside of the city on one of the main country highways, and the purpose is to secure patronage from the country villages, and by this means gain an entrance to the country homes. Our Mission seems to be nearly of one mind as to the importance of pressing this phase of the work at present.

Soochow is a proud, wealthy city, in which anti-foreign feeling has always run high, and none of the missions operating here have as yet reaped much of a harvest. Our membership in the city is only about thirty. But one of them, the native preacher, Mr. Liu is a man whose redemption was worth more than all the money and labor we have expended here. Two years ago, being called on to assist in the purchase of the hospital ground, he went out and found an old man and took him into his home and taught him how to manage and take care of things, so that he, the old man, could keep the house in order during the time that he would be lying in prison, which he fully expected would be one of the episodes, of indefinite length, attending the transaction. But like Paul, he seemed perfectly willing to go to prison or to death either, if need be, for the Gospel's sake. This was the man who, after my address to the natives on Sunday morning, rose and asked me to carry back to the home Church the assurance of the heartfelt gratitude of himself and his people for sending to them the blessed news of salvation through Jesus Christ, and to ask continual prayer for the grace of God to sustain them and keep them faithful unto death. I trust that from our pulpits and from our family altars and from many a secret place, a volume of prayer for these native Christians will unceasingly ascend.

Sunday night I spent with Dr. DuBose, preaching at one of his chapels that night and the other one next morning. After all too brief a sojourn here, on the afternoon of the 27th, I boarded the nicest specimen of a house boat yet seen, and in charge of Dr. Davis, proceeded up the Grand Canal.

DECEMBER.

Ah, this is the merriest month of the year,
Filled with gladness and joy and with rousing good cheer!
Though there's ice on the ponds and there's snow on the ground,
Green holly and mistletoe ever abound
To tell us of Christmas, of hope and of light,
When hearts are all merry and happy and bright,
So we laugh at the winds and we scoff at the snow,
And we chuckle the louder the harder they blow.

TEN FACTS ABOUT FLAGS.

1. To "strike the flag" is to lower the national colors in submission.

2. Flags are used as the symbol of rank and command, the officers using them being called "flag officers." Such flags are square to distinguish them from other banners.

3. A "flag of truce" is a white flag, displayed to an enemy to indicate a desire for parley or consultation.

4. The white flag is the sign of peace. After a battle parties from both sides often go out to the field to rescue the wounded or bury the dead under the protection of the white flag.

5. The red flag is the sign of defiance, and is often used by revolutionists. In our service it is a mark of danger, and shows a vessel to be receiving or discharging her powder.

6. The black flag is a sign of piracy.

7. The yellow flag shows a vessel to be in quarantine, or is the sign of a contagious disease.

8. A flag at half-mast means mourning. Fishing and other vessels return with the flag at half-mast to announce the loss or death of some of their crew.

9. Dipping the flag is lowering it slightly and then hoisting it again, to salute a vessel or fort.

10. If the President of the United States goes afloat, the American flag is carried in the bow of his barge, or hoisted at the main of the vessel on board of which he is.

IF WATER NEVER FROZE.

The whole economy of nature would undergo a startling change if water never froze. The world's climates would be revolutionized. The ice-bound polar seas would cease to exercise their chilling influences, and consequently the currents of the ocean might either cease or be turned aside in different directions.

Thus the Gulf Stream would seek other shores than those of Britain, and the climates there might be subject to the extremes of heat and cold noticeable in other countries of the same latitude. The ice-bound rivers of the north, notably those of Russia and Siberia, would be open for navigation, and Russia's activity as a sea power and a commercial nation might alter the whole world of commerce.

Canada would become another country altogether. An immense tract of land would be available for cultivating hardy plants, and Greenland might be what its name indicates. The absence of icebergs off the coasts of Newfoundland and Iceland would result in a much warmer climate in those islands, where now the crops often fail.

Ice, too, plays an important part in the economy of nature. Thus, if water never froze, snow, hail, and hoar frost would cease. The loosening of soils and the disintegration of rocks by the frost, and many other now vital effects would be lost. In short, the absence of ice would be on the one hand an incalculable disaster, on the other hand a great boon.—Pearson's Weekly.

AN ELOQUENT EULOGY.

Here is a magnificent eulogy of General Robert Lee by Ben Hill, of Georgia:

"He was a foe without hate, a friend without treachery, a soldier without cruelty and a victim without murmuring. He was a public officer without vices, a private citizen without wrong, a neighbor without reproach, a Christian without hypocrisy and a man without guile. He was a Cæsar without his ambition, Frederick without his tyranny, Napoleon without his selfishness and Washington without his reward. He was as obedient to authority as a servant, and royal in authority as a king. He was as gentle as a woman in life, pure and modest as a virgin in thought, watchful as a Roman vestal, submissive to law as Socrates, and grand in battle as Achilles.

A woman's attractiveness in the eyes of man depends largely on her physical appearance. Nature, in order to preserve the race, guides mankind by the instinctive preference for a mate who is physically sound and wholesome.

If intellect alone were chiefly sought, the offspring might be a generation of Solomons for wisdom, but they would perish in infancy for want of physical stamina.

A weak or unhealthy woman is unfitted to fulfil her part in perpetuating the race; she is unequal to the demands of motherhood and wifehood, she is robbed of her natural womanly attractiveness.

Many a woman is cheated of life's choicest gifts by a dyspeptic, bile-poisoned condition of the system, which shows itself in a pimply skin, sallow complexion, tainted breath, or thin, ungraceful form.

The most perfect remedy for all the mortifying symptoms of mal-nutrition and impure blood is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Through its remarkable effect upon the liver and digestive organs it sweeps all impurities out of the circulation and creates a fresh supply of new, rich, life-giving blood.

It gives clearness and bloom to the complexion; sweetens the breath; rounds out the face and form, and invigorates the entire constitution with vital energy.

It restores the invincible beauty of wholesomeness and womanly capacity.

"I was a complete wreck; appetite gone, nervous system impaired; could not sleep, and was so weak that I could not stand on my feet ten minutes," writes Miss Ella Bartley, of No. 2715½ South Grand Avenue, Columbus, Ohio: "I only weighed 95½ pounds when I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. After I had taken a half bottle I began to improve; I could sleep soundly the whole night, and would awaken with an appetite for breakfast, which was a rare thing as I never had for two years back eaten a hearty breakfast. I now have an excellent appetite, and my friends say they never saw me looking better or in better spirits since they knew me. I tell them it is all due to Dr. Pierce's 'Discovery.'"

In all cases of obstinate constipation, the "Discovery" should be supplemented with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

YOUR DAY AT HOME.

The institution of an "at home" day should be regarded in the light of the passing of a new law under the dynasty of the Medes and Persians—once started it must be observed. The individual who puts a certain day on her cards, and then goes out, regardless of possible callers, is not only guilty of a breach of social etiquette, but she is likely to see her social popularity wane. If an "at home" day exists, it must stand before even the most tempting engagements. Nothing but illness, mourning or absence from home can excuse a hostess from not receiving on her "at home" day.

A NEW LEAF.

He came to my desk with quivering lips,
The lesson was done.
"Dear teacher, hast thou a new leaf for me?
I have spoiled this one."
In place of the old leaf, stained and blotted,
I gave him a new one, all unspotted,
And into his sad eyes smiled:
"Do better now, my child."

I went to the throne with a quivering heart,
The old year was done.
"Dear Father, hast Thou a new year for me?
I have spoiled this one."
In place of the old year, stained and blotted,
He gave me a new one, all unspotted,
And into my sad heart smiled:
"Do better now, My child."

HOW POLLY FOUND OUT THE THE MEANING OF INQUISITIVENESS.

"I put the packages under the farther corner of my bed so Polly won't find them," said Polly's mother to her aunt, as they sat down to a late luncheon. "She has so much inquisitiveness that she would be sure to open them if she found them, and I do so like to surprise the children on their birthday anniversaries."

Now Polly sat behind the portieres and heard every word that her mother said. Polly's mother always had the birthday presents put by her children's plates at the breakfast table on the birthday mornings. Immediately Polly began to wonder what her mother had bought for her. It would be a long, long time to wait until to-morrow morning to know. What did her mamma mean by saying that she had so much inquisitiveness? It was a long word and what did it mean? Not anything in her favor Polly concluded. It must be something that meant curious, for the maid had said that very day that Polly was "the most curious child" she had ever seen, just because she wanted to see what was in a box that the maid had sent to her by express. There was very little that Polly did not want to see and to know, and she was always hearing things that were not meant for her ears, or prying into things that were none of her affairs. It was a very bad fault and Polly's mother felt very sorry and tried to have her little girl correct it.

Polly's mother and her aunt went out again after luncheon and then Polly went up to her mother's room. She was not going to look inside the packages, of course, but she thought she would just like to see what shapes they were. She stooped down and looked under the bed, but she could not see them very well so she got her papa's cane with a crook in the handle, and poked them into sight. When they were within reach, she felt such a desire to open them that she began to peep into the corner of one package. Before she knew it, she had seen the contents of that package. There were three of them and it was not long before she had found out what was in each one of them. Then she pushed them back with the cane. But she did not feel happy. It was not half so nice as being surprised in the morning. No fun in knowing just what would be put on the table for her. Polly was so unlike herself that evening that all the family thought she was going to be ill and on her birthday, too. She had always been so happy on such occasions before.

When bed-time came Polly was glad to go to bed, but when she had said her prayers and her dear mamma had kissed her good night, and left her, she began to feel very wicked. "I know now what inquisitiveness means," she thought to herself. "No wonder mamma does not like me to have that fault and has to hide my presents; she cannot trust me." Polly could not sleep and when she heard mamma coming up stairs, she called her to come to her little white bed. Then she put her arms around her mamma's neck and began to sob. Mamma was frightened. What did it mean?

Then Polly said, "I'm not going to be surprised to-morrow, for I've had inquisitiveness in me to-day, and got papa's cane and poked out my packages of birthday presents under your bed, and I've seen them, and, O dear, dear, I wish I did not have that awful inquisitiveness in me." Then Polly cried hard, but she felt better, as all little children do when they tell their faults and troubles to their good loving mammas.

But mamma said, "My dear Polly, I am sorry, but if you have had a lesson that will help you cure your fault I will not mind."

Of course the gifts were not a surprise for Polly, as the family had planned and that took away from all much of the pleasure of celebrating Polly's birthday. However, Polly is learning very fast not to meddle with things that she ought not, and wait patiently to see and hear what is intended at the proper time for her to see and know.—Susan Teall Perry, in the Sunbeam.

ROLL OF HONOR.

For reciting the Shorter Catechism, Beatitudes, Books of Bible, Creed, Lord's Prayer and 23d Psalm —Myra Moore of Greenville, N. C.

The Child's Catechism, Commandments, Prayer, Creed, Books of Bible and 23d Psalm—Robert Burns Hill of Statesville, and Bessie Withers of Wentworth. The latter adds to her list the 100, 121, 125 and 127 Psalms. This is good for two little six year olds, but Mary Bel Hill of Statesville, aged four years, comes to the head as having recited the Catechism, Prayer and 23d Psalm.

Would be glad to hear from more of our little friends.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Editor: I wrote to you once before. We are making up a box for the Barium Springs Orphans. We children are going to send them some of our hickory nuts and walnuts. I hope they will get a great many nice things for Thanksgiving. I go to Sunday-school at Belmont. Mrs. Fannie Stowe is my teacher and Rev. R. A. Miller is our preacher. I go to day school too. I read, spell, write and cipher. I am trying my best to learn, I can prove it by my teacher.

Your little friend,
ELVA L. HALL.
Belmont, N. C.

Dear Presbyterian: I like the little letters from children so much, I will write one. I am not seven years old yet, and I do not go to school, but I have a black-board, and study a little at home. I have learned the Catechism, Ten Commandments, Lord's Prayer, 23d Psalm, Apostles' Creed, the Beatitudes, and names of the books in the Bible, so I am not in the Infant class in Sunday-school. Last winter when I told Dr. Wood that I was learning the Ten Commandments, he said I would find it much easier to learn them, than to keep them. I am at work on the Shorter Catechism now, and the big words tangle on my tongue sometimes. Sister recited the Catechism, Lord's Prayer and 23d Psalm to Dr. Wood. She does not go to Sabbath-school. She is so little she gets tired before the sermon is over. Mama reads the stories in the PRESBYTERIAN to us, and I guessed some of the heroes, but grandma's was too hard for me. Please put sister's and my name on the Honor Roll. Wishing you a big fat turkey for Thanksgiving.

Your little friend,
ROBERT BURNS HILL.
Statesville, N. C.

IN STRANGE PLACES.

Whether we stay at home or go to strange places, we carry ourselves with us, our moods, our habits of thought, our burdens and solicitudes. We never leave behind our memories, nor our association with our beloved, nor yet our vain regrets. There is a period in life when strange places fully charm the mind, but it is the period of early youth, when new impressions are most readily made, and sorrow has not worn ruts in the brain, and the soul is not bowed by hopes deferred and vain longings.—Selected.

Thanksgiving Day at New Orleans was made one of special rejoicing. Not alone in the churches, but throughout the city meetings were held to give thanks that the dread disase had been s'ayed.

The artist who constructed the silver statue of an actress which was exhibited at the World's Fair in Chicago has been engaged, it is said, to make a statue in solid gold of President McKinley to be exhibited in Paris in 1900. Some Western millionaires will bear the expense. The gold in the statue will represent a round million of dollars. It is hardly conceivable that the President can subject himself to such a thing.

THE NEW VOLUME OF ST. NICHOLAS.

St. Nicholas, conducted by Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge, enters upon the twenty-fifth year of its successful career as the leading magazine for boys and girls with its November issue. A remarkably varied and attractive list of features has been secured for the coming year, including contributions by several of the foremost writers of the day.

Rudyard Kipling's first "Jungle Stories" were written for St. Nicholas, and this year he will contribute a new series of stories to the magazine, called "The Just-So Stories," written in a new vein —fantastic stories. Some stories, Mr. Kipling says, are meant to be read quietly, and some are meant to be told aloud. Some are for rainy mornings and some for long, hot afternoons, and some are for bedtime. These stories of Mr Kipling's are meant to be told "just=so," and one must not alter one single little word They are stories about animals, queer, very queer animals.

Mr. Frank R. Stockton will contribute "The Buccaneers of Our Coast," This is a series of narrative sketches in which will be treated the origin, characteristics, adventures, and exploits of that wild body of sea-rovers, calling themselves, "The Brethren of the Coast," who during the greater part of the seventeeth century ravaged and almost ruled the waters and shares of the West Inies."

Mr. J. T Trowbridge has written a serial, "Two Biddicut Boys, and Their Adventures With a Wonderful Trick Dog." This is marked by his best qualities and is full of effective interest. A lively story of track and field is "The Pour a pint of milk and the yolks into the flour, and mix to a smooth batter. Stir in the whites beaten to a stiff froth; pour the butter in muffin rings and bake quickly. For corn meal gems, use two cups of rich, yellow meal to one of flour, two tablespoonfuls of lard and butter mixed, and follow the same directions used for making the muffins.

Javelle water is a convenient article to keep in the house, high on a shelf, and out of reach of inquisitive children. This is simply a solution of chloride of potash, and if purchased under this name, it will frequently cost less than bought as Javelle water. It has the power of bleaching stains out of white linen or cotton cloth. Pour a little of the solution over the stain and almost instantly immerse it in lukewarm water and rub it well. If the spot does not come out, let it soak a moment longer in the Javelle water and wash it out again in lukewarm water.

THE EFFECTS OF PRAYER

Lord, what a change within us one short hour
Spent in thy presence will prevail to make!
What heavy burdens from our bosoms take,
What parched grounds revive, as with a shower!
We kneel, and all around us seems to lower;
We rise, and all, the distant and the near,
Stands forth a sunny outline brave and clear.
We kneel, how weak! We rise, how full of power!
Why, wherefore should we do ourselves this wrong,
Or others, that we are not always strong;
That we are ever overborne with care;
That we should ever weak or heartless be,
Anxious or troubled, when with us is prayer,
And joy, and strength, and courage are with thee?

—Richard Chenevix Trench, D. D.

PROF. WALTER W. MOORE, D. D., LL.D.

Union Theological Seminary is soon to be removed from Hampden Sidney, Va., to Richmond, from the retirement of the quietest and most tranquil of all country places to the stirring and inspiring life of a populous and historic city. The man who has made the transfer possible and through whose indefatigable efforts the major amount of the money needed for this momentous enterprise has been secured, is he whose name stands as the caption of this article.

For eleven years Dr. Moore has filled the chair of Oriental Literature at Union and although just forty years of age, he is now senior professor by virtue of length of service. The change of the seminary's location from country to city will doubtless mark an epoch in its history, amounting to a transformation; but so great is Dr. Moore's popularity as a teacher, so wide his fame as scholar and preacher, that no institution, possessing him, could remain obscure. During the few years of his career as teacher of the Hebrew Language and Literature he has steadily and rapidly grown, until he could easily command the chair of his choice in any of our American theological schools. In traditions and training, in blood and culture, in family history and personal qualities of heart and head, he is a typical Presbyterian, embodying the finest products of that faith, as they unfold in character and assert themselves in life-work. Born on the 14th of June, 1857, in Charlotte, N C., where the famous Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence was promulgated a year prior to that of the Colonial Congress, and where to-day, every third man one meets is a "true blue;" his native air blew fresh from the Shorter Catechism, and his childhood passed under the strong and wholesome discipline of Scotch-Irish training.

Dr. Moore's ancestors were revolutionary soldiers, his great-grand father, Alexander Moore of Lincoln, together with three brothers, fighting throughout the entire war for American Independence. Another of his ancestors, Zaccheus Wilson, was one of the signers of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, referred to above.

With such blood running in his veins, with such an atmosphere in which to grow, with such ideals to stamp themselves upon his plastic life, and blessed by nature with a mind quickly responsive to the beautiful, and keenly alert and vigorous in the quest for truth, it was only needed that God's grace lay all under tribute for his glory, to give the world a life of rare power and service.

This blessing came early in life, and while yet a mere lad, Walter W. Moore made a profession of his faith in Christ and united with the Presbyterian church.

His mother was left a widow in straitened circumstances when her son was but six years of age, and the self-denial and determined conrage needed to overcome the hardships and obstacles of those early days were all parts of the divine plan, for the making of the man. Eager for a liberal education, difficulty after difficulty was surmounted, until in 1874, having gone through the Finley High School at Lenoir, to the Millersburg church in Ken-N. C., young Moore scored triumph and marked a bright day in the calendar of his life by matriculating as a student of Davidson College.

One thing which especially impressed his fellow-students, was his rare gifts of expression, and his remarkable qualities as a public speaker. He was an omnivorous reader, and passionately fond of the classics. In the literary society he at once took a commanding position.

The story is told that one day on the campus at Davidson College, shortly after young Moore had entered that institution, his former tutor at the Finley High School was in conversation with a gentleman from Charlotte who was an officer in the church of which Moore was a communicant. As the young man passed them, the teacher said to his companion: "There goes a youth of your church who will be heard from. I have never known such wonderful and graphic translations of the classics as he makes, seemingly without effort. He is a genius in the use of the English language." "Who is he?" replied his companion; and when told, remarked that he had not heard of the young man before. It is highly probable that all the officers of that church are now fully cognizant of the fact that Walter W. Moore was once on their roll of communicants and went from their church into the Gospel ministry.

It was during his last year at Davidson College, from which institution he was gradnated in 1878 with the degree of A. B., that he decided to enter the ministry. Entering Union Theological Seminary at Hampden Sidney, Va., his remarkable gifts made such a profound impression upon the Board of Trustees and Faculty that two years after his graduation he was elected to a Professorship in the institution.

Mecklenburg Presbytery in 1881 ordained him as an evangelist. After serving as a home missionary for one year, supplying the Swannanoa, Red Oak and Oak Forest churches in North Carolina, he accepted a call to the Millersburg church in Kentucky, from which charge he went to the seminary professorship already mentioned.

From the beginning Dr. Moore's splendid and brilliant gifts as a preacher have been apparent. With a voice wonderfully sympathetic and mellow, with action at once full of grace and impressiveness, with diction polished and instinct with life, and with thought the noblest, he commands his audiences apparently without the slightest effort, and holds their closest and delighted attention from beginning to end. He is genuinely eloquent, and impresses all who hear him with his reserve power. Instead of striving for effect, he seems to be striving against effect. It is not strange that his services should be greatly in demand as a public speaker, or that he should have received calls to leading pulpits both in the United States and Canada.

In 1888 he was a noted speaker at the centennial celebration of the General Assemblies of the Northern and Southern Presbyterian Churches, held in Philadelphia. In 1892 he read a paper on "The Training of the Ministry in View of the Drifts of Theological Thought in Apologetics and Criticism" before the Pan-Presbyterian Alliance meeting in the city of Toronto. The demonstration at the close of this address amounted to an ovation. Dr. Moore was also a conspicuous figure in the PERFECTION.

"Trifles make perfection; but perfection is no trifle." That is well said and worth our consideration. The Standard which the Bible sets up for perfection is not simply sinlessness or the living without actual transgression. That is, at best, but a negative idea. The Scriptural standard is positive in its nature. It is that of moral completeness in character and conduct. If any one should claim to be sinless by whatever of grace, or faith, or experience, the claim cannot be warranted in the face of such Scripture statements as, "There is no man that liveth and sinneth not," and "If we say that we have no sin we deceive ourselves." These teach that only ignorance, and that of a most dangerous sort, (ignorance of the character of God, and the nature of sin, and the corruption of our whole being, and of the teachings of God's Word) ever speaks of sinless perfection. Even if our life at any moment, or in any act, or series of acts may seem to us without sin, that is of ignorance and will so appear as we grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. What may not appear to be sinful will so appear in fuller light of truth.

That no man may claim to be perfect in moral completeness will appear by comparison with the standard, the life and character of our Lord and Savious Jesus Christ. Comparing ourselves with some former and lower state of spirituality or morality, or comparing ourselves with others, we may think ourselves morally complete. But drawing near to see Jesus and to study the elements so found in Him as perfect, we must see how far away from His life is ours, and how far we are from being like Him in character, and how many elements of His completeness we have not. We are "complete in Him."

As we do not reach the standard of perfection set in the Scripture, what shall we say of the teaching of texts that seem to demand this of Christians? Just this. The Christian may and the Christian should be just and all that is commanded in the Scriptures. It becomes us to study the Scriptures as to what is demanded. It will be found that sinlessness is so far from being expected that it is declared impossible while the flesh warneth against the spirit, and therefore moral completeness is not to be expected.

In 2nd Timothy iii: 17, "That the man of God may be perfect," the Greek word means equipped or furnished for work. As when a man is to build a house, he must not only know how to do, and have had such experience that he can use the necessary tools, but also he must come with his tools to do the work.

In Hebrews xiii: 21, "Make you perfect," means put in joint, as a limb out of joint cannot be commanded and controlled by the will to work. So the Christian as a member of Christ's body must be put in joint when dislocated and this "in every good work to do His will," who is the Head of the Church which is His body. The same Greek word is translated restore and with a similar meaning in Gal. vi: 1. "Restore such an one." When our Saviour said, "Be ye perfect even as your Father which is in Heaven is perfect," the comparison is not for a general statement but of the context: Just that spirit which our Father in Heaven shows, as Jesus was teaching in that connection; in that spirit we should be.

If in Philippians iii: 15, "as many as be perfect" is spoken of; the apostle is including himself, having just said vs. 12. "Not as though I had already attained either were already perfect;" not to contradict himself, but to remind us that "perfect" in vs. 15, means of full age.

When God says to Abraham, "Walk before me, and be thou perfect," a candid study shows that the call is to wholeheartedness, to surrender to God and trust Him alone and altogether. A covenant is to be renewed. The promise is to be enlarged. The future is to be more clearly and definitely revealed and God who now reveals Himself as El Shaddai, The Almighty God, demands of Abraham to give Himself with utter abandonment of all else, of all creature comfort, and creature help to be wholly the Lord's. In that wholeheartedness will be found the demand of the Scriptures in every command to be perfect.

THE FORMAL agreement has been signed transferring the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN to its new management, and the first copy of the paper in its new dress and enlarged form will be issued from Charlotte the first week in January. Mr. John McLaurin has kindly consented to continue as editor and manager during the month of December and all communications should be sent to him as heretofore.. Included in the property transferred are the unpaid subscriptions. Your label will show you the date to which you have paid for the paper. If you are in arrears, please settle at once, and do not hamper the new enterprise at the outset by your neglect.

All pastors in our Synod are earnestly requested to send to Charlotte a list of possible subscribers in their congregations, with their post-office addresses, that the January numbers may be mailed to these names.

While it is not deemed advisable to outline the attractive features, new and old, of the paper, the aim will be to make the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN the best religious weekly of our Southern Church, while remaining the organ of our Synod. To this end the hearty co-operation of our constituency will be deserved and expected.

A. J. McKELWAY.

THE COURSE of Germany in taking summary possession of Kino Chou bay on Chinese territory does not have a good look. It is claimed to be justified as a means to obtain reparation for the murder of missionaries by compelling the payment to their families of a heavy indemnity, and also of defraying expenses incurred by Germany in the enforcement of this claim. But there appears to be outside of that an impelling reason that the strong are not apt to forego in dealing with the weak. Germany is exceedingly anxious to obtain a coaling station and this action is believed by some to be a mere pretext to accomplish the desired end. What Russia and France, or even Japan will say about is an undecided question. Great Britain it is assumed is not just now in condition to demur.

MR. A. A. FINLEY, of North Wilkesboro, has consented to assume the entire local business management of the Colored Industrial School at that place. This leaves Rev. S. G. Welker, who has the entire confidence of the community, to do the work of teaching, preaching and superintending the household, farm, etc.

So everything is now clear for a hearty support of this work on the part of the people of our Synod. Synod recently directed that all contributions for Colored Evangelization during December should be directed to this work. It ought to be well supported.

Rev. R. E. Caldwell, President of the Board of Trustees, request that all contributions be sent direct to the Treasurer of the Institute, Mr. J. M. Rogers, Winston, N. C., or through your Presbyterial Treasurer—only ask your Church Treasurer to send it at once. Pressing needs for the winter are upon us. Contributions of clothing or supplies may be sent to A. A. Finley or S. G. Walker, at North Wildesboro. (Prepay freight.)

FAYETTEVILLE PRESBYTERY.

Fayetteville Presbytery met in adjourned session at the Presbyterian church Thursday night [2d inst.] to take action on Mr. McKelway's resignation and transact other business.

Rev. A. N. Ferguson was made moderator and Rev. P. R. Law was stated clerk. The following delegates were present:

Revs. H. G. Hill, D. D., A. J. McKelway, J. S. Black, Hugh Craig, C. G. Vardell, W. F. Thom, H. T. Graham, W. B. Arrowood, A. M. Hassell, J. A. McMurray.

Elders J. W. McLauchlin, Bethel; G. Buie, Hope Mills; G. G. Myrover, Fayetteville; D. H. McNeill, Philadelphus.

Rev. Dr. J. M. Rose of Concord Presbytery and Rev. F. P. Ramsey of Ebenezer Presbytery in the Synod of Kentucky, were present and were invited to sit in the Presbytery as corresponding members and were introduced to the body by the moderator.

When the moderator concluded reading Mr. McKelway's formal tender of resignation and asked what action the Presbytery desired to take, Capt. S. C. Rankin one of the commissioners appointed by the church to represent their cause to the Presbytery, arose and in a speech of much feeling and eloquence combatted nobly for the retention of this pastor much beloved by his church. Capt. Rankin's most forcible argument was that it was unwise to sever the connection between a pastor and his charge who have just begun to know each other well and whose love for each other is constantly growing. His description of the silken cords which are woven day by day into a great cable of affection which finally binds the pastor and his people and which should not be lightly broken was indeed beautiful. Capt. Rankin's speech had a great effect upon the delegates and especially the large number of interested spectators present. He was followed by Rev. Mr. Craig, who spoke in favor of dissolving the pastoral relations.

Rev. Dr. Hill then arose and in a powerful speech of clear and lucid argument, the key-note of which was "duty," favored granting Mr. McKelway's request. He stated that as either Superintendent of Home Missions, or editor of the PRESBYTERIAN, Mr. McKelway's influence would be greater than any pastor's in North Carolina, and when both of these positions were proposed to be combined in a man of Mr. McKelway's ability it would be folly to prevent it. H. McD. Robinson, Esq., the other commissioner appointed by the church, followed, and in a short speech presented his and his church's case most concisely and pointedly. Mr. G. G. Myrover also made a few appropriate remarks.

Mr. McKelway's speech in "defence" of his action was superb and when at its conclusion Rev. Mr. Vardell asked him to state to the Presbytery whether or not he felt in his heart that it was his Christian duty to take the step he proposed, and Mr. McKelway answered in a clear voice, "I do," the scene was most impressive.

The question was then put "Shall the pastoral relations between Rev A. J. McKelway and the Fayetteville church be dissolved to take effect January 1st;" all the delegates with the exception of Mr. G. G. Myrover, representing the Fayetteville church, and Rev. Mr. Hassel, of Dunn, answered in the affirmative.

Rev. J. S. Black accepted work in the group of churches—Sardis, Summerville, Flat Branch, Barbecue and Spout Springs.

St Pauls, Mt. Tabor, Philadelphus and Lumberton churches were constituted a pastoral charge and directed to employ a pastor at as early a day as practicable.

Rev. Hugh Craig was elected chairman of the committee on the Bible cause.

Rev. F. P. Ramsey of Ebenezer Presbytery was granted permission to labor in the bounds of the Presbytery until the next regular meeting. He will devote a part of his time to teaching in Raeford Institute.

The church of Fayetteville was urged to secure a supply for its important mission work, in connection with the organized churches of Hope Mills and Sherwood,

DAVIDSON COLLEGE NOTES.

Christmas Examinations: Seniors Adopt the Cap and Gown: Reception to Miss Brown.

The scheme of Christmas examinations was posted last Thursday, and the whole college is burning the midnight oil getting ready tor them. Not for years has the college enjoyed a session marked by more quiet, orderly, and diligent study than the one drawing to a close. Hazing, college discipline, disorder, and all other disagreable concomitants of college life have been conspicuous by their absence, and every class-room has witnessed the effects of strict attention to duty. The examinations begin on Dec. 10th, and close on Thursday, Dec. 23rd, giving every student an opportunity to reach home by Christmas Eve. The next term begins the first Tuesday after New Year's.

The Seniors have now been airing their new caps and gowns, adopted some weeks ago, long enough to feel at home in them. The general verdict seems to be that they are decidedly becoming, except on windy days. Possibly by Commencement some of the more skilful may have learned to manage them even in a stiff breeze.

A most enjoyable reception was recently given by Dr. Munroe to Miss Charlotte Brown, of Washington, N. C., who is here visiting Miss Julia Holt. It was held in the new Medical Building, and was pronounced a distinguished success by all who had the pleasure of attending.

Mr. R. Ernest Vinson, who has been compelled on account of his eyes to take a vacation from his work at Union Seminary, has been spending some weeks with his aunt, Mrs. W. D. Vinson. He will remain till the opening of the spring term of Union on the 1st of of January.

PROF. WALTER W. MOORE, D. D., LL. D.

council which met in Glasgow four years later. In April 1897 he delivered the Stone Foundation Lectures at Princeton Seminary, taking for his theme, "The Beginnings of Hebrew History in the Light of Recent Archaeological Research."

He was one of the distinguished orators on Presbyterian Day at the Tennessee Centennial Exposition, October 28th, 1897, delivering in the presence of an audience of 3,000 to 4,000 people a masterly address on "Presbyterianism and Education." But rich as are his gifts as a preacher, the writer does not hesitate to affirm that it is in the professor's chair Dr. Moore's marvelous power becomes most apparent. He is a great preacher. He is an unsurpassed teacher. He inspires and instructs. His lectures are the work of a master. Taking so dry a theme as Hebrew Etymology and Syntax, he wakes it into life, until it throbs with intense delight for the student. His insight into the genius of Hebrew literature is remarkable, and under his penetrating scholarship many a barren text is changed from desert to oasis.

He is a master of the subject of archaeology and his series of articles on this subject, published in the Union Seminary Magazine, has provoked widespread and favorable comment. He has also been, of necessity a diligent student of all the questions connected with the Higher Criticism, and is perhaps better equipped in this particular department than any minister of our Church.

Dr. Moore would be classed neither as conservative or progessive. He is both and neither. He is conservative so far as holding firmly to the old orthodox faith; he is progressive so far as the researches of modern scholarship have vindicated their position.

He possesses that happiest and best of all temperaments which refuses to surrender a truth for a vagary and at the same time is willing to investigate in the interests of truth.

His influence on the young ministers of our Church who have sat under his scholarly and inspiring instruction, and come in contact with the simple, humble and Christ-like spirit of his life has been the best.

It is a cause of sincere thanksgiving that this man so richly endowed and so widely sought by the seminaries and pulpits of other sections and churches, still prefers to give the service of his life to his own beloved Southern Church, and to have his home among the people of his nativity.

For the N. C. Presbyterian.

CHARLOTTE PRESBYTERIANS.

Was it not in November that ancient armies laid aside arms and fighting to hibernate in camp? The church militant, the army of King Jesus, has certainly reversed that order, at least in Charlotte; this thanksgiving month is a wonderful period of activity, astir with "Missionary Rallies," "Thank Offerings" and special gifts and collections for the various orphanages in which Presbyterians are especially interested, the numerous societies regarding it much as the Israelites regarded that month which crowned the year with the Feast of Tabernacles, their joyful harvest home festival.

This particular November has been signalized in Presbyterian churches by the organization of a fourth church,

THE WESTMINISTER PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Last Sabbath, Nov. 28th, the Committee of Organization, as commanded by Presbytery, met in Long's Hall in Dilworth to organize the new body formally, to elect and ordain the necessary officers, and to receive any wishing to enter by profession of faith.

Probably the readers of this paper have already knowledge of the history of this body so lately putting on definite form, but for such a long time taking shape in the hearts and prayers of those who longed to see Presbyterianism "lengthening her cords and strengthening her stakes" as she could and should in Charlotte.

The late beloved pastor of the First church, Dr. Preston, was enthusiastic in his convictions that "We should swarm both north and south, we should make two new Presbyterian churches, one towards Dilworth, one in the opposite direction." Not a whit behind him have been Rev. J. W. Stagg, of the Second church, and the present pastor of the First church, though they knew it meant giving up some of their own efficient workers—they loved the cause more than their own particular interest—and they were on the committee to take the work in charge.

Last June Rev. Mr. Dorritee held the first service. Since July a flourishing Sabbath-school and an interesting mid-week prayer-meeting have been kept up, since August regular preaching service, with the happy result of an enrollment Sunday of sixty-seven members as a nucleus. Two elders Messrs. Archie Young and I. H. Foust were duly elected and ordained, and four deacons, Messrs. Tom Long, Lee Phillips, R. E. McDonald and C. C. Hook. Mr. Hook asked time for further consideration before his ordination. The majority of these members were drawn from the other Charlotte churches, but a good many came from the surrounding country, having moved into Dilworth in the last year.

Having taken upon themselves already a most appropriate and auspicious name, only a "local habitation" is needed by the congregation to make them feel they have a church-home of their own to offer all new-comers. Even in this direction a most substantial beginning has been made, several thousand dollars being in sight; at present they worship in a large store-room.

GRAHAM STREET CHURCH.

This organization, which might be called the Third Presbyterian church, has two special causes for rejoicing; it has succeeded in securing the services of Rev. W. A. Wynne as pastor, and the prospect of becoming self-supporting is brighter than ever before. A daughter of the Second church, she has heretofore had to ask for $1,200 yearly from the generous mother, this year $600 only is needed. Begun as a chapel, a Mission Sabbath-school, Graham Street now numbers over 200 members and is fully equipped with active societies.

We hope the other Presbyterian chapels Eastside and Northside, at present managed by the First and Second churches, and enjoying only occasional preaching services, may grow from Sunday-schools and prayer-meetings into self-sustaining bodies.

SECOND PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The growth of this church from thirty-five members twenty-four years ago to nine hundred and forty members to-day is almost phenomenal in the South, in a city not visited by a "Boom." Another phenomenal feature is the lage number of men in attendance; the pastor and his people have somehow solved the problem of the day, "How shall the young men be induced to attend preaching." Even more men than women can be noted in the immense congregation, so great that sometimes people must be turned away at night. At present Mr. Stagg is giving Sunday nights a series of sermons to young men, only earnest gospel-preaching with not a sensational element, and the crowds attracted prove the uselessness of sensational methods.

This year is marked in the calendar as a red letter year; for it is the year the beautiful new organ was bought, one of the handsomest in the South, yet the six thousand dollars required has already been paid, and this without diminishing any gifts in other directions.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

For several Sabbaths the pastor of this church has been laying before his congregation the plan of the winter's campaign against the hosts of the Evil One; for beginning with Paul's advice in his pastoral epistles about "sound doctrine," he has preached a series of strong, ringing sermons on John vi. 58-68; and his people know that they will be fed on the "Words of eternal life" morning and evening, not only on "the sincere milk of the Word," but on its "strong meat." His prayer-meeting talks on Ephesians are giving them glimpses also into the treasures of that wondrous treasure-house of God, where are stored for the "partakers of the promise" the "unsearchable riches of Christ."

Two of November's Sabbaths are specially to be noted, the day on which the seven thousand dollar debt on the new church was lessened to about two thousand, and Nov. 28th, when three new elders, Messrs. Dunn, Cansler and Banks were elected. All three are comparatively young men, but their praise has long been in the church for their activity in good works.

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE.

One striking evidence of the growth and steady advancement of Presbyterianism in Charlotte is the Presbyterian College for Women, begun in the fall of 1895, under the auspices of the two Presbyteries Concord and Mecklenburg. The property—formerly the Charlotte Female Institute—with its large and beautiful grounds located near the centre of the city, its convenient and suitable building lately refitted with every modern improvement, from hot and cold water to electric bells and a telephone, is very valuable and belongs to the two Presbyteries mentioned above, being the gift of liberal-minded, wise-hearted, clear-headed Charlotte.

Since not Charlotte alone, but Presbyterian churches dotted through our country are represented in this school, it is of the deepest importance to Presbyterians in general to know what influences are shaping the young girls who are soon to give the tone to the Church of the future; and parents ought to ask the nature of the moral and religious atmosphere their children are to breathe at this period of growth and formation.

Of course this atmosphere, this state of public opinion, depends as much—if not more—upon the class of pupils as upon the teachers making up a school; it promises well for the Presbyterian College that the majority of the girls as well as the majority of the faculty are the daughters of either ruling or teaching elders, and have come from pious homes, bringing with them the aroma of such homes, homes made sweet by family prayers, by Bible teachings, by Scriptural living.

How many mothers and fathers sending forth the young daughters have wondered anxiously if the training they have tried to give to heart and soul will be continued or counteracted in the new untried life of the school-room? "Will the child of many prayers return a nobler, truer woman, increased in spiritual gifts as well as in knowledge and intellectual power and pleasant accomplishmens," is a question that should be asked by every Christian parent intending to put his child in a boarding school, and that, as far as lieth in him should be answered satisfactorily before such a step is taken.

Those in charge of the Charlotte Presbyterian College have diligently tried to found their very curriculum on the Book as the foundation of all its other knowledge; for from the little children just entering from the Primary through the Junior Class, the study of the Bible is required as a part of the course, and whatever else may be omitted, not even the most "irregular" pupil can omit that. The Seniors will study Evidences of Christianity to clinch the facts and truths they have been learning for five years from the Word of God. Attendance on two church services and Sabbath-school exercises—the teachers in the building have charge of the Sabbath-school classes—is obligatory on Sabbath, but in the afternoon only those who wish gather together in the sitting-room for the Christian Endeavor meeting conducted by the young girls themselves, though the teachers gladly join with them in the prayers and other exercises. The Sabbath before Thanksgiving was appropriately made a praise service and among the many causes for thanks expressed by one after another, it was sweet to hear so many say, "I am glad God brought me here to this school where the Christian influences are so helpful."

The first Sabbath of each month is always given up to the mission cause—there are several sisters or daughters of missionaries—and the study of the monthly topic is enthusiastic, all trying to add some item of interest to make the programme full and varied. The teachers hope this training will mean more efficient workers in missionary societies at home, for the girls are learning by doing, how to prepare the programme, select extracts, conduct meetings, and above all are getting their young hearts aglow with the needs of the cause.

Every Saturday night there is a Bible-reading and prayer-meeting with special reference to preparation for the next day, and having asked for messages from God they go with ears more attentive to catch them—it is needless to say they are not disappointed. Other nights than Saturday there is a voluntary gathering in one of the private rooms for a few moments talk with the Master, but this is such a simple, quiet, sacred coming together that it could never be counted among the religious societies, yet those who watch over these young souls as those who must give account to God know where to trace the beginnings of many germs of new life and of growth in the characters they are attempting to mould for Him.

As religion without practical results is worse than dead; for it is then only a counterfeit article, we expect to find genuine study, earnest toil, steady improvement in daily lessons, where there is such religious activity, and the expectation is realized.

Miss Long, the principal of the College and her Faculty while heartily desirous of raising the standard of the school until it is a College in fact as well as in name, must depend upon the patrons, upon the Presbyteries for power to do this, but they can see and do see that every study laid down in the catalogue is thoroughly taught, all the foundations are securely, carefully, conscientiously laid; with an endowment, with well equipped laboratories, this institution could take its place with its sister institutions of the North.

Already its musical department has attracted teachers themselves, so exceptional are the advantages offered in this line; the number taking lessons on the pipe-organ promises well for our future church music.

A denominational school is a nursery of the Church; if Presbyterianism does not neglect these nurseries she has planted with her own hand—but something does not tend carefully after planting—she will in the coming years enjoy many precious fruits they will bear her, and can sit rejoicing in their shade.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

Jerome K. Jerome, who lives near Oxford, had just given a harvest home supper to his neighbors, when two of the guests were overheard to argue as to what made Mr. Jerome famous. "He writes books," said one, definitely. "No, he don't," was the contemptuous retort: "he rowed three men in a boat, and then won the race; that's what he done."

Tennyson received $30,000 for "The Holy Grail." During the last few years of his life Macmillan & Co., paid him $50,000 to $60,000 a year. For "The Revenge" alone the Nineteenth Century gave him $1,600. Dickens left $500,000; Lord Lytton, $400,000; Mrs. Henry Wood, $180,000; Mrs. Dinah Craik, $85,000. Victor Hugo left property in England alone valued at $457,000.

Some interesting particulars have come to light recently concerning Carlyle's "Blumine" in an exceedingly interesting book entitled Aberdeen Awa' by Mr. George Walker, published by Messrs. A. Brown and Company, Aberdeen, Scotland. Dr. Guthrie of London, the author of a celebrated treatise on gunshot wounds, married a lady who had two daughters, one of whom was Margaret Gordon, Carlyle's "Blumine." Mr. Walker saw her in 1833 when she was married to a notable Aberdonian, Sir Alexander Bannerman. He remembers her again in 1851, "fair in looks, handsome in person, and accomplished in manner," and a niece of Lady Bannerman says that she had the sweetest of tempers. Lady Bannerman accompanied her husband to his various governorships in the colonies. He died in 1862, from an accident while he was preparing to return to his native city. After his death his wife retired to a villa in Hampstead, where, being childless, she lived a solitary life and died there about 1886. She never alluded to her early relations with Carlyle, but talked freely of his character and of his works, especially the essays on Burns, Goethe, Scott, and other articles in his Miscellanies. But it is said that she talked even more of Edward Irving, who had been her tutor in mathematics. Lady Bannerman's sister survives her and is still living at a very advanced age.—From Chronicle and Comment, in The Bookman.

Wilmington Churches:

First:—On last Sabbath Dr. Hoge entered upon the thirteenth year of his pastorate.

St. Andrews:—Rev. P. R. Law, of Lumberton, filled the pulpit on last Sabbath for Rev. A. D. McClure who is absent in Virginia.

Immanuel:—Has much increased in her congregations, last Sabbath being the largest for some time. Subject of sermon on Sunday night, Peter walking on the water, which was listened to with marked attention. The Sabbath-school is increasing and looking forward to the Christmas exercises. The kindergarten has trebled in number within the past two weeks.

Tarboro:—Messrs. Henry B. McNair and Harry Smith were ordained and installed as deacons at a recent meeting of this congregation.

Keith:—The members of this church held a congregational meeting on Nov. 20th and decided to build a new and handsome church at the intersection of the Burgaw and Clinton roads. This move is made to bring this historic church within the reach of a larger number of people.

Manse in Prospect:—The five churches known as Burgaw group under charge of Licentiate John Stanly Thomas have resolved to unite in building a manse for their pastor at Burgaw.

Sugar Creek Church:—There have been four additions recently by letter to Sugar Creek church. A boys' society has been lately organized, to be known as The Nettie Allison Mission Band Rev. C. K. Cumming, missionary of Japan, preached for the Sugar Creek people on the third Sabbath of November and on Thanksgiving day. And Mrs. C. K. Cumming talked to the Ladies' Missionary Society on Thanksgiving day, and we hope deepened the ardor and interest of our ladies for mission work. Both these missionaries are very entertaining and instructive speakers and present their work in a very clear way.

Westminster Church, Charlotte:—In addition to what appeared last week a friend furnishes the following notes: This work is now and has been since last June in charge of Licentiate J. A. Dorrittee. It starts out with bright prospects of soon becoming a strong and important church, to be followed, we hope ere long, by other organizations for the sake of Presbyterianism, and earnest progressive Christian work in and around Charlotte. There are enough Presbyterians already in Charlotte for two or more other organizations.

Elizabeth City:—Rev. Wm. Black our Synodical Evangelist has just left us after a visit of ten days during which time he held two evangelistic services daily in the Cann Memorial church. The Holy Spirit was evidently present, and the people of God, of our own and other churches who were present at these services were greatly revived and refreshed. The hearts of ten unsaved were also touched and several accepted the offer of Christ and His salvation while several made a renewed confession. Altogether there were upwards of a dozen professions. Some of these were of persons who will unite with other churches. Three adult persons have already united with our church and there are others who will come in. Mr. Black's preaching was eminently Scriptural, clear, vigorous and very tender, and the congregations were large from beginning to the close Much interest was added to the meetings by the sweet gospel singing of Bro. A. K. Pool who accompanied Bro. Black. To God be all the praise.

F. H. J.

The Presbytery of Asheville:—Met in called session in the Presbyterian church of Hendersonville, N. C., on Friday the 26th of November, at 10 a. m., Rev. J. L. Wicker, moderator. Rev. S. C. Caldwell of the Presbytery of Florida was received, and order was taken for his installation the following Sabbath evening at 7 p. m., over the Hendersonville church. The following commission was appointed, Rev. R. F. Campbell, D. D., to preach, preside and propound the constitutional questions, Rev. H. M. Parker to charge the pastor and Rev. E. A. Sample to charge the people. Licentiate E. Mac Davis of the Presbytery of Knoxville was received, examined and ordained as an evangelist to labor in the county of Madison. Calls from Mills River and Midway churches were docketed. Evangelistic powers, to receive members, were conferred on Revs. H. M. Parker and E. A. Sample. Revs. H. M. Parker and E. Mac Davis and Elder W. C. Blair from First church, Asheville, were appointed to organize a church at Barnardsville. Presbytery adjourned with the usual closing exercises.

Long Creek:—Our first fall communion was enjoyed on the second Sabbath of November at this church, the long established custom being only two a year, spring and summer. Thanks to Dr. Turnbull for his timely counsel. Rev. T. M. Lowry assisted the pastor Friday and Saturday to the delight of pastor and people. Four members added during last half of year. Our Thanksgiving and Childrens' Day services were consolidated as usual on Thanksgiving Day and were a success in many ways Several Testamente were received for reciting the Smaller Catechism and several diplomas for reciting the Shorter. $16.40 were realized from the mite boxes. Prof. J. P. Reed of Gastonia was speaker of the day and addressed the congregation on his favorite theme, "Education."

Hephzibah:—Children's services were observed at this church on Saturday, Nov. 27th, with encouraging results, followed by the communion on Sabbath. Rev. T. C. Croker was speaker of the day in childrens' services and rendered valuable assistance on the Sabbath.

GENERAL.

Susquehanna Avenue church of Philadelphia reports eleven members as having been received on Sunday, Nov. 28th.

The Scots church of Philadelphia has called to the pastorate Rev. Geo. H. Wacles of Salisbury, Md., a recent graduate of Princeton Seminary.

The new edifice of the Patterson Memorial church, Sixty-sixth and Vine Streets, Philadelphia, was dedicated on the 7th inst., Rev. Dr. Marcus A. Brownson preaching the sermon.

Upon the one hundredth anniversary as a church, the people of the First church in Chillicothe, Ohio, dedicated to the worship of God a very fine new church edifice costing $60,000, which they had just completed. The church has been three years in building, and has been erected by a people of moderate wealth, who are glad to give their splendied structure to the service of God.

During the past ten years the Union Missionary Training Institute of Brooklyn, N. Y., has sent out sixty-two missionaries to the foreign field. They have been under appointment by the various Missionary Societies of the Presbyterian and other churches in this country.

Rev. Dr. R. M. Latimer, who has been the pastor of the Presbyterian church at Collierstown, Va., for the past two years, has accepted a call to Auxvasse, Mo., and has left for his new charge.

Since the meeting of Synod very little money has come into our Synodical Treasury. We trust that the impression has not gone abroad that no more money is needed. The last quarter of the year expires with this month and there is no money in the treasury to pay up our faithful workers. The churches which have made pledges for the work are urged to pay up what is due and those that have not sent in the offerings from the regular collection are urged to do that at once. We feel sure that the Presbyterians of North Carolina are not going to allow their brethren on the frontiers of our church to have an unhappy Christmas so far as their world's goods are concerned. MECKLENBURG'S GENERAL EVANGELIST.

To the Laymen of the Presbytery:

DEAR BRETHREN—Having known much of the general workings of our Presbytery through a number of years, and especially of her Home Mission and Evangelistic endeavors, I wish to speak a word about the work of our General Evangelist. Our ministers go to Presbytery and hence fully understand the need for such an officer, and the importance of his work, but only a few laymen can go, hence my writing to you (1) The need for such an office.

(a) As the result of persistent missionary effort in the past we have many young, struggling churches, which must have attention.

(b) Scriptural as our system of government is, like every other perfect law of God, it falls short when its keepers and administrators are so imperfect. The freedom enjoyed by both preacher and people often result in injurious vacancies, and the question arises, who shall bridge them over?

(c) With Asheville Presbytery and Stanley county, just added, we have large mission territory which must be explored and cultivated.

(d) Busy pastors have not the time to do this work efficiently, neither is it right to expect it of them.

(2) Mecklenburg Presbytery has solved the problem, how to meet these long felt wants.

(a) Has employed a General Evangelist to do their work, as an agent of the Home Missions Committee. He is to them "instead of eyes," gathering valuable information, for the committee, suggesting plans of work, and carrying the plans of the committee into effect when once matured by them.

(b) Record of our General Evangelist Rev. R. P. Smith, for the past year ending Oct. 1st, 1897

(a) Several pastors and supplies brought in promptly, hence no vacancies occurred for any length of time during the year.

(b) Several mission points opened up, and a goodly number of members added to our church.

(c) Four new church buildings commenced and one completed. Also one church organized from a mission.

(d) Ten mission points already established, were served, and five points visited with a view of establishing missions.

(e) Thirty-nine churches visited (for various purposes) and fifty-five congregational meetings held.

(b) Sermons preached one hundred and sixty.

(g) Miles traveled in doing this work 7,496 of which 1,220 were by private conveyance. As a result of the above work our smaller churches present the best working condition in their history. Our treasurer testifying that each visit of the evangelist is marked by an increase in offerings and promptness in remitting them. Besides no vacancy of longer than a month's standing has existed in the Prebytery during the year.

ELDERS' AND DEACONS' CONFERENCE BURGAW GROUP.

Pursuant to the call of the pastor of the Burgaw, Pike, Mount Williams, Hopewell and Keith churches, a conference of the elders and deacons of this group of churches was held in the Burgaw church on Saturday, the 4th instant. Elder J. H. Moore of Burgaw church was elected moderator, and opened the conference with prayer. Elder Wm. M. Hand was made clerk.

Before listening to an edifying and helpful sermon by the Rev. P. C. Morton of Immanuel church, Wilmington, the moderator announced as a subject for discussion: "What of Stated Collections?" Some strong reasons why each of the churches should contribute to the appointed benevolent causes of the church were presented, and the Synod's scheme of collections heartily approved.

After the sermon to deacons and elders in the character of Stephen and the elders that rule well, conference was resumed, and the session's first subject: "The Duty and the Responsibility of the Elders and Deacons in Visiting Their Congregations" was discusssed with profit by a number of the elders and deacons.

Special points made were, the need of visiting the membership with a view to spiritual edification and personal acquaintance and sympathy; visiting the sick to cheer and comfort; visiting people generally to invite them to church.

The conference then entered into an interesting interchange of thought and opinion on the subject: "The Duty and Responsibility of Presbyterianism in its Relation to Education in Pender County."

Upon suggestion of Rev. John Stanly Thomas, it was agreed that the place to organize a county teachers' association on Wednesday, the 29th inst., at 10.30 o'clock in the Court House in Burgaw, should be furthered and sanctioned.

Conference took recess until 2.30 p m.

The afternoon session discussed the following subjects: "Hours for Service," "Comfortable Churches," "Hymn Books," "Welcoming Strangers" and "Ushers in the Church."

The importance of promptness in attending church services; helpfulness in worshiping afforded by a warm and well ventilated church building; the value of congregational music; the duty and results of welcoming strangers who visit the churches; the practical need of ushers, were emphasized and forcible talks made.

On motion of Elder D. S. Black it was ordered that the elders and deacons in each church select two ushers for their respective churches; that a special collection be taken in each church at an early day to purchase extra hymn books and that each congregation secure a supply of "Psalms and Hymns."

The proposition that the five churches enter into an agreement to erect a manse upon the Burgaw site, now being graded and drained, was heard with favor, and it was ordered that each church hold a congregational meeting and elect a committee of three members to secure the means necessary to carry out the plan of the building committee to be composed of the chairmen of the five committees.

The conference decided unanimously to have quarterly meetings on the Saturday preceding the regular Sabbath services, at 10 30 o'clock, after the order of pastoral visitation.

After prayer and benediction by Rev. P. C. Morton, the conference adjourned to meet on the fifth day of March at 10.30 o'clock in Pike church.

Elders and deacons in attendance: Burgaw church; J. W. Cowan, W. T. Bannerman, J. H. Moore, W. M. Hand, R. S. Player, D. C. Sanders. Hopewell: George Murray, Colin Murray, A. B. Croom, T. C. Murray, J. H. Murray. Pike: D. S. Black, J. P. Hand, J. K. Cowan. Mt. Williams: J. R. Bannerman. Keith: R. W. Collins, W. T. Bourdeaux.

Two elders and four deacons absent.

WM. M. HAND,
Clerk.

THANKSGIVING AT THE ORPHANAGE.

Thanksgiving, a day so important to the Orphans' Home, has come and gone. The importance of the day is not owing simply to the fact that the Synod then spreads a bountiful table of the best for her fatherless ones, but because the contributions of the churches that day largely determine what resources the Home will have for the care of the fatherless during the next twelve months.

With regard to the table spread Thanksgiving day, there was such variety and such abundance placed upon it by donations from all parts of the State, that there was no necessity for a purchase to make the spread complete. And if all the Synod could have looked on, as a family of more than ninety persons, with hearts filled with thanksgiving to God and gratitude to the Presbyterians of North Carolina, seated themselves to enjoy the bountiful dinner, they would have done so with feelings of the highest satisfaction.

As to the contributions of the day either in money or in kind the writer has not yet information enough before him to express an opinion with confidence. Of the churches reported some have exceeded their contributions of a year ago and others have fallen short of them. Candor compels the confession that the average increase, if any, is not what was hoped for in view of the expected increase in the number of children to be provided for. In view of this fact it is exceedingly desirable that the Christmas donations be of the most liberal and substantial character. While it is desirable that our children be entertained and amused, it is much more desirable that they be fed, clothed, trained and educated.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR SELF-SUPPORT IN SOOCHOW.

We need a teacher—a married man suits best—to open an English school at the Yang Yoh Hong Chapel, Soochow. It is exceedingly desirable that the school should begin at the China New Year in February. A competent support can be secured. It is a fine opening for doing good among the better classes in the city. Applicants should address the Mission Rooms in Nashville.

LETTER FROM DR. CHESTER.

OUR CHINA STATIONS.

An eruption on my right arm from Ningpo varnish poisoning resulting in two weeks disablement from writing, in consequence of which I shall need to abbreviate more than I like to do in describing what I was permitted to see of our mission work in China.

Leaving Kiahing on the afternoon of September 22d on a small house boat, Mr. Painter being still my faithful guide and protector, we arrived about nightfall at

SINCHANG,

This is the station where Mr. and Mrs. P. F. Price have faithfully toiled for five years, at first with the usual discouragement, but for the last two years with a most inspiring degree of success. They lived first in a small native house which is now used for a dispensary and chapel, a comfortable foreign style house having been built and occupied about two years ago.

Here, after hospitable greetings and such brief preliminary converse as becometh hungry pilgrims, we sat down to a supper of oyster soup (cove, but good) and such hot rolls as only Southern housekeepers appreciate the merit of, or know the art of making. If Shakspeare had traveled in China and had come upon one of these missionary homes walled in as a quiet retreat from the great suffocating mass of unsympathetic humanity that forever crowds upon the foreigner here, he would have had a new and far more impressive illustration of something to be described as being "like a good deed in a naughty world."

Sinchang is one of China's small towns, with only about 30,000 inhabitants. The visible result of the five year's work is a church of about forty members, with a cousiderable number of inquirers. For work in China on our conservative lines, which are being more and more found out to be the only safe ones, this represents a very unusnal degree of success. The secret of this success I believe to be, partly at least, in the fact that the work has reached out into the country villages. It has been conducted from the beginning on the line of self-support, the support of the native preacher, Mr. Sen, being entirely provided by the natives.

The medical work of Mrs. Price has also been an important factor in what has been accomplished. I witnessed here the same thing I have already described in my letter from Wiahing, the gentle hand of a refined Christian woman applied to cleanse and dress the loathsome ulcers that so afflict these poor toilers in the paddy fields.

On Thursday morning I attended the teachers' Bible class of six men and four women, who are thus prepared for instructing the children in the Sabbath-schools. Thursday afternoon the weekly prayer-meeting assembled, where, after the natives had had "their say," many of them speaking with great fluency, and, let it be taken for granted, with pith and point, I made them a short address which Mr. Price interpreted, with what fidelity to the original I am unable to declare.

At its conclusion Mr. Sen requested me to convey the greetings of the native Christians at Sinchang to their friends and brethren in America, and to say that they needed our prayers, and that they felt greatly encouraged that we shouln think enough of them to send a visitor to see how they do.

Having seen what these native Christians have to endure in the way of a never relaxing petty persecution, which is worse than the occasional violence that assaults them, and seeing the evident encouragement they take from my visit, I feel that that alone is sufficient to have made it worth the while.

Another part of the work here is a school for boys with an industrial feature, the pupils studying in the morning and working in the afternoon, the object being to bring them out at the end of their school term of six years with a handicraft that will enable them to make a living independent of employment by foreigners, which has been the only thing open to many of the graduates of Mission schools in the past, and has led many to look to the ministry as a means of livelihood rather than as that to which they were divinely called.

There are difficulties, however, connected with industrial education in mission schools, growing out of the guild system which has reached the highest possible development in China. But if we stop for difficulties we should have to retire from the field, for Satan has bound this people, in their present political, social and religious status, with so many cords, tied in so many hard knots, that any plan for their betterment in any line can easily be demonstrated to be hopeless and impracticable.

It remains for us to go on with our work, and as has often been done before, by the help of God, accomplish the impossible.

One of the archaic institutions of this place is an enormous oil mill, in which seventy-five water buffaloes are employed in turning the tread mills in which beans are ground and pressed. With this antediluvian machinery they produce a quantity and quality of oil with an economy of expenditure that no Western methods will ever enable them to surpass.

There is method in the Chinamen's madness in resisting the introduction of our material civilization; for, preserving as he has done, almost unchanged, the way of doing things inaugurated by Noah, the transition to our ways will involve a revolution that can scarcely be accomplished without the violent disruption of the present social order, in which, however much future generations may profit, the present one can only suffer.

(Written on board the steamer from Shanghai to Seoul Oct. 13th.) All well so far.)

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

The President has taken those senators at their word who declared themselves to be in favor of International arbitration and only opposed to the construction of the treaty with Great Britain, which was rejected at the last session of Congress by their votes against its ratification, and a new arbitration treaty, in which objections pointed out by hose senators will be obviated, with Great Britain, will be submitted to the Senate for approval during the session of congress about to open. It is evident that President McKinley does not believe the charges made in some quarters, that some of the senators who voted against ratification of the other treaty were not sincere in professing to favor the principle of international arbitration, and that he desires to give them an opportunity to refute them by voting to ratify the new arbitration treaty. There can be no doubt that a majority—a vast majority—of the people of the United States are in favor of settling all international disputes by arbitration, and for that reason I expect the new treaty to be ratified by the Senate, unless some sensation-loving demagogue shall in some manner stir up the war feeling of the hot-headed among our population before the Senate reaches a vote on it. Although the President has not said that he would do so, those who have conversed with him on the subject expect him to say something strong for arbitration in his annual message to Congress.

The semi-annual meeting of the board of trustees of the American University, which was to have been held to-day, was postponed until December 8th. The university has recently received from Prof. Higbie, of the University of the Pacific, a notable donation in the shape of a valuable library of about 500 volumes, about half of which deal with subjects of special interest to oriental scholars, and a rare collection of mineralogical specimens and sets of surveying and other instruments. In a letter accompanying his very acceptable donation, Prof. Higbie, who is eighty-three years old, expressed confidence that the American University was destined to accomplish a grand work.

In common with most other persons I have frequently been struck—sometimes actually shocked—by the inappropriateness of the poetry often printed in the obituary columns of the daily newspapers. While willing to acknowledge that it is only a matter of taste, your correspondent is compelled by candor to say that his own taste doesn't run to the use of poetry, either original or quoted, in announcing through the newspapers the death or funeral of relations. But the appropriateness and pathos of the four lines, herewith appended, which appeared in a local newspaper under the death notice of a man who committed suicide while drunk, leaving a wife and nine small children entirely unprovided for, is sufficient excuse for quotation:

"Depth of mercy, can there be
Mercy still reserved for me?
Can my God His wrath forbear,
Me, the chief of sinners, spare."

The annual report of Dr. W. N. Hailman, Snperintendent of Indian Schools, contains much that will interest those who are watching the efforts made to educate the Indians into a state of usefulness. Dr. Hailman says the stories of Indians returning to their tribes and to barbarism after having graduated from the Indian schools have been greatly exaggerated and are mueh too sweeping in their charges; that wherever on Indian reservations there has been marked progress made in the arts of civilization it will be found upon investigation to be largely due to the efforts of young Indians who have returned from school and worked to turn their people away from their bad and barbarous ways. Of these young Indians he says: "Honor and graterul admiration are due to the young heroes nnd heroines who annually go forth from our Indian schools, pitting their lives against adamantine walls of unreasoning tradition and superstition, wresting victory from what seems utterly hopeless." The report says that the work in only a few of the Indian annual training schools is creditable, while in a majority of them them the results are meagre. Dr. Hailman makes a number of suggestions for the betterment of this branch of Indian instruction, and asks that Congress shall indicate by statue what degree of blood shall constitute an Indian and to what extent adopted Indians shall be entitled to government support in matters of education. His reason for making his request is the presence in the boarding schools of many children of very little, if any, Indian blood, and his inability, under present laws, to use any discretion as to the right of children claiming to be Indians to enter and to remain there at government expense.

The seventh annual convention of the societies of the Epworth League of the District of Columbia will meet Friday and hold sessions on Saturday and devotional exercises on Sunday. There are 34 societies in the District, with a total membership of 3 500. Among the outside ministers who will participate is Rev. W. L. "I SEE IT CLEARLY!"

A gentleman of wealth and high social position was taken ill. Being much troubled about the little love he found in his heart for God, he complained bitterly to his pastor. This is how the man of God answered him: "When I leave you I shall go to my residence, and the first thing that I expect to do is to call my baby. I expect to place her on my knee and look down into her sweet eyes and listen to her charming prattle, and, tired as I am, her presence will rest me, for I love that child with unutterable tenderness. But the fact is she loves me little. If my heart was breaking, it would not disturb her sleep. If anybody were racked with excruciating pain, it would not interrupt her play. If I were dead she would be amused in watching my pale face and closed eyes. If my friends came to remove the corpse to the place of burial, she would probably clasp her hands in glee, and in two or three days totally forget her papa. Besides this, she has never brought me a penny, but has been a constant expense on my hands ever since she was born. Yet, though I am not rich, there is not money enough in the world to buy my baby. How is it? Does she love me, or do I love her? Do I withhold my love until I know she loves me? Am I waiting for her to do something worthy of my love before extending it to her?"

"Oh, I see it," said the sick man, while the tears ran down his cheeks. "I see it clearly. It is not my love to God, but God's love to me, I ought to be thinking about; and I do love Him now as I never loved him before. We think of our littleness when we should remember our Father's almightiness. We bewail our weak love when we should be grateful for our Father's great love. "Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that God loved us." 1 John 4: 10.

Fourth Quarter—Lesson XII.

Dec. 19th, 1897.—1 John i. 5–ii. 6.

Commit to memory verses 8–10.

Subject.—John's Message About Sin and Salvation.

Golden Text. "If we confess our sins He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins." 1 John i. 9.

CATECHISM.

Question 71. What is required in the seventh commandment?

Answer. The seventh commandment requireth the preservation of our aim and our neighbors chastity, in heart, speech and behavior.

Time. Probably about A. D., 97.

Place. Ephesus or Patmos.

INTRODUCTORY.

As the Apostles Paul and Peter have furnished lessons for the present Quarter—the committee seem to have selected this lesson that John also might be heard. The lesson itself is important no matter why the committee selected it. It is taken from the first epistle general of John which some think was written to accompany the Gospel as an appendix and a practical commentary upon it. The Gospel is about the Son of God our Divine Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. The epistle is about sons of God who are brought into the family of God through their relationship to His Son, their Elder Brother. "The whole epistle is divided into two parts: The first (chaps. i. and ii.,) shows us the family with their Father · the second (chaps. iii.-v.) gives us the family in their life in the world."—William Lincoln.

The Apostle John who wrote this epistle lived to a great age, spending his later years, when this epistle was probably written, in Ephesus. He was for a time banished to the Isle of Patmos where "The Book of Revelation of Jesus Christ" was given to him, largely dictated by Christ from His Father's throne. This epistle was designed for all Christians that we might know the things freely given to us of God.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 5. The message which we have heard from Him. Jesus Christ in person on earth, and by the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven gave the message to His servants. Declare we unto you, in this epistle. God is light. "The expression is not a metaphor. Light is immaterial, diffusive, pure and glorious. It is the condition of life. Physically it represents glory; intellectually, truth; morally, holiness. As immaterial it corresponds to God as a Spirit; as diffusive, to God as Love; as the condition of life, to God as Life; as pure and illuminating, to God as holiness and truth."—M. R. Vincent. No darkness. "The schoolmen well said that there is a four-fold darkness—of nature, of ignorance, of misery, of sin."—Bishop Alexander. God, as light, destroys all these forms of darkness We should let the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ shine in our hearts to drive out and destroy darkness.

Vs. 6. Fellowship is the word translated communion in the Apostolic benediction as comprehending "the ministration of the Spirit." It conveys participation, partnership through union with Christ. Walk, go about in the habitual course and conduct of life. Vs. 7. If we walk, (live,) in the light, in sympathy with God, according to His Word as in His presence, in the light of truth and holiness. As He is, in His image and nature. Cleanseth is the present tense denoting cleansing present and continuing. The blood is the life of Jesus given for guilty sinners that, moment by moment, they, walking in the light should be forgiven, justified, pardoned and accepted from the guilt of sin. This is not the phrase to teach the destruction of the power of sin. It does mean the continuous removal of the pollution of sin in the work of gradual and progressive sanctification.

Vs. 8. If we say that we have no sin. Now that we are continually cleansed if we think that sin is by one such act eradicated, we deceive ourselves as to the nature of sin, as to the purpose and work of God in this cleansing and as to the nature and holiness of God. All theories of sanctification that teach the complete destruction of sin in power are the product of self-deception and foster a most abominable pride. The truth; about God's holiness, righteousness and perfection and about sin in our natures as well as in our deeds.

Vs. 9. If we confess: to God always, and to men where the sin is against them. He is faithful: to Christ and the covenant with Him, and just in the atonement of Christ, and to cleanse us not by one act, but in the work of sanctification.

Vs. 10 If we say that we have not sin in act, before and since we became Christians. We make him a liar, as He says, "There is no man that liveth and sinneth not.

Vs. 1. That ye sin not, that we labor and seek not to sin. If any man sin, under temptation and through weakness and of evil nature, we have an Advocate in Heaven as the Holy Ghost is Advocate in our hearts. Jesus Christ "ever liveth to make intercession for us."

Vs. 2. The propitiation not to make God love us, but to "satisfy divine justice and reconcile us to God."

Vs. 3. We know that we know, is the purpose of this epistle—as we keep His commandments.

Vs. 4. He that saith, only will find that not profession, but the life of obedience is accepted with God—and is evidence before men.

Vs. 5. The love of God perfected. Thus God's love for us has done its work.

Vs. 6. Ought himself so to walk as Christ is not only the power of God's love, but the pattern of man's life.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

The Christian is called to live without sin and to have victory over it.

1. The presence of sin and its pollution are gradually destroyed in us.

2. "And I pray God your whole Spirit, soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

3. Mortify your members which are upon the earth.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Dec 19th, 1897.

OUR SINS

Text for the week:

If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. 1 John 1 : 9.

Daily Readings:

Monday. All have sinned. Rom. 3 : 19-31.

Tuesday. Who shall deliver? Rom. 7 : 14-25.

Wednesday. Our Advocate. 1 John 2 : 1-6.

Thursday. Fire burns. Prov. 6 : 12-19, 27, 28.

Friday. Confess. 1 John 1 : 1-10.

Saturday. With all my heart. Deut. 4 : 25-31.

Sunday. Topic. Our sins, and how to get rid of them. Luke 13 ; 33-30.

Notes:

"Sin is any want of conformity unto or transgression of the law of God." The law of God then is the touchstone by which the fact of sin is to be tried. No man, no church, can make that sin which is not in violation of God's law, and no man, no church, can condone that which transgresses or fails to conform to that law. It is well to remember this, for some are prone to say: "This is not wrong, the Church does not forbid it, or this is wrong only in that the church forbids it; if you are not a member of the church, you are not bound to obey the church and so this to you is not wrong." As miserably illogical as it is false and pernicious reasoning. In this matter we need not go astray. We know many of our sins despite the deceitfulness of our hearts which would fain minify or excuse them. Conscience will set us right if we, being at fault, are anxious to know; if not the law of God is within easy reach of our knowledge The great for to our right thinking and right doing is selfishness, especially that self-love which tests everything by its accordance with our desires as affecting our pleasures or our personal interest.

But we are all sinners, and we know it. Let us not blink the fact however unpleasant to admit it. How then shall we get rid of our sins? This is the all-important question. A question that concerns our welfare in time and throughout eternity. Does that mean get rid of the penalty of our sins—freedom from condemnation? Then accept the Lord Jesus Christ is the answer—as He is offered in the Gospel. Do this and we are received and accepted as righteous in the sight of God, only for the righteousness of Christ imputed to us and received by faith alone: thus shall a man be just with God.

But does it mean actually get rid of our sins—become more and more holy—loving holiness and hating sin—growing in grace—call it what we will; does it mean going forward in the Christian life, becoming more and more like our Master and Teacher? If this; it is to be from knowing His will and surrendering to the Holy Spirit to be brought into conformity to it; not neglecting the means of grace—nor any of them, but aside from all self-effort looking to the Holy Spirit to guide and direct and control us—thus shall we be enabled more and more to die unto sin and live unto unrighteousness.

In Memoriam.

WILLIAM ADAM BROWN, son of Hardy and Elizabeth Brown, was born at Asheboro, N. C., Aug. 29th, 1838, and died at Waycross, Ga., November 11th, 1897. When a young man, he made a profession of faith in Christ and was admitted to the communion of the Presbyterian church in his native town

On January 21st, 1862, near Liberty, N. C, he was married to Miss Mary Catherine Brower, daughter of Daniel C. Brower. For nearly twenty-six years this faithful wife and mother was his comfort and joy. Eight children were born to them, six of whom are now living.

About twenty three years ago he moved with his family to Guilford county; most of this time they have resided in Greensboro. He was one of the members of Westminster church at its organization. Mrs. Brown who died December 11th, 1887, was the first of the original members called to her reward. Mr. Brown was modest and retiring in his disposition; firm in his convictions; unswerving in integrity. He was generous, unselfish, self-sacrificing; an upright citizen, an obliging neighbor, a true and considerate friend, an affectionate husband, a tender father. Our community mourns the loss of one of its purest and best citizens, our church misses one of its most consistent members. His heart was filled with joy when a few months since he was permitted to see his youngest child (the only one out of the fold) brought into the communion of the church. He was faithful in the observance of family worship, and even during his last illness, when too weak to read and with strength scarcely sufficient to make his voice audible, he arose from his bed and knelt with his family in prayer.

It had been observed for several months that he was in declining health. Loving children ministered to his wants. All that could be done for his restoration was done. While on a visit for the benefit of his health to his son, Rev. Rossa A. Brown, the consecrated pastor of the church at Waycross, Ga., the summons came. For more than two hours before the end he was fully aware of his condition. With perfect resignation to the divine will he spoke calmly of his departure, sent loving messages to all the absent members of his household, commended each one in prayer to God, and then trustingly committed his own soul to the Saviour's keeping.

"Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright: for the end of that man is peace" PASTOR

IN MEMORIAM.

MRS. MARY TYSON.

The Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies of the Presbyterian church in Carthage, N. C., would bow in submission beneath the hand of an allwise God who has deprived us of a beloved sister and mother in Israel. She was always a devoted and faithful member of both of our societies and until failing health and a fear of sudden death caused her to surrender it to younger hands, she was the treasurer of the Aid Society. Though for sometime confined to her room yet her hand was felt in wise advice and in awakening a deeper interest in the work among those who came in touch with her during her "shut in" days. The light of a loving heart beamed out in her face, and with submission and patience she waited the summons of her Redeemer to her long home.

Resolved, That this tribute of respect be spread upon our minutes and published in the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN.

Adopted at a joint meeting of the societies at the manse Dec. 1st, 1897.

TYSON. Mrs. Mary Tyson, wife of T. B. Tyson, Sr., deceased, was born September 28th, 1823, and died October 26th, 1897, at her home in Carthage, N. C. Thus has passed from us one whose virtues were many and whose friends were all who knew her. Though she had an only child, those who looked to her as mother were many. Five times had she taken the motherless to her heart and home, and given to them the energies of her life. The last that came to her care were her great-grand children, who now for the second time in one year have lost their mother.

As we sat around her casket speaking of her life and great loving heart, her son, now an honored elder, said of her, "Her life was given for others," and we felt that it had been well said, for that had been her life work.

PASTOR.

MEMORIAL OF DAVID GASTON WORTH.

[Adopted by the session of the First Presbyterian church, Wilmington, N.C.]

For the second time in a quarter of a century this session is called to mourn the loss of one of its members by death. Since the death of Dr. James H. Dickson, Sept. 28th, 1862, there had been no death in the session until George Chadbourn passed away, July 8th, 1891. And now David G. Worth is gone—a noble trio whose characters would have adorned any community. In the midst of its great sense of loss, the session is filled with profound gratitude to God for the life that has been passed among us, and for the deep impression of his character upon the community, as evinced by the spontaneous and almost unparalleled outpouring of love and honor that his death has called forth. To the members of this church and especially to the young men of this congregation, the session would affectionately commend the noble example of his life, that they may learn to value character as the great end of life, and to find the secret of that character in a humble walk with God. To his bereaved wife and sons the session expresses its profound sympathy in their unspeakable loss. For ourselves we will remember his wise counsels, his charitable judgments, his devotion to duty, and the brotherly love in which he walked with each of us. And while we cherish the memory of a friend and brother we will seek to follow his example until our broken circle is re-formed around the throne of God and the Lamb.

The session orders this memorial to be spread upon its records together with the record of his life and the sketch of his character prepared by his pastor, and directs that this memorial shall be read to the congregation, and a copy sent to his family, and to Dr. George C. Worth, and to the Board of Deacons.

THE LOOM OF LIFE.

All day, all night, I can hear the jar
Of the loom of life, and near and far
It thrills, with its deep and muffled sound,
As the tireless wheels go round and round.

Busily, ceaselessly, goes the loom
In the light of day and the midnight's gloom;
The wheels are turning early and late,
And the wool is wound in the warp of fate.

Click, clack! there's a thread of love wove in;
Click, clack! another of wrong and sin;
What a chequered thing this life will be
When we see it unrolled in eternity!

Time, with a face like Mystery,
And hands as busy as hands can be,
Sits at the loom with arms outspread,
To catch in its meshes each glancing thread.
When shall this wonderful web be done;
In a thousand years perhaps in one;
Or to-morrow! Who knoweth? Not you nor I
But the wheels turn on and the shuttles fly.

Are we spinners of wool for this life web—say?
Do we furnish the weaver a thread each day?
It were better then, O, my friend, to spin
A beautiful thread than a thread of sin.

Ah! sad eyed weaver, the years are slow
But each is nearer the end, I know:
And some day the last thread shall be woven in;
God grant it may be love instead of sin.

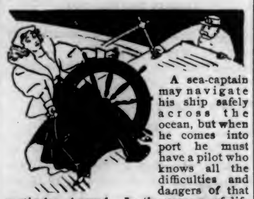
A NOVEL MOUSE TRAP.

Prof. Alsnel say: Sticky fly paper used in summer to catch flies is said to make an excellent mouse trap. Lay a sheet of it in front of the hole from which the mice emerge, and it will hold them fast until you can capture them. The same paper can be used again and again. This is better than poisoning them, allowing them to retreat into their holes and there decay offensively.



LARGEST TELESCOPE REFLECTOR.

In 1895, the Rev. Dr. John Peate commenced, at Greenville, Pa., the construction of a mammoth speculum for a reflecting telescope designed for the American University at Washington. After two years of arduous and absorbing toil, involving the exercise of skill of the highest grade. Dr. Peate has given the great mirror its last touches—i. e., in grinding and polishing, and it is already for silvering, and for the further and very important stage of mounting. The huge disc of glass is more than sixty-one inches in diameter.—Popular Science Monthly.

GRACEFULNESS AT HOME.

There is a nice art in being able to pay a compliment gracefully, and it is one that ought to be cultivated in the home as well as the outer circles of society. There is no reason why the home circle should not be as polished and attractive in its behavior as the public assembly. It is a great error for fathers and mothers to permit such a relaxation of politeness among their children, as we too often find under the family roof tree.

Company behavior and company manners may necessarily be more formal and precise than those of the fireside and sitting-room, but it is fatal to good breeding to deliberately lay polish and compliment aside when our dear ones compose the company exclusively. Teach the children to say graceful things—yet truthful things of course—to brothers and sisters, as well as to strangers; to be as careful of wounding their feelings and their self-respect as they would be of the feelings of a guest, and at the breakfast or dinner table to take just as much pains to entertain and enlighten each other as though the entertainment of party of invited friends depended upon the effort.—Forward.

A sea-captain may navigate his ship safely across the ocean, but when he comes into port he must have a pilot who knows all the difficulties and dangers of that particular channel. In the voyage of life there are many perilous places where we need the help of a pilot who has a thorough knowledge of the special difficulties and dangers to be avoided.

In those delicate physical weaknesses and diseases peculiar to women a general practitioner or ordinary doctor has no opportunity to become thoroughly proficient. Still less to be trusted is the advice of any mere nurse or unscientific person.

Only a specialist who has given a life of study to this particular field of practice, is competent to treat the diseases of woman's intricate and complicated organism.

Any woman suffering from these delicate troubles may obtain the most eminent professional advice free of charge by writing to Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y. During nearly 30 years' at the head of his splendid staff of specialists, he has successfully treated many thousands of cases of obstinate feminine complaints.

His "Favorite Prescription" was devised for the sole purpose of curing the diseases and weaknesses of the feminine organs. No other medicine has been so marvelously successful in this particular field of practice. No other medicine so completely overcomes all the dangers and nearly all the pains of motherhood.

"It is with pleasure I recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to suffering ladies," writes Mrs. J. Ferguson, Box 20, Douglas Station, Selkirk Co., Manitoba. "After suffering untold tortures I thank God I found relief and cure in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription."

The greatest book for women ever published is Dr. Pierce's thousand-page illustrated "Common Sense Medical Adviser," sent free in paper covers for cost of mailing only, 21 one-cent stamps; cloth-bound 31 stamps. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

NEW USE FOR PEANUTS.

Peanut butter answers in the place of ordinary butter for table use and is said to be excellent for shortening purposes, and for gravies, sauces, etc. In point of purity it is superior to the best dairy butter. It is well designed for the use of vegetarians who strenuously object to anything animal. There is already a considerable demand for this butter substitute, and it is very probable there will be an enlarged market for the nuts. At present the product of the United States is about $500,000 bags annually and that of the world is 600,000,000 pounds. — West Coast Trade.

SANTA CLAUS' ADVERTISEMENT.

Hands wanted at once for Santa Claus!
The good old Saint must have help because
The towns and cities so large have grown,
He can't get over them all alone,

Hands wanted! No need of craft or art:
The test of fitness is a warm heart;
And children's hands, though weak and small,
Are often the fittest hands of all—

Are often the fittest hands to bring
At Christmas time the love offering;
For this is how, as you doubtless see,
One acts for the Saint as deputy.

Who wishes now to secure a place,
And wear the badge of a smiling face?
You can serve in homespun or silken dress,
And the coin you're paid buys happiness.

THE TWO WINDMILLS.

By Elizabeth T. Larkins.

Miss Landon was sitting on the piazza of a beautiful house in the country where she had been invited to spend a few days, and her friends' children were playing about her. It was a charming day, everything was as beautiful as possible, and all were enjoying themselves. They had been watching the big windmill on the barn, and little Celia had been telling the visitor how much work it did.

"Why," said she, "it saws all the wood we use, draws all the water, and grinds all the wheat. It does almost everything."

"Well," said Willie, who lay stretched out on the grass, "there's one thing it doesn't do, I can tell you that."

"What is it?" asked Miss Landon.

"It doesn't grind up apples to make cider to get people drunk on. That's a temperance windmill."

"Good," said Miss Landan. "I am glad to hear that; but I should know a temperance man like your father would never use his windmill to make cider, nor allow any one else to use it for that purpose."

"No," piped up little Celia, "my papa don't make cider; my papa's temp'rance."

Miss Landon had invited the little girl to share the swinging piazza chair with her, and as they swung back and forth the child's eyes caught sight of the King's Daughters cross suspended from the pretty Brazilian cat's-eye stone pin, which was Miss Landon's only extravagance at the World's Fair, and noticing its resemblance in shape to the windmill, she said:

"What is your little windmill for; this little silver windmill?"

"Read the letters on it, and then I will tell you," was the reply.

So little Celia, steadying the tiny cross with her finger, read slowly:

"I—H—N. What does that mean?"

Her kind friend told her that the letters stood for the words, "In His Name," and tried to explain to her what it meant. She said:

"If your father should send Willie to the store to tell the man to bring a bushel of corn to the barn here, and that he would be paid when he brought it, Willie would be buying the corn, or asking for it in your father's name, and because your father wanted him to, wouldn't he? Doing a thing in anybody's name is doing it for them, and because they want you to. Now, 'In His Name' means in Jesus' name, and because He wants us to; and anything we can't do in His name, He doesn't want us to do, and we mustn't do it. Let us try to remember that."

"But He might want us to do something hard," said Willie.

"Well, if we love Him," replied Miss Landon, "it will make it be easy to do it. What does your father do to his windmill when it goes hard?"

"Do?—why he has it oiled, and then it goes easy."

"Yes," was the reply, "and love is the oil that makes it easy to do what He wants us to do, and in His name, too."

"And love is the oil that makes your little windmill go easy, is it?" It was Celia who asked that question.

"Just so, my nice little thinker," said Miss Landon, "and don't you see, if I love Jesus I will love my neighbor too. And if I love him I shall not want to do anything to hurt him. So if I had any number of windmills, and each one as big as your father's, I couldn't use one of them to grind apples to make cider, because the Bible says, 'Love worketh no ill to his neighbor,' and cider works a terrible amount of ill. Yes, I've known a great deal of misery in many homes all through cider-drinking."

"Cider will make a man real drunk, Miss Landon," said Willie.

"Indeed it will. There's alcohol in it after a short time. You know cider is called 'the devil's kindling-wood,' and just as the little shavings and kindling wood,' set the big sticks of wood on fire, so cider kindles a big appetite for rum and gin and brandy, and all those dreadful drinks that do so much harm. Oh! I sometimes can hardly bear to see apple-blossoms, beautiful as they are, and the gift of our dear heavenly Father, because I know the more apples there are the more cider there will be. What a pity that men will so abuse the good gifts of God."

Just here mamma came to the window of the room which opened on the piazza, and said:

"What are you all talking so earnestly about? Why, I should think it was some kind of a convention."

"So it is, mamma," said Willie; "and it was all set going by two windmills."

"Two windmills; why," said mamma, "there is but one on the whole farm—and that seems to be going at a pretty rapid rate just now—unless the other is somebody's tongue."

"No, no, mamma, it's here—just here," said little Celia, touching the silver cross as she spoke; "it's Miss Landon's little silver windmill. It's a windmill that never does any harm to anybody, because it says on it, 'In Jesus' name, and it's oiled with love, so it always goes smooth, and—and—it's a real nice little windmill, and I wish I had one like it. It won't let anybody grind cider, and it's real, real nice."

And then they all clapped their hands at little Celia's little speech, she had done so nicely, but she looked as if she had said something wrong till mamma drew her to her side and kissed and comforted her, telling her that she understood all about it, and she thought it must have been a very nice convention. And so it was.—Temperance Banner.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Presbyterian: I am a little girl eleven years old. My mother takes the Missionary and the Children's Missionary. Can any of the children that write for your paper tell me anything about the Missionary game? My father takes your good paper and I enjoy reading the letters in it. I recited the Shorter Catechism, Beatitudes, Books of the Bible, Apostles Creed, the Lord's Prayer, the Ten Commandments and the 23rd Psalm

Your little friend,
MYRA MOORE.
Greenville, N. C.

Dear Presbyterian: This is the first letter I have ever written to you. We enjoy having school in the new Rumple Hall. We all go to school in the morning and work in the evening. I am nine years old. I am supported by Mrs. Leer, of New York City. My box has come, Mrs. Lees sent Richard Pettus and myself one dollar a piece. I have two brothers and a sister. Mr. Boyd has Bible lessons in the mornings before school. I like to stay here. I will close for this time.

Your friend,
BESSIE REYNOLDS.
Balium Springs, N. C.

Dear Presbyterian: As I have not written to your good paper in a right long time, so I will write now. I noticed a letter in the PRESBYTERIAN some time since from a little girl in Chapel Hill and she spoke of one of her playmates by the name of Annie Johnson. I expect little Annie is a cousin of mine. I would like to meet those two little girls. I imagine we could have a jolly time. Miss Ara "our teacher" is thinking of having a Christmas tree Christmas Eve and let Santa Claus visit us at the schoolhouse. It will soon be time for us little [girls to hang up our stockings. I will close hoping to see my letter in print.

Your true friend,
E. MYRTLE WILKINSON.

FOREIGN MISSION RECEIPTS.

The books of the Executive Committee of Foreign Missions give the following figures: Receipts during November 1897, $12,470.37; less than during November 1896 by. $3,816.06. Receipts April 1, '97, to December 1st, '97, $31,528.10; less than same dates 1896, by $7,681.30. Amount due missions for 1897, November 30th, $19,828.74. Cash in bank, Nov. 30th, less than $50.

All the $19,828.74 should be sent off to the Missions in December 1897; and nearly all during the first week in December.

Would it not be well for the Church to take a long and thoughtful look at these figures? The receipts for this November as compared with last came short $3,816; the receipts since April 1st have fallen off $7,651.

The Foreign Mission work grows in spite of our efforts to cramp it, and growth in the work means growth in expenses. With expenses increasing, and receipts dwindling, what must be the inevitable result?

Only four more months of the year remain. "Then cometh harvest." There confronts us the prospect of a debt that will hamper us for years to come.

Yellow fever accounts for only about $1,900 of this shortage. Another kind of yellow fever, it is to be feared, is doing a more deadly work.

Chairman.

THINGS USEFUL.

Rub tough meat with a cut lemon.

To clean hair brushes, rub them in dry Indian meal until the oil and dust are extracted.

Add a few drops of vinegar to the water for poaching eggs, to make them set properly and keep the white from spreading.

Macaroni Pudding.—Put one pint of milk into a saucepan with the thinly pared rind of a lemon and two ounces of loaf sugar. Bring slowly to the boil. Then remove the lemon-rind, and put in two and a half ounces of macaroni, broken into pieces about half an inchlong. Simmer gently till the macaroni is soft. Pour it into the baking-dish. Separate the yolks and whites of two eggs. Beat the yolks and mix them with another pint of cold milk. Pour this into the dish on the cooked macaroni. Whisk the whites to a very stiff froth, and then stir these in as lightly as possible to the other ingredients. Bake in a moderate oven till a delicate brown.

Apple Custard pudding.—Put a quart of pared and quartered apples in a stew pan, with half a cupful of water, and cook them until they are soft. Remove from the fire and add half a cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter and the grated rind and the juice of a lemon. Having ready mixed two cupfuls of bread crumbs and two tablespoonfuls of flour, add this also to the apple mixture, after which stir in two well-beaten eggs. Turn all into a well-buttered pudding dish, and bake forty-five minutes in a moderate oven.

THE VINE AND BRANCHES.

LUOLA.

I am the vine—ye are the branches.
John xv. 1.

So near as that, if I am thine!
Near as the branch is to the vine!
O condescension passing strange,
Beyond the flight of mental range!

Part of Thyself! How can it be?
Reveal the precious truth to me,
Let me but know this union sweet,
My joy in Thee will be complete.

I know the fruit the branch must bear,
The Husbandman's unceasing care,
And if to prune it He sees best,
My soul accepts His wise behest.

Content if I in fruit abound,
Content if in the vine I'm found,
Oh Son of God abide with me
Or else a withered branch I'll be.

ABIDE IN CHRIST.

It ought to be the holy purpose of believing souls who are looking for Christ, to dwell so entirely amid the Redeemer's merits that, like the maidens of King Ahasuerus, Esther ii. 12, they shall be fragrant with the sweet odors, and with these alone, when the Bridegroom comes. When Christ presented His human person and all He had, He was indeed fragrant to the Father, and the oil of the Spirit was on Him above His fellows, Isa. lxi. 1; Ps. xlv. 7; Heb. ix: 14, and equally "complete in Him" is every believer also, Col. ii. 10.—Dr. A. A. Bonar.

"What do you consider the greatest discovery you ever made?" an interviewer asked Sir James Y. Simpson, the eminent Scotch surgeon and the discoverer of chloroform. "That I have a Saviour," he replied, without hesitation.

REV. JOHN WAKEFIELD.

The subject of our sketch was born in Ontario, Canada, Aug. 25th, 1864. His parents were members of the English Church. When he was seven years old his father moved with his large family to North Carolina, and settled at Friendship, Guilford county, where John's boyhood was spent on the farm. He attended the public school, and the New Garden Boarding School, now known as Guilford College.

At the age of nineteen he moved to Greensboro and for six years was engaged in the hardware business. He attended services at the First Presbyterian church, and in 1866, united with that church upon profession of his faith in Christ. A year later the Westminster church was organized, of which he became a member by transfer and was elected a deacon.

Feeling called of God to preach the Gospel, he entered Davidson College in 1889, at the age of twenty-five and graduated with the class of '93, having won the Orator's Medal in his Junior year. Completing the full seminary course at Union, Va., in 1896, he was licensed by Orange Presbytery in June of that year, and ordained by Wilmington Presbytery in the following October.

Since July his field of labor has been Brunswick county, where his word has been eminently, vigorous and successful. At its recent meeting he was elected moderator of Wilmington Presbytery.*

Mr. Wakefield's mind is clear, strong and well-trained; his sermons, Scriptural and earnest; his manners sympathetic and cordial. To an acquaintance with college and seminary lore, he adds a sound practical knowledge of men and things, the fruit of his long experience on the farm and in the hardware business. The human heart being deceitful above all things and desperately wicked, a knowledge of hardware is not only a powerful factor, it is an essential element of ministerial success.

But Mr. Wakefield's strong point, though he knows it not, is his character. Truthful to his heart's core, humble as a little child, faithful in that which is least, loyal to the loftiest sense of duty, he has enjoyed the absolute confidence of all who have ever known him, whether as deacon, as student, as man of business, or as man of God.

"Cujus vita fulgor, verba tonitrua."

*Since the above was written Mr. Wakefield has taken charge of Spencer and China Grove churches in Concord Presbytery.

WHAT LIFE IS.

Life is not mere living. It is worship—it is the surrender of the soul to God, and the power to see the face of God; and it is service—it is to feel that when we die, whether praised or blamed, whether appreciated or misinterpreted, whether honored or ignored, whether wealthy or destitute—we have done something to make the world better and happier—we have tried to cast upon the waters some seeds which, long after we are dead, may still bring forth their flowers of Paradise. The seed dies, but the harvest lives. Sacrifice is always fruitful, and there is nothing fruitful else. * * Out of the suffering comes the serious mind; out of the salvation, the grateful heart; out of the endurance, the fortitude: out of the deliverance, the faith.—Canon Farrar.

Hath any wronged thee? Be bravely revenged! Slight it, and the work is begun; forgive it, and the work is finished.—Quarles.

POWER.

You want power? Well, the desire is legitimate, and its realization possible.

But what kind of power? Physical? Then stop fretting. Take exercise. Avoid excesses. Form regular habits. Eat nourishing food. Sleep long and soundly. That means a sound body.

Mental power. All right. Use your brain. Think. Think systematically. Think below the surface. Grapple with the great thoughts which others have put into books. That will give fiber and grip to your mental life.

Or is it moral power you are after? Very good. It may be had. Think pure thoughts. Look at lofty ideals. Live right. Crucify self. Loathe all vileness. Develop the Good Samaritan side of your life. That will promote a high morality.

But there is something higher. It is spiritual power. Ah! that is it. The foot of the ladder is on the earth, but its top is in heaven. Climb! Do you say, "It is high, I cannot attain unto it?" No, no! Read the first chapter of Acts of the Apostles. Then to your knees! Look up. Turn your back upon the bad past. Surrender utterly to God. Lose your will in His. Plead the promises. Believe, believe, believe! Claim the pentecostal gift. Receive ye the Holy Ghost!—Epworth Herald.

TAKE SHORT VIEWS.

Faith carries present loads, meets present dangers, feeds on present promises, and commits the future to a loving Heavenly Father. Take short views. Do not attempt to climb the high wall till you get to it—or fight the battle till it opens—or shed tears over sorrows that may never come. Be careful lest you lose the joys that you have by the sinful fear that God may have trials awaiting you. He promises grace sufficient for to-day—but not one ounce of strength for to-morrow. You cannot create spiritual sunshine any more than you can create the morning star; but you can put your soul where Jesus Christ is shining.—T. L. Cuyler.

STAUNTON, VA.

At a high point in the Shenandoah Valley on a number of hills, the centre institutions for female education, is the thriving busy city, with good city comforts, but without city airs. To us Presbyterians the chief interest is in the Mary Baldwin Seminary founded and fostered by that successful teacher and organizer whose name most fitly takes the place of Augusta which she called the seminary. It is doing such noble work as she planned and prepared it to do, such work as gave it worthy fame even while she lived. It is widely known by that work of years.

Next in interest are the Presbyterian churches. The two strong churches now have set out two daughters, giving four organized Presbyterian churches. The two older are ably supplied by faithful pastors and the two younger have called a pastor whose acceptance is greatly desired. This is a strong group in a Presbyterian county where are eighteen churches, and in a large district largely Presbyterian. The Presbytery is interested, and the special committee of Presbytery has acted promptly, to accept the proposition of Messrs. Davis and Elkins of liberal aid for the opening of a Presbyterial Academy at Elkins. Prof. Dinwiddie of Greenwood has been elected and has taken the place as principal of the school. He is already on the ground and is making ready to open the first week in February, 1898.

In the week's meeting just held with the pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Staunton, Rev. John M. Wells, for the deepening of the spiritual life, to enrich the spiritual experience in order to fruitfulness in life and service, the congregations grew in numbers and interest and prayerfulness. Great searchings of heart were sought, and great humility was wrought.

In all that valley no man is better known than Major Jed Hotchkiss an elder of this Second church. He was engineer on the staff first of General Lee and afterward of "Stonewall" Jackson. He is an authority on the topography, and geology, and resources of Virginia and North Carolina. He is gathering materials of war history of the Civil war with especial reference to the forthcoming life of General Jackson by Professor Henderson of the War College of England. It is worth a trip to Staunton to meet this man, not to speak of the noble men who are members with him of the strong session of the Second church. Then to walk with Major Hotchkins about Staunton and from some prominence to have him point out prominent places and explain the ridges and mountains and valleys and the formation and composition of all is added blessing. How much more to have him as fellow traveller from Staunton to Richmond and to point out places associated with the marches, maneuvers and battles of his greatly loved war General "Old Jack" as he was often called. With a running account of the war will be heard, personal reminiscences and historical facts. It may be startling to hear truthfully how at the close of the war of the Revolution Virginia sent colonists west and northwest; so that she was the mother not only in being divided into newer States, but in settling these new States largely with her own children. Then stop and wonder that in 1860, one-sixteenth of the population of the United States, every sixteenth man, was a native of Virginia, and at that time the majority of representatives in Congress were from Virginia. Then the six divisions of the State in surface and soil will be pointed out with evidences of the glaciers of long ago, and volcanic peaks and the washing down of the great mountain ranges once fifteen miles high to make rich soil all the way to the sea. There will occur the advantages of Norfolk and the Hampton Roads for increased trade and commerce. Running on you will be given by this man of vast and varied military experience unanswerable arguments against the sending of our boys to be trained in military schools. So, on and on, in the swift travel of the vestibule train of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, you will be forced to say with Dr. Cuyler after such a ride some time ago—"I never saw a road with so much on it."

Above all else the flavor of this man's life as an earnest Christian pervades all his unobtrusive and wonderful contribution to every department of sound sense and wisdom in private conversation. Commend me to Staunton, the pastor and people of the Second church with the cordial good feeling and cooperation between the pastors and people of both churches, for great pleasure.

NEARLY FIFTY years ago the writer was in the employ in different clerical positions of DeRosset & Brown, at that time the most prominent commercial house in Wilmington, and indeed, in this entire section of the State. Of this firm Dr. Armand J. DeRosset was the head. His clear vision and his sound judgment, his energy and his public-spiritedness were recognized wherever these most desirable qualities were most in demand and the banks and the railroad—at that time there was but the one—placed him high among their directors and most trusted counsellors. There was no station he was not competent to fill and no service beyond his great powers. Others have spoken of these services in detail, it is for this writer to note merely that the impressions of Dr. DeRosset's nobility of character and dignified yet affable bearing, from that day to this, have never been effaced. The writer recalls him now, as a man whose word was a synonym for truth, as a man in whose presence no act or word unbecoming a gentleman could ever be done or spoken, as one who lived as having the heritage of a most honorable lineage to maintain and transmit to those who should follow him, and withal as a man whose kindliness of heart, of which the writer had frequent tokens, was infinitely above the shadow of affectation or pretense. From those days the paths of our lives diverged and our associations were more casual and much less intimate, but the friendship and high regard of the writer for him who had so much to do in the forming of his character has never ceased.

And this brings into view how very important to a lad in his teens is the character and conduct of his employer. Where a boy or youth serves may, and in most cases will, especially if his employer is his ideal, as is generally the case—where a boy serves, usually, will determine what that boy will be in after life among his fellows. It will be well that all parents and guardians take this thought seriously to heart.

But we must not close without a reminder that Dr. DeRosset's character found its spring, as all such characters must do, in the humble acceptance and practice of the principles of the Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

IRISH HOME RULE as a principle in British politics has been relegated to the past. Most grievous crimes were perpetrated in its name; crimes that so weighted it as to cause its failure even had there been wisdom in the principle itself. But really the principle while extremely plausible, and thus far admirably adopted to the purposes of politicians, at the core was radically unsound. Mr. Gladstone's great talents and immense popularity galvanized it into life when it was almost gone, that it might restore to him the political power that had slipped from his grasp, and under his masterly management the thrifty and intelligent and most moral of the population of Ireland had well-nigh become the under-class in that country's government. Home Rule is now a thing of the past. The cry for the abolition of the House of Lords has not quite ceased, but soon it will. It has never risen to the dignity of a serious political issue. It was adopted by the party who were gathering from far and near all odds and ends to furnish planks for a platform that would catch every voter, and addresses itself solely to the prejudices of the poor as against the rich and titled; the plank is weak and soon that too must be abandoned.

The new platform of the National Liberal Federation embraces Woman Suffrage, abolition of property qualification, abolition of the House of Lords, giving salaries to members of Parliament, &c.—all ad captandum and none likely to succeed.

The truth is politicians are alike the world over. In our country all who make politics their life work are not statesmen, and a great deal of variety is developed in the construction of political platforms.

However, the Home Rule agitation was not an unmixed evil. It caused the correction of some very sore evils and resulted in some very solid good to the Irish people. Alien landlordism needed to be restricted in its privileges, and the worthy Irish poor needed the helping hand of government in removing oppression under which they labored.

Ireland now enjoys a government infinitely better than they could possess under the application of absolute home rule, and if evils yet remain they are in fair way to be corrected in the near future.

AFTER ELEVEN years of faithful and most serviceable work as Managing Editor of the Presbyterian Quarterly Rev. Dr. George Summey has transferred all the duties and interests thus pertaining to that publication into the hands of Rev. S. C. Byrd, of New Orleans. It is pleasant to know that Dr. Summey will still continue as editor of the Quarterly, which will in the future be continued on the same lines as in the past.

The reason for Dr. Summey's retirement from the management is the pressure of other duties in connection with the Chancellorship of the Southwestern Presbyterian University, which rendered it altogether desirable that he should find relief from the duties he now resigns.

In retiring Dr. Summey says: "The work has been not only one of love but one of very great pleasure to me, and not least among those things which have made it so pleasant has been the kindness constantly shown me by the editors of our Church papers, to all of whom, my most hearty thanks are due and are given."

The Church can hope for no more than that the ability with which the Review has been conducted by the retiring Manager may be continued under his successor.

DR. T. B. KINGSBURY, editor of the Wilmington Messenger was run into by a bicycle on the night of Thursday of last week and very seriously hurt. He was rendered unconscious at the time of the accident, but fortunately only temporarily so. Up to this writing Dr. Kingsbury has not been able to leave his bed, though, it affords us pleasure to state, he is improving. It will be some time before he is fully restored. We extend our hearty sympathy to our brother editor and personal friend.

WE ARE authorized, and requested, to state that the Evangelical Alliance will furnish gratuitously as many programs as may be desired to all churches that make an offering during the Week of Prayer. Requests should be sent to Secretary of the Evangelical Alliance, United Charities Building, New York.

SOMETHING OVER thirty years, it probably is now, since the Mortara case agitated the religious circles of the world. The child of Mortara, as well as we can recall, by unfair means had been taken from its parents by Roman Catholic authorities and all efforts of the father to regain possession through process of the Austrian courts proved futile. The child, before the contest for possession, had been baptized into the Romish communion, as appears below, and this was brought forward as a strong support to the claim for continued possession by the priests.

The following from a New York special to the Baltimore Sun will prove interesting:

"Rev. Dr. Eduardo Levi Mortara who for forty years has been known as the "Child of Mortara," and who, a Hebrew and when a mere child, embraced the Catholic faith, officiated at the masses in St. Peter and St. Paul's church, Williamsburg, this morning.

"Father Mortara comes from Rome, and reached the city Wednesday morning. He intends to establish missions among the poorer Italians in Greater New York.

"Probably no man has excited more controversy in Catholic ecclesiastical circles than the "Child of Mortara." When a babe, suffering from severe illness, his Catholic nurse secretly had him baptized. He recovered and the cure was pronounced a miracle. The boy when old enough elected to become a Christian despite the opposition of his Jewish parents.

The fact of his arrival in this country was known only in high ecclesiastical circles until his public appearance. Rev. Sylvester Malone, in granting the visiting priest permission to say mass in his church, followed the independent ideas which he practiced in Dr. McGlynn's case. It was intimated that Archbishop Corrigan had indirectly refused similar permission in his immediate jurisdiction, to prevent a recurrence of the discussions that have ever followed the appearance of this priest.

There is such a thing as a faulty excess of humility. If a man does not take notice of that excellency and perfection that is in himself, how can he be thankful to God who is the author of all excellency and perfection? Nay, if a man hath too mean an opinion of himself, it will render him unserviceable both to God and man.—Selected.

THE ENO CHURCH.*

To the Editor of the N. C. Presbyterian:

DEAR SIR—It has been repeatedly suggested that, owing to the advanced age of the writer, he should give from personal recollection some sketches of the origin of this old church, with something of the usages and customs of it, and the neighboring congregations (which were pretty nearly the same) in years long since past.

This old church was organized among the first in Orange Presbytery by the earliest settlers, mostly Scotch-Irish, who migrated here from Pennsylvania and New Jersey. This was called the Eno settlement; the Hawfield settlement was made about the same time, and was composed of about the same material. The two settlements were only from eight to twelve miles apart, and the people intermarried freely. The first proposal suggested for erecting a house for public worship was to unite on half-way ground and have one church for both settlements, and accordingly a site was selected on what is called the old Strudwick plantation. Finally they concluded for each settlement to erect a house where each settlement could worship under its own vine and fig tree; but they united for many years in securing pulpit ministrations and pastoral services.

The exact date when the first house of worship was built at Eno cannot now be ascertained, but it is supposed to have been in 1736 or 1737. The deed given for the ground on which it stands bears date from the ninth year of the reign of George II. The building was of logs and stood near the middle of an acre of ground. A corner-stone remains to point the spot. Buried within the the space designated and nearly filling it, are graves that contain the ashes of those sturdy pioneers who felled the forests and fought the battles of their country, and yet were not unmindful of their duties of religion.

Memory recalls in association with the early days of this church, the names of Rev. Messrs. Spencer, McWhorter, McAden, Patillo, Lake, Hodge and McGrady—men whose preaching was a terror to evil-doers.

The church took its name from a little tributary of the Neuse river, which winds near by, and, tradition says, was organized in 1756 by Rev. Messrs. Spencer and McWhorter, but the organization may have been earlier. Rev. Wm. McAden preached there at various times in 1755 on his missionary tours through the State. The first elders were Thomas Clark, John Tinnin and Carnes Tinnin.

The present house, which has frequently undergone repairs, was built in 1793 and dedicated to the service of God in the year following, at which time the Rev. James H. Bowman became pastor of Eno and Little River congregations. He continued with them twenty-one years, and during this period his labors in the ministry were blessed and many were added to these two churches. He was a man of tender sympathizing feelings and his manner of delivery mild and persuasive. Possessing more than ordinary oratorical grace and fluency of speech, yet his motto was, "A praying people make a preaching minister;" that he seemed to realize in a good degree. We have often seen grey heads bowed and the congregation deeply affected, while tears stole down the cheeks of the speaker.

The personal recollections of the writer commence with the year 1802 and with the great revival of that year. It was a time of great solemnity and the Holy Spirit was abundantly outpoured. As accords with our observation generally this revival was preceded by much wrestling in prayer. The weekly prayer-meetings were well attended. Many dated their conversion from this time and became useful members and office-bearers in the church.

It was usual in those days to hold two examinations in the congregation each year on the Westminster catechism in connection with Willison's and Fisher's catechisms. Friday preceding the communion, Sabbath, spring and fall, was observed as a day of fasting and prayer. The communion seasons were very solemn and lasted four days. On Saturday the great bake oven then used was brought into use and enough baking was done to last till the close of the meeting, so that no one was detained to cook warm dinner on Sunday. Other regulations for proper observance of the Sabbath were duly attended to.

Large crowds attended the sacramental occasions, and there was more solemnity than now-a-days.

The ruling elders in the time of Mr. Bowman were David Faucett, Thomas Bain, John McKee, Robert McKee, Eli Birdsey, James Clark and William Clark, Sr.

Rev. Mr. Bowman left these congregations in 1815 and moved to the West. He was succeeded by Rev. Samuel Paisley, who became pastor in 1816 and continued to serve in this capacity for over twenty years. He was a man of prayer, and frequently urged upon his hearers the importance of secret prayer, strengthening his injunction by citing the parable of the unjust judge and importunate widow. His labors for a number of years were blessed in a good degree.

We cannot take the time and space to follow up the record of the church. Succeeding Mr. Paisley were the three Phillips, Witherspoon, Doak, Graves, Currie, Stanfield and others. The habits and customs of the people are greatly changed since these olden times. The sanctuary was entered with reverence and vacated with becoming solemnity. The aisles of the church were cleared as soon as well could be after the benediction was pronounced. All salutatory compliments were exchanged after leaving the house.

"Thus saith the Lord, stand in the ways and see and ask for the old paths, which is the good way, and walk therein and ye shall find rest for your souls."

LAYMAN.

*The above interesting account of Eno church was written by Alex. Anderson, for a long time one of its ruling elders, and printed in the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN several years ago. New interest has been aroused in this old church of late and it will be a kindness to its many friends if you will be kind enough to reprint it in your columns.

Eno church, as the preceding sketch states, is one of the oldest churches in Orange Presbytery and therefore one of the oldest in North Carolina. It has done a noble service to the cause of Christ and has many noble names connected with its history. Among its ruling elders it has numbered such characters as Hon. Thomas Henry Hughes and his brother and distinguished teacher, Samuel W. Hughes, and its pastors since the above sketch was written have been Rev. Archibald Currie, Rev. T. U. Faucette, Rev. Jas. H. Fitzgerald, Rev. Jas. L. Currie, Rev. W. F. Wilhelm and Rev. H. S. Bradshaw, who still serves it.

But the church has been without a house of worship since 1893, the church building having been burned that year in forest fires. Like many other mother churches, Eno of late years has grown weaker than her daughters around her, and has not as yet succeeded in rebuilding. But a few months ago Rev. W. P. McCorkle and Rev. C. W. Maxwell conducted a series of services there and the people of the congregation became so interested and aroused that they decided to build again at what was decided a more suitable place than was occupied by the former building.

What a pity that such churches as this, so rich in historic interest, should wait a day without a house of worship! And what a beautiful and appropriate thing it would be if all the descendants of old Eno's former families would just come to the help of the few that remain, and speedily help furnish the funds to rebuild the church of their fathers. Will they not do so?

WHY SOME WOMEN GROW OLD.

One reason why the average woman wears out, grows old and plain, before her husband, says a writer, is that, through a mistaken idea of duty, she lays out for herself at the beginning of her married life, a scheme or plan of duty and employment for her time every hour filled with work, with rare and short periods of relaxation. This she follows religiously for years, feeling that she has done her duty, because every household event occurs regularly and on time, while she soon becomes merely a machine, a thing without life of itself or volition. She settles into her rut, and goes round and round on the same track everlastingly. No woman can keep brightness, originality of thought and speech, or even mere prettiness with such a life; nor can she keep her husband and growing children full of loving admiration, which is the strongest chain by which she can bind them to her.—Ex.

SEEING TO THINGS.

The pace that kills a business woman is the work that she does at home. Good, hard, faithful attention to business never killed anyone, man or woman. Worry and "seeing to things" idea—these are the two nails in the business woman's coffin.

The "seeing to things" idea is distinctly feminine. No man ever had it. Every woman is born with it. Men sit in the street car and watch the driver of a truck groan and tug, and try to get his wheels off the track, and not a man will move to help that driver or even sigh in sympathy. Every woman in the car is edging and peering and wishing she dared go out on the platform, and "see to that truck."

That's the thing that kills women. They try to carry the world on their shoulders, and they don't realize that the world is a great deal better off without their puny strength under it.

Business women try to do too many kinds of things. They are, most of them, "Jills of all trades."

When a business man gets up in the morning he takes his bath, goes into the dining-room and eats his breakfast, kisses his family good-bye, and goes down town to his work, like a sensible man. The business woman—do you know her? I do.

I'll tell you what the business woman does. She gets up early and goes into the children's room and fusses around for a half an hour or so. If you ask her what she is doing, she'll say she is "seeing to things."

She hires a servant—and waits upon her. She pays a dressmaker—and sits up nights studying fashion books for a new way to have a dress made. She buys a hat—and takes it home and tears it all to pieces and makes it over again. She dictates to a type-writer—and then takes the "copy" and corrects it herself. She works herself ill over something she can't do, and ought not to do, and takes a rueful pleasure in a martyred spell of illness

She worries about other people's troubles, she frets over other people's children, she almost takes medicine for other people's headaches, and she puts all her friends into nervous irritation trying to "see to them."

If the business woman is worth one-half her salary she puts all these things out of her mind at the office. —Exchange.

SYMPATHY AS A POWER.

Sympathy is a large factor in human power. It means more, as an element of strength and success, than brawn or brain, than skill or experience. Whatever one has in himself, or in these faculties and possessions, if he has the added gain of real sympathy, his power is at least doubled. "Sympathy' is the sharing of another's burdens; literally, it means "to suffer with another," but practically it means to help another in his sorrows and in his joys. Bacon says: "There is no man that imparteth his joy to his friend but he joyeth the more; and no man imparteth his griefs to his friend but he grieveth the less." Who is there who would not feel greatly helped by another who could double his joys and halve his sorrows? He who has a sympathizing friend has one who can do this for him. He who is in full sympathy with another has power to do this for that other. Many a strong man would fall and fail if it were not for sympathy. Many an efficient man is enabled to do his best work through the help of sympathy of which no one but himself knows.—Philadelphia Methodist.

The work of the American Bible Society in foreign lands during the last year involved an expenditure of $192,292.32 and the circulation of 767,528 volumes of the Holy Scriptures; of these more than half, 405,000 volumes, were distributed in China; 50,000 in Japan; 57 000 in the Levant; 60,000 in South America; 33,000 in Mexico and Central America; 32,000 in Siam and Laos; 40,000 in Russia; 20,000 in France; 12,000 in Spain and Austria; 10,000 in India; besides smaller numbers in Africa, Micronesia, Arabia and Korea. In accomplishing this great work the agents and correspondents of the society employed 382 men, each working on an average more than eight months. It is evident that the distribution of the Bible is of prime importance in all foreign missionary operations, and that the co-operation of the American Bible Society with the missionary boards entitles it to the most cordial recognition. Hence the Society will issue an appeal to pastors and others, that in the special meetings for prayer which are to be held early in January, due emphasis may be laid upon the importance of extending the circulation of the word God among all nations during the closing years of the nineteenth century, and especially in those parts of the world where the Bible is an unknown book.

New York, Monday, Dec. 13th.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT SERVICE.

In all our towns and cities this service has become an established thing. The minister and a very select remnant of the faithful from year to year gather in the middle of the week's toil and care to touch thoughts and hearts, and so with closer blended lives to press on refreshed and strengthened in the daily as well as worshipful tasks. A careful watching will soon show that nearly the same little band is composed of the same individuals week in and week out, with here and there an occasional change and rare addition. It is doubtful if this company will average one-tenth of the regular communion list in each congregation. Now, it is true that many people are so situated as not to be able to come out at night in the middle of the week; but it is also true that the same people through all the years of a long and busy life, filled with as much care and toil as the stay at home brigade's, do regularly make time to come, and come.

The truth is, that this thing is not so much a matter of time as a habit deep-rooted in principle. This little select band have for the most part carefully weighed this subject and made up their minds that it is their duty to attend Wednesday night services, and if it is their duty it certainly pays. Duty always pays in the long run. Having thus decided, it soon becomes a pleasure, and having given it a place among life's duties, there is only the necessary division of other duties and pleasures to carry out their determination.

What is greatly needed is power to show the rest of the communicants that they are losing many blessings and wasting opportunities of becoming stronger and stronger by their neglect. After thirty years careful watching one affirms that this Wednesday night service is one of the most helpful and encouraging of all church services. Hearts get closer and soul food seems more directly given and gladly received.—Exchange.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

Queen Victoria is sometimes accused of being entirely destitute of the sense of humor, and it has been said that she is rarely seen to smile. Those who have the honor of a personal acquaintance with the Queen deny both charges, and Emily Crawford, in her delightful paper in the Contemporary Review, presents her as possessing a keen appreciation of humor. It is pleasant to know that she has especial liking for Mr. Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland," and when this fascinating book appeared she ordered copies of all his works. She is said to have been much astonished when the collection arrived, no amusing examples of imagination like "Alice in Wonderland," but a thick parcel of mathematical text books, the author being, in reality, the Rev. Charles Dodgsen, lecturer in mathematics at Christ church, Oxford. The two volumes that have made him more widely famous than any of his mathematical works, were undertaken in his leisure hours, purely as relaxation and for his own personal amusement.—Interior.

An interesting exhibit of book plates was recently made at the rooms of the Baltimore Achitectural Club. The plates which were made to line the walls for the convenient inspection of the visitors, were from the valuable collection of Mr. Howard Sill.

Book plates, it may be well to tell the uninitiated, are engravings or prints made for families possessing libraries, copies of the plate being pasted in each book in lieu of inscribing the name of the owner. They are traced back to 1,400, the earliest extant specimens being German of the fifteenth century or the early part of the sixteenth. One of these is the plate engraved by Albert Duer for Dr. Pirckheimer, a German gentleman. This was in 1524.

One of the earliest English specimens is that of Sir Nicholas Bacon, father of Sir Francis Bacon, in 1574. The earliest French book plate is dated 1574 also, and it is that of a Catholic Archbishop.

Not until the seventeenth or the eighteenth century were these plates generally used, and then they were usually fitted with the crest of the family represented. In the eighteenth century many artists of note devoted their time to engraving and much of their handiwork was included in the collection shown last night by Mr. Sill. Among these were Faithorne, White, George Virtue, Bartollozzi and Bewick, who engraved on wood.

Many of the book plates of American families were engraved in England, but later there was developed a company of native engravers, whose work is among the most interesting in Mr. Sill's collection. There was, for instance, Thomas Johnston, 1708; Nathaniel Hurd, 1720; Dawkins and Paul Revere. This is the Paul Revere of history, who figured in Longfellow's poem on the night when "the fate of the nation was riding." He was a silversmith, but he was also an engraver. There are known to be six book plates which he engraved, and two of these are in Mr. Sill's collection. They are those of David Green and Gardiner Chandler.

Among the plates of Americans on exhibition were those of William Byrd, of Westover; John Randolph, of Roanoke; William Stith, one of the presidents of William and Mary College; Richard Bennett Lloyd, of Wye House; Charles Carroll of Carrollton, and Samuel Chase, the last two being signers of the Declaration of Independence.—Baltimore Sun.

On Thanksgiving eve the pastor's family received a generous pounding at the hands of the kind people of the church. They swooped down on him all unexpectedly, like the thief in the night, but unlike the thief, they went away with much less than they came. As they have been good to us, so may the Giver of All Good be good to them, blessing them with all spiritual and material good. D. J. C.

Barium Springs:—Maxton and Center churches have furnished a room in Rumple Hall.

Evangelistic Notes:—Rev. E. E. Gillespie writes of the favorable progress of the work entrusted to himself and Rev. J. A. Grey, in the northwestern part of the State. Three members were recently received on profession of faith, the first fruits of their labors. The building of the First Presbyterian church in Ashe county was begun this week.

Rev. E. Mac Davis was ordained an evangelist at a called meeting of Asheville Presbytery last month. The first Sunday in this month in company with Rev. H. M. Parker he visited Barnardsville in Buncombe county and received four adults into the church. There are forty-five petitioners for a church at Barnardsville, and Mr. Davis will preach there once a month.

Fayetteville:—Sunday last was an important day in the history of Fayetteville church. At the morning service the retiring pastor presented the cause of Synodical Missions to his people and they subscribed $160 for the year. Immediately after the sermon the congregation met according to the call of the session to consider the question of calling a pastor. The congregation voted to elect by ballot without nomination. Rev. H. T. Graham received 148 out of the 149 votes cast, and the officers of the church were instructed to sign the call in behalf of the congregation.

Says the Fayetteville Observer: "The Presbyterian church of Fayetteville has paid its able and popular assistant pastor the great compliment of unanimously calling him to fill the important pastorship made vacant by the resignation of Rev. A. J. McKelway. Since his short stay here Mr. Graham has made friends of not only his own, but of all the denominations, and news of his preferment will be received with pleasure by everyone."

At the same meeting it was resolved to secure another man for the mission points now under the care of Fayetteville church, Green Hill, Bulleville, Campbellton, McLean's and Comfort Chapel, in connection with the organized churches of Hope Mills and Sherwood. A salary of $700 is in sight for this work and the selection of a suitable man was entrusted to the session. Thus it is earnestly hoped that the cause of Christ and of Presbyterianism in this community will be greatly advanced.

There were three additions to the church on Sunday morning by letter and one at McLean's in the afternoon on profession of faith. At Comfort chapel at night the congregation filled the house and a good subscription was raised for the salary of the assistant pastor.

A. J. McKELWAY.

Rocky Mount:—The ladies of this church have painted and papered the interior. They will now make reprisals on the men's pockets and carpet it, improve the seats and probably paper the windows. After which the exterior will be painted, and we will have a new church.

Jonesboro:—On last Friday we closed a protracted meeting at this church. Rev. K. A. McLeod, pastor, was assisted by the Rev. Chas. H. Dobbs, Jr., of Carthathe. Bro. Dobbs did all the preaching after Sunday. His sermons were good and very much enjoyed. As a result there was a revival within the church, and several made profession of their faith in Christ.

St. Andrews:—We have recently enjoyed a precious out-pouring of the Holy Spirit at this church. Rev. K. A. McLeod was ably assisted by Revs. M. D. McNeill of Sanford and Graham Bethea of Burlington Backsliders were reclaimed and a large number made profession of their faith in Christ. There were eighteen additions to the church. Last Sabbath Messrs. A. G. Thomas and D. F. Pierce were ordained as elders and Charles Thomas and Graham McIntosh as deacons.

Mt. Pisgah;—Rev. K. A. McLeod, pastor, has just closed a protracted meeting at this church. As a result of this meeting many who had wandered away from God returned and thirty-eight professed faith in Christ, the majority of this number, if not all of them, will connect themselves with our church. We give all the praise to God.

First Church, Winston:—We have just returned to our renovated sanctuary after a three months occupancy of the Armory. The interior of the building is entirely transformed both in arrangement and appearance, the walls have been handsomely decorated and a new carpet covers the floor. The organ is now behind the pulpit and the former choir loft has been converted into a spacious infant class room with panel slides opening into the main auditorium. It is now one of the most beautiful churches in the South. X X X.

Charlotte items:

First Church:—You may be interested in the fact that the dues and thank-offering at the last meeting of Ladies' Foreign Missionary Society of the First church resulted in something over a hundred dollars. The treasurer made a review of the last ten years and showed from her books that $6,000 had passed through her hands to the mission cause.

Just now the First church from the little boys and girls to the most aged members, are personally and enthusiastically interested in packing a box for a home missionary in one of our mountain counties. If the love and gladness and eagerness and interest put in that box had earthly weight, no railroad could undertake to freight it.

On last Sunday night the three newly elected elders of this church were ordained and installed.

Westminster Church:—At a congregational meeting held after morning service on last Sunday Rev. James A. Dorritee was unanimously called to the pastorate. Rev. W. A. Wynne moderated the meeting.

VIRGINIA.

Norfolk, Second Church:—Twenty two persons were received in the church on Sunday, the 5th, Rev. Dr. Lacy, pastor.

Portsmouth:—Fifteen have recently been received into this church by letter Rev. R. B. Eggleston, pastor.

Alexandria:—Two other members were received into the church Sunday, Dec. 12th. Rev. J. Ernest Thacker, pastor.

GEORGIA.

Albany:—Rev. H. T. Darnall has entered upon his duties here and reports a most welcome reception among this warm hearted people. Mr. Darnall also serves the church at Camilla, some twenty-five miles below Albany.

CALLED MEETING OF ORANGE PRESBYTERY.

A called meeting of Orange Presbytery was held in the First Presbyterian church, Greensboro, N. C., on December 2d, 1897.

Eight ministers and two elders were present. The pastoral relation existing between Rev. W. Lee Harrell and the High Point church was dissolved, to take effect January 1st, 1898, and Bro. Harrell was granted a certificate of dismission to unite with the Presbytery of Athens, Ga.

This action was taken after hearing all the parties concerned, but with great reluctance on the part of both the Presbytery and the High Point church; and the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That it is with reluctance that we dissolve the pastoral relation between Rev. W. L. Harrell and the High Point church. During his three years residence among us, we have come to appreciate Bro. Harrell as an earnest enthusiastic and successful pastor, a faithful and loyal Presbyter, and an exemplary Christian. We value his work among us, and pray that the seed he has diligently sown may continue to bring forth fruit after many days. We commend him to the Presbytery of Athens to which we now, at his own request dismiss him as a brother beloved, praying the great Head of the Church to abundantly bless his labors in the Gospel.

Rev. C. W. Maxwell, at his own request, was granted a certificate of dismission to unite with the Presbytery of Norfolk, Va.

Bro. Maxwell has been engaged for sometime in mission work in connection with the church at Durham, N. C., and the session of the Durham church presented through Dr. Turnbull the following paper which was adopted and ordered to be spread on the minutes of Presbytery:

"In parting with our brother in Christ and fellow-laborer in the Gospel, the Rev. C. W. Maxwell, we the session of Durham church, wish to express our appreciation of and record due testimony to him as an earnest, faithful and humble servant of the Master. He has gone in and out among us for sixteen months, walking closely in the footsteps of Christ—'going about doing good.' He has by his thoughtful self-denying labors and kind attentions greatly endeared himself to the people of God, especially to the Lord's heritage—'the humble poor.' We commend him to God and to the Word of his grace, praying the Lord to continue to use him and to crown his faithful labors with the grace and power of the Holy Ghost."

Rev. Joseph Evans was elected to succeed Rev. C. W. Maxwell as Agent of Publication and Colportage until the spring meeting of Presbytery.

The prescribed business being finished, and all other formal action being barred, nevertheless most tender and feeling remarks were made by the brethren in reference to the recent removal of Dr. J. Henry Smith and his entrance upon his eternal reward.

THE MOST POPULAR ENGLISH-AMERICAN HYMN.

There are some questions which are useful enough as stimulants to interesting discussion, but which can never be conclusively answered. Such a question is that which the famous English editor, Mr. William T. Stead, has been writing a book about—What are the hymns that have most influenced and helped mankind?

To solve this riddle Mr. Stead has been asking large numbers of eminent men and women to name their favorite hymn and give him their opinions as to the extent of its helpfulness to humanity The result is an entertaining book on the subject, judging from extracts which appear in the current McClure's Magazine. He gives high rank to Luther's hymn. "A Sure Stronghold Our God Is He," as a force on the building of German national character. The hymn was called by Heinrich Heine, "The Marseillaise of the Reformation," but it can hardly be said to have a popular vogue to-day, certainly not outside of Germany. The battle hymn composed by the valiant Gustavus Adolphus is in the same category of religious songs that have steadied the souls of fighting men in an age that is past but are to-day only a far-off memory.

Hymn-writing was a favorite occupation of royal pens in the middle ages. It was Robert II, King of France, and son of Hugh Capet, who wrote in Latin one of the favorite hymns of our day, the translation of which in "Hymns Ancient and Modern begins with the line "Come, Holy Spirit, Come." The authorship of this celebrated "Veni, Sancte Spiritus," still sung in thousands of both Catholic and Protestant churches, has been sometimes claimed for Pope Innocent III, and again for Stephen Langton, one time Archbishop of Canterbury. Scholarly research, however, has given its verdict that King Robert II, who died in 1031, was its real author, and this gives him the distinction of having written a hymn which, after nine centuries, is still in general use in church worship.

The great Emperor Charlemagne is credited with the authorship of the celebrated "Veni, Creator Spiritus," of which Dryden's English translation is familiar, beginning:

"Creator Spirit, by whose aid
The world's foudations first were laid."

This majestic hymn has been in use for ages on great public occasions, such as crowning of kings and the assembling of great religious conclaves. But Charlemagne's authorship is disputed. Some say it is as old as the time of Ambrose of Milan. Farther back yet in the misty morning of civilization a hymn was written in the monastery of Mar Saba, in the valley of the Kedron, which is still sung in our American Episcopal churches, and in others, too, every Sunday in the year. It was written in the eighth century by a monk named Stephen, and Dr. Neale's version of it begins with the familiar words: "Art thou weary, art thou languid, art thou sore distressed?"

Some years ago the English magazine Sunday at Home collected the sentiment of its readers as to their favorite hymns and reported that the majority favored "Rock of Ages," while its nearest rivals in popularity were "Abide with Me" and "Jesus, Lover of My Soul." There is no doubt of the immense favor of "Rock of Ages" among English speaking religious people. Toplady, a Calvinistic vicar of an English parish, wrote it for the purpose of assailing John Wesley's doctrine of "entire sanctification," but he died without having the slightest idea that it was destined to immortality. The late Prince Consort asked to hear it in his dying hour. Mr. Gladstone has translated it into Latin, Greek and Italian. Dr. Pusey pronounced it "the most deservedly popular hymn." The poor Armenians sang it while they were being slaughtered in last year's fearful massacres. General Stuart, the Confederate calvary leader, sang it with almost his latest breath. When the London went down in the Bay of Biscay, January 11th, 1866, the last thing heard by the last boatload of the saved who left the ship's side was the voices of the passengers singing "Rock of Ages." Mr. Stead concludes, therefore, that no other English hymn "has laid so broad and firm a grasp on the English speaking world."

This may be true, but it is really impossible to decide. The popularity of a hymn may be greater on peculiarly solemn occasions, such as the sinking of a passenger ship, and yet, taking all occasions, it may be no more a favorite than some others. It may be well doubted if among modern hymns Newman's famous "Lead Kindly Light," is not first, and it is certainly one of the two or three first in the general esteem of all Christian people who speak English. At the great Chicago Congress of Religions, every creed being represented, this singularly beautiful hymn was found to be the one they could all sing together. And there are many others which would need to be considered in any fair enumeration of the hymns that have most powerfully swayed the English and American peoples.

Grand old Bishop Ken's morning and evening hymns, for example, have probably been sung, and are still being sung, to the tune of "OldHundred" by as many, perhaps by more, voices all the year round than "Rock of Ages." If the words of the doxology, "Praise God, from Whom all blessings flow," &c., are not the most familiar to the ears of English-speaking church-goers, they must come very near it. And what of "Coronation," and what, too, of the splendid "Adeste Fidcles" of the Catholic hymnal, and its Protestant counterpart, "O, Come All Ye Faithful," which at every Christmas time fills all the churches of Christendom with its triumphant strains? On the whole we suspect Mr. Stead has awarded the first place among popular hymns too hastily. —Baltimore Sun.

A WIFE'S BEST WEAPON.

"Woman's best weapon is her tongue," says an old philosopher. Not at all, writes a preacher. She has a far better one, and the wisest woman is she who, in wifehood, has learned to use it.

That weapon is a sweet temper. It is wonderful how it takes all the flavor out of a quarrel if a wife is too sweet-tempered to answer back. Man is an aggressive creature—a fighting animal by instinct. Some men carry it so far that they are not happy unless they are sparring; and when there is nobody else to attack, the wife of one's bosom always comes in remarkably handy. But the most pugilistic of men tires in time of sparring with a feather bed; there's neither amusement nor satisfaction to be got out of it, and the wife with a sweet temper that nothing can provoke is a feather bed of the most exhausting kind ever invented.

You come down to breakfast rather late, rather cold, very cross. You have cut yourself in shaving, you have lost a button off your shirt, you are aware it is entirely your own fault, that you have only ten minutes in which to breakfast, and the simplest solution is to vent it all on somebody. There is your wife, ready to your hand. Why was the holy estate of matrimony invented, if not to supply safety valve for husbands' tempers? You snort at the coffee, and say it is weak; with a sympathetic murmur your wife sends it out to have fresh made. The bacon is overdone; she will see that it does not happen again. The paper hasn't come; to be sure it hasn't. She will go herself this very morning and remonstrate with the news-agent.

Or you have had a particularly annoying day at business. Somebody has tried to get the better of you, and, perhaps, has been successful—a most unpleasant thing to any man of well-regulated mind. You come home bristling, mentally, like the fretful porcupine, and yearning—yes, positively yearning—for some one to offer you a chance of letting out at them.

You growl at the partner of your joys and sorrows when she meets you at the front door. She doesn't take any notice; she only helps you off with your coat and hangs it up for you. You snap at her twice before you get upstairs. She merely looks at you with angelic compassion, and tenderly says, "Poor fellow; you're tired, and you've had a bad day!"

I can tell you what, that kind of treatment takes the spirit out of a man, and cowes him half to death. If women only understood what a shield and double armour-plating it is, as well as a spear and a goad, we should have more sweet-tempered wives than are at present in existence.—Scottish American.

THE FALLS OF CHRISTIANS.

"Take up the stumbling-block out of the way," lest ye cause another to stumble and fall. Oh, the falls of Christians, what grievous stumbling-blocks they are! One falling Christian does more mischief than a hundred standing ones. Thre are a hundred rivers flowing on noiselessly, and no ones hears them; but there is one waterfall, the report of which exceeds the sound of all the flowing streams. A Christian professor, who turns from the way of righteousness, and falls into sin, does very much mischief, and brings great dishonor upon the cause of Christ. Surely, it is the Christian's duty to be circumspect in his walk, that he may not cast this stumbling-block across his brother's path. If there be anything we are doing that might lead others to sin, let us be swift to abandon it; let us not place any stumbling-block of temptation in the way of others, let us not make ourselves responsible for the consequences of sin in others by leading them into it through our example' "Abstain from all appearance of evil," is the inspired command of Scripture.—Selected.

TONIC FOR THE TIRED.

Watch the faces as they go by you on a crowded street, and just notice what a tired look many of them wear. If we could read all the hearts around us, we would find multitudes who are weary in spirit, and sometimes sigh for a pillow in the grave. Some are tired out with life's hard struggles—with bearing the heat and burden of the day. Others persist in piling up anxieties as high as an old-fashion peddler's pack. They carry a huge load of care as to how they shall make both ends meet, and how they shall foot the bills which accumulate, and how they shall provide for all the hungry mouths and scanty wardrobes. One is tired from trying to do too much, and another of waiting for something to do. A grievous burden of spiritual despondency makes Brother Smallfaith's heart ache, and puts an extra wrinkle on Sister Weakback's countenance. Here is a disciple who is tired of waiting for success, and there is another who is tired of waiting for answers to prayer.

Do you suppose that the dear Master does not see all these tired bodies, and exhausted nerves, and weary hearts? To those who are honestly run down with honest toil, he says: "Come ye apart into a quiet place, and rest awhile." God puts a night of sleep after every day of work for this purpose of recruiting lost force. To Christians with small purses, he kindly says: "Your life consisteth not in the abundance of the things ye possess. I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich. My grace is sufficient for thee; at my right hand are treasures forevermore." There is not really money enough in this land to give everybody a fortune! but there are promises enough in the Bible and grace enough in Christ Jesus to make everybody rich to all eternity. Just think what a millionaire a man is who has a clean conscience here and a hope of heaven hereafter. To poor Brother Smallfaith and sorrowful Mrs. Weakback, he gives a wonderful lift in these words: "Lo, I am with you alway. No man shall pluck you out of my hands. It is my Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."—Dr. T. L.Cuyler.

"BEFORE HONOR IS HUMILITY."

Look at the corn in the field; it holds its head erect while it is green, but when the ear is filled and matured it hangs its head in graceful humblenesss. Look at your fruit trees; how their blossoming branches shoot up toward the sky, but when they begin to be loaded with fruit, since the riper the fruit the greater its weight, the branch begins to bow, until it needs oftentimes to be propped up, and to be supported lest it break away from the stem. Weight comes with maturity; lowliness of mind is the inevitable consequence. Growing Christians think themselves nothing; full-grown Christians know that they are less than nothing. The nearer we are to heaven in point of sanctification, the more we mourn our infirmities and the humbler is our estimate. Lightly-laden vessels float high in the water; heavy cargo sinks in the bark to the water's edge. The more grace, the more the need of grace is felt. He may boast of his grace who has none; he may talk much of his grace who has little; but he who is rich in grace cries out for more, and forgets that which is behind. When a man's inward life bows like a river, he thinks only of the source, and cries before his God, "All my fresh springs are in thee." He who abounds in holiness feels more than ever that in him—that is, in his flesh—there dwelleth no good thing. Thou art not ripened, my brother, whilst thou hast a high esteem of thyself. He who glories in himself is but a babe in Christ, if indeed he be in Christ at all. When thou shalt see death written on the creature, and see all thy life in Christ; when thou shalt perceive even the holy things to have iniquity in them, and see all thy perfectness in Him who is altogether lovely; when thou shalt lie prostrate at the foot of the throne, and only rise to sit and reign in him who is thine all—then art thou ripening, but not till then—C. H. Spurgeon.

THE HUMAN-HEARTEDNESS OF JESUS.

"Millais, the great artist, when he was a young man, painted a novel picture of Jesus. He represented him as a little boy in the home in Nazareth. He has cut his finger on some carpenter's tool, and comes to his mother to have it bound up. The picture is really one of the truest of all the many pictures of Jesus, because it depicts just such a scene as ofttimes may have been witnessed in his youth. Evidently there was nothing in his life in Nazareth that drew the attention of his companions and neighbors to him in any striking way. We know that he wrought no miracles until after he had entered upon his public ministry. We can think of him as living a life of unselfishness and kindness. There was never any sin or fault in him; he always kept the law of God perfectly. But his perfection was not something startling. There was no halo about his head, no transfiguration, that awed men. We are told that he grew in favor with men as well as with God. His religion made his life beautiful and winning, but always so simple and natural that it drew no unusual attention to itself. It was richly and ideally human.—The Holland Reminder.

DO THE WORK NEAREST YOU.

The great majority of people will find the work of life near at hand. It may be, perhaps, to correct the faults in one's self, to sweeten the atmosphere of home, to bless the local church, to consecrate one's business, or to purify the political atmosphere. Trite and true as is this statement, it is a difficult one to apprehend. If we set ourselves to master it, the task is soon abandoned, and we are looking far away for some other and greater work to do. The most successful and useful minister is the man whose labors are confined strictly to the cultivation of the one vineyard committed to his care. The minister's best helper is that member of his church who finds duty nearest at hand, and can always be relied upon to sustain the home church in its regular, constituted work.—Zion's Herald.

THE SEA OF MERCY.

You see the Thames as it goes sluggishly down to the arches, carrying with it endless impurity and corruption. You watch the inky stream as it pours along day and night, and you think it will pollute the world. But you have just been down to the seashore, and you have looked on the great deep, and it has not left a stain on the Atlantic. No, it has been running down a good many years, and carried a world of impurity with it, but when you go to the Atlantic there is not a speck on it. As to the ocean, it knows nothing about it. It is full of majestic music. So the smoke of London goes up, and has been going up for a thousand years. One would have thought that it would have spoiled the scenery by now; but you get a look at it sometimes. There is the great blue sky which has swallowed up the smoke and gloom of a thousand years, and its azure splendor is unspoiled. It is wonderful how the ocean has kept its purity, and how the sky has taken the breath of the millions and the smoke of the furnaces, and yet is as pure as the day God made it. It is beautiful to think that these are only images of God's great pity for the race. Our sins, they are like the Thames; but, mind you, they shall be swallowed up—lost in the depths of the sea, to be remembered against us no more. Though our sins have been going up to heaven through the generations—yet, though thy sins are as crimson, they shall be as wool, as white as snow.—The Methodist.

The are two ways of being happy—we may either diminish our wants or augment our means—either will do—the result is the same; and it is for each man to decide and do that which happens to be the easier. If you are idle, or sick, or poor, however hard it may be to diminish your wants, it will be harder to augment your means. If you are active and prosperous, or in good health, it may be easier for you to augment your means than to diminish your wants. But if you are wise, you will do both at the same time, young or old, rich or poor, sick or well; and if you are very wise, you will do both in such a way as to augment the general happiness of society.—Benjamin Franklin.

Give me a character on which we can thoroughly depend, which we are sure will not fail us in time of need, which we know to be based on principle and on the fear of God, and it is wonderful now many brilliant and popular and splendid qualities we can safely and gladly dispense with—Dean Stanley.

The only perfect affinity of the soul is Jesus Christ. In every other friend there is a lack or blemish; in him we find entire understanding, complete sympathy, and absolute worthiness. No other heart meets the needs of the human heart like the broken heart of Calvary. Golden Rule.

Every kindness done to others is a step nearer to the life of Christ. Dean Stanley.

CONDUCTED BY REV. A. D. McCLURE.

Fourth Quarter—Lesson XIII.

Dec. 26th, 1897.—Acts xxi-xxviii.

Subject.—Review of the Quarter.

Golden Text. "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life." John iii: 16.

CATECHISM.

Question 72. What is forbidden in the seventh commandment?

Answer. The seventh commandment forbiddeth all unchaste thoughts, words and actions.

INTRODUCTORY.

The golden text covers the whole ground of the lessons of this quarterand will give the teachers truth not only for the classes and the hour in the Sabbath-school, but for time and eternity. This text has shown multitudes the greatness, and the grace, and the Gift of God's love. In heathen darkness this text has led sinners to Jesus the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world without preacher or sermon or sacrament. It is the whole Gospel in a few words. We can meditate on its great message, on the great love of God that provided the Saviour of that message,on the great Saviour the Son of God whose grace brought salvation, on the great salvation which He brought, and on the great work of the Holy Spirit who makes that salvation known to sinners and effectual in them, and the great privilege of telling this truth to a lost world.

LESSON NOTES.

The lesson of this quarter brings prominently forward the later life, labors and imprisonment of the apostle Paul, the great apostle to the Gentiles. If any teacher choose, this gives a good opportunity to study his life as a whole. He was born at Tarsus and taught there until old enough to go up to the holy city Jerusalem to be tanght at the feet of the great master Gamaliel. From that teaching He returned to his native city and probably continued his studies in the great universities which ranked with those of Alexandria and Athens. He was again at Jerusalem at the martyrdom and received impressions in his after life as a Christian minister. He had such social standing and so great learning that he might have been one of the great teachers of his time. He was probably trained and taught with a view to his becoming a rabbi. He might have been a member of the great religious senate of his people, the Sanhedrin. But all these things he counted loss for Christ saying: "I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord, for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung that I may win Christ and be found in Him." The life of Paul from the day of his conversion is more distinctly and fully given than of any other in the New Testament. Even Peter who is counted the chief of the apostles falls into the background as the writings and works of Paul become prominent and important. This puts a quietus upon the claims of the Papacy. After Paul the selection of a lesson from the writings of the apostle Peter gives an opportunity to study his life. He was a successful and well-to-do fisherman on the sea of Tiberias, a Lake of Galilee, when its waters were full of fish, when a fleet of full five hundred boats were on the Lake and cities and villages with busy, active life, were all around the shores of the Lake. Andrew "first found his own brother Simon and brought him to Jesus on that memorable day when John Baptist pointed to Jesus of Nazareth, as the Messiah, "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world," and John and Andrew and Simon became disciples of Jesus. They returned to their fishing and left all to follow Jesus when they had taken the great catch of fish and their nets were beginning to break. It is worthy of remark that Peter left all to follow Christ at the point of greatest worldly achievement and success—when they had taken the multitude of fish—Peter's call to be an apostle was with the other eleven.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

There are three biographies given at some length in the New Testament.

1. The life of Christ.

2. The life of Peter who gives way to Paul in the Church of the Gentiles—great only after Pentecost.

3. The life of Paul great in surrender to Jesus as Lord.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Dec. 26th, 1897.

CHRISTMAS.

Text for the week:

"Behold I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people. Luke 2: 10.

Daily Readings:

Monday, His Name, Jesus, Luke 1: 26-38.

Tuesday, The Magnificat, Luke 1: 46-55.

Wednesday, The Manger, Luke 2: 1-7.

Thursday, The Angels' Song, Luke 2: 8-20.

Friday, Light and Glory, Luke 2: 22-32.

Saturday, The Wise Men, Matt. 2: 1-12.

Sunday, Topic—What message did Christmas bring you? Isa. 53: 1-12.

Notes:

As these words in all probability will be the last the present writer will lay before the readers of this column they will be devoted to sending farewell messages to those who may have followed him during the months that have passed. The messages, it is his prayer, may bring forth in the hearts of those to whom they go the peaceable fruits of righteousness, and so they must regard the spiritual condition of those to whom they are dir. cted.

Are you saved? If not you are lost, a sinner nnreconciled to God and utterly without hope in His mercy. And this is the message: "Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners"—even the chief. "He is able to save to the uttermost all that come unto God by Him." Come now; for to-morrow may be too late. "Believer on the Lord Jesns Christ and thou shalt be saved."

Perhaps you have accepted the Lord Jesus Christ, as He is offered in the Gospel. Then you are saved. Bnt alas, all who are saved do not advance in the Christian life—too many are content to live on a plane, scarcely distinguished from the world around them—they never know they are saved, if indeed they truly have entered the fold of safety—they cannot do more than entertain a hope, a very faint hope, that they will not be found wanting in the great day of assize. How pitiable! But perhaps yon do at times have the sure evidence of acceptance and yet your life is not one of peace and joy in the Holy Ghost. Perhaps yon earnestly try to fulfill a set of prescribed duties, you read your Bible regularly, yon say your prayers at stated, and not infrequent, times, you do works of charity, and perform other religious duties systematically and yet yon do not find peace.

Perhaps, you believe in Christ, you would not for a thousand worlds part with your hope that all will be well with you when Christ shall summon you hence, but the cares and anxieties and troubles of life weigh with leaden weight upon you and the promises seem so very far off.

Now here is the message for the worldly-minded and those who are striving by legal measures and practices, and those who cannot feel that God means His promises for them.

Abandon all worldliness and everything that can come between you and God. Life is a serious thing. Eternity depends upon it. Forego all self reliance and all efforts to save yourselves. Trust God as the child would trust its father and more—infinitely more—as God is greater than any earthly parent, and as God has said it—and it is impossible for God to lie—trust Him to perform.

Surrender yourselves one and all to be possessed and ruled and guided and controlled by the Holy Spirit—that so you may glorify God in your bodies and in your spirits which are His. Absolutely surrender your lives into God's hands to work His holy will in and through you, by the Spirit of Christ Jesus perfecting you for His glory.

This is our farewell message to the readers of the Young People's Column.

Having lost a beloved wife and child, in delicate health for years, a great sufferer during his last illness, all this was endured without a murmur and when the end came without a fear he fell asleep in Jesus. "Let me die the death of the righteous."

An ear for every call,

And heaven to crown it all."

In Memoriam.

MRS. PAULINE McALPINE DuBOSE LITTLE.

BY REV. JOHN W. DAVIS, D. D.

After a brief illness of two days Mrs. Pauline McAlpine DuBose Little, of Kiang-yin, in Kiangsu province, died at Karuizawa, Japan, on July 25th, 1897. Her parents had lost their first-born, and when little Pauline came to fill their empty arms, heart-ache found relief in lavishing upon her a love peculiarly tender and rich. To this her heart responded as a plant to sun and shower, and when a sister and younger brothers were added to the family circle her spirit warmed and glowed as a flower increases in beauty and perfume. Year by year she became more and more gentle, unselfish, helpful.

In her blood there were mingled strains that flowed on one side from the Huguenots and on the other from the Scotch. The result was a rare combination which united together a loving heart, a sunny temper, a vigorous mind and a clear conscience. All this was developed in the wholesome atmosphere of a Christian home. A great stimulus to growth was found in the influence of Miss Anna Safford. Between her and Pauline there was a strong and tender love. Miss Safford had an acute intellect, a warm heart and a soul chastened by deep religious experience. Her character was gold seven times refined. She was in the full maturity of her powers, and as a full-flowing fountain ponrs forth its sparkling waters there welled up from the depths of her generous nature stimulating influences that richly blessed the soul of the little girl who looked up to her with boundless faith and love. The happy home where her education was begun, under the guidance of her parents, was near the Methodist Mission school, where Rev. A. P. Parker, D. D., then in Soochow, now President of the Anglo-Chinese College, Shanghai, had a fine apparatus—chemical, philosophical and astronomical. At such times as his other duties would permit he gave to her and her sister regular instruction. When the time came to send them to America they had laid a strong and solid basis on which to build their education. Anxious to have his daughters enjoy the highest advantages Dr. DuBose placed them at the Female Seminary in Staunton, Virginia, which, under the management of Miss Baldwin, had obtained wide fame. Here Miss Pauline spent several years and fully completed the prescribed course of study. Her faithfulness and diligence won from teachers and fellow-students the highest encomiums. Whenever her name was mentioned it was cum summa laude. Their respect for her as a student was heightened by their confidence in her piety.

Her religions experience was a healthy natural steady growth. When about thirteen years old she, in the course of a long interview with the writer of these lines, expressed her faith in God's truth and her desire to be used in the service of the Saviour, and was received into the communion of the Church. Early in her course as a student in America she united with the Presbyterian Church in Staunton. By devotion to duty, by gentleness and sympathy, by an active part in the students' prayer-meetings, and by her steadfast purpose to return to China as a missionary, she exerted a deep influence for good upon her fellow-pupils.

On a bright day in September, 1895, she was welcomed to China by the Southern Presbyterian Mission, who heartily joined in the warm greetings with which her parents received their long absent daughter. Diligence in study and the memory of the Chinese language, which she had spoken fluently in childhood, soon gave her ease in conversing with the natives, and in a few months she was busily engaged in day-schools and prayer-meetings conducted jointly by her and Miss Fleming. The circle of friends who knew her then will long remember the evening entertainments enjoyed at Dr. DuBose's house. By excellent music on the piano, by skilfully drawing out and using the services of others in giving songs and recitations, by an indescribable charm resulting from a rare union of good nature, good breeding and good sense she tried to make her guests happy, and succeeded.

In June, 1896, she was married to Rev. Lacy L. Little, of North Carolina, a missionary of the Southern Presbyterian Church. His station was at Kiang-yin, where a riot had been caused by the diabolical and successful plan of secretly burying a child on the mission premises, and then openly digging it up and exhibiting it to an infuriated mob. Mrs. Little with a courage that shrank from no hardship, did not hesitate to go there and begin her work among the people who so recently tore up the mission premises and with bloodthirsty fury pursued Mr. Little and Mr. Haden till they found refuge in the camp of the garrison of Kiang-yin.

In order to gain strength for future work Mr. and Mrs. Little were spending a few weeks in Karuizawa, Japan. It was there that the messenger found her and called her to a higher sphere of duty. On Friday she was apparently well, bright, happy. Before the end of the Sabbath she had entered upon the rest that remaineth for the people of God. Say not that she is dead. To such as she was and is,

"There is no death, the stars go down,
To rise upon some fairer shore,
And bright in heaven's jewelled crown,
They shine for evermore."

The above tribute appeared in the Chinese Recorder, October, 1897.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8th, 1897.

Peace was the keynote of President McKinley's message to Congress. Fortunately for the country this is not a new attitude for a President of the United States to occupy; it has with few exceptions been the attitude of all our Presidents. The specific langnage of Mr. McKinley on the subject of international arbitration was not needed to proclaim him a friend of that method of selling disputes, bnt it is so creditable to him that it is herewith qnoted: "The best sentiment of the civilized world is moving towards the settlement of differences between nations without resorting to the horrors of war. Treaties embodying these humane principles on broad lines without in any way imperilling our interests or our honor shall have my constant encouragement."

Those who have regarded the spread of lottery ideas in business, especially in those lines of business which depend largely upon some method of advertising to secure customers, with alarm, not only because of the apparent swindling nature of most of the schemes set before the public, in advertisements especially prepared to catch the thoughtless and ignorant class, which seems ever ready to believe in the honesty of offers to give something worth many dollars for a few cents, but because of their knowledge that those who participate in lotteries or any scheme of chance are bound to be more or less demoralized, will rejoice to know that after a long investigation the postoffice authorities have decided that any advertisement offering anything in which chances are involved is a violation of the anti-lottery law, and have issued orders that the mails shall be closed to all newspapers or other publications that print that class of advertisements. This will shut ont the missing-letter and other guessing contests, which have been so widely advertised for a year or so past.

That little acts of kindness and courtesy often result in bringing about great good to many persons is, of course, well known to all observant persons. When Mrs. John Russell Young, in the goodness of her heart, went to the room fitted up for the use of the blind in the new Library of Congress, and talked and read to them awhile, she probably didn't have any idea that she was taking the first step in a movement to establish in Washington a home for the blind, but if those who attended a meeting at Mrs. Young's house today are not over-enthusiastic that is just about what it was. The charities of Washington are many and well supported, but the blind seem to have been entirely overlooked, and there is no place especially for them. Previous to the meeting of these friends of the blind, at Mrs. Young's, Mrs. Alice Underwood Hunt, widow of the late Gov. Hunt, of Colorado, had organized "The Helping Hand Club for the Blind," for the purpose of raising funds. It is intended that the home shall be industrial, each blind person to be taught to do what they show the most taste and aptitude for. Many blind persons are talented and ambitious, but they lack the facilities for being taught to improve their natural talents. Big-hearted volunteers have made the voluntary readings inaugurated by Mrs. Young, at the library, a regular feature.

Washington church goers had several opportunities this week to hear Rev. Charles Albert Berry, D. D., of Wolverhampton, England, who is President of the Congregational Union of England and Wales, and one of the best known pulpit orators in Great Britain. When the late Henry Ward Beecher died Dr. Berry declined a call to his church. His special theme is a union for peace of all the English speaking people, and his plea is that it is the duty of the churches to bring about that union. At the close of his first sermon Dr. Berry prayed earnestly for President McKinley, "who amid the exacting duties of his high station, suffered a pain in the heart in consequence of his domestic affliction, too sacred to be entered into by others than himself." Dr. Berry delivered the invocation at the opening of the Senate yesterday.

FOR THE FAMILY.

SORROW.

The sorrow that nobody mentions,
The sorrow no one may share,
Is the sorrow the dear Lord giveth
His sweetest, tenderest care.

He places His hand on the well-spring
The quivering lips refrain,
And the eyes smile forth in defiance
His love enfolding the pain.

He knows when the hurt is the deepest,
The tears of night and of day,
And whispering softly, 'I love you,"
Brushes the dew drops away.

The sorrow that nobody mentions,
The sorrow no one may share,
Is the sorrow the dear Lord giveth
His sweetest, tenderest care.

HOME-MADE CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

Something unique and convenient is the folding waste-paper box or basket, so easily packed in the trunk when going for a visit or a short stay anywhere. To make this basket, take heavy card-board and cut eight pieces, each about eight inches square, cover them with plain or figured duck or linen, a deep golden brown flecked with dull red and yellow is artistic. Cover the eight pieces and overhand them finely together in pairs, so that the four sides of the baskets are formed. Makes a similar fifth square for the bottom, In overhanding the pairs together leave one side of each square open until a piece of the duck has been slipped between. The outer edge of this piece of duck slip between the pieces forming the bottom square, and leave enough loose so that the four sides can have play to fold down on the bottom, one square over the other. To have the basket in readiness for use, tie the four sides together at the top corners with bows of satin ribbon two inches wide—Harper's Bazar.

A NECKTIE HOLDER.

Take four strips of pasteboard six teen inches in length and four and a half inches in width. Cover one side of each, first with sachet-sprinkled cotton batting and later with cotton. Cover firmly two of the pieces on this padded side with white silk. The other two pieces should be covered with linen, one cover being ornamented either with embroidery or painting. Fasten securely two loose straps of inch-wide ribbon two inches from each end of one of the silk-covered pieces, securely two ties of similar ribbon thirteen inches in length, the same distance from the ends of the ornamented linen-covered piece, and at each end and in the center of the silk-covered pieces glue inch-and-a quarter-length hinges of ribbon. Then glue securely the backs of the silk-covered pieces to the backs of the linen, and the case is complete.

GIFTS FOR BRIDESMAIDS.

One very fashionable wedding gift for the bridegroom to make to the bridesmaids is a pendant watch in enamel, of a hue to correspond with the tone of the toilet. Bouquets are replaced by baskets of spring blossoms or unconventional "posies" hanging loose, composed of the oldist of "old world" flowers which happen to be in season. Posies of wallflowers with old lace fichus over gowns of white cambric, frilled at the edge of the skirt, gave some recent nuptials an air of great distinction. The hats were of the wide leghorn poke shaped, and the bridesmaids wore their waved hair parted to either side in 1830 style. Old lace mittens were chosen to supersede gloves, but the fair wearers "struck" at the innovation.

The sewing screen is an 1896 suggestion for the woman who has mending to do each week. These screens stand about 2 feet in height. To the inner side of the screen are attached various little commodities used in sewing—a button bag, scissors, needle-case, pincushion, emery bag and so on.

"To tell the truth my mother has lived with one foot in the grave," writes Mrs. Eugene Stantzenberg, of No. 1604 Walker Ave., Houston, Texas, in a letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. "With a most thankful heart I will tell you about the wonderful cure effected in her case. She has been a perfect wreck for seven long years. No words can describe what she has suffered. She could not sleep on account of severe pains. She tried every doctor around here and spent hundreds of dollars without benefit. After hearing of your wonderful remedies I wrote to you. My mother has taken six bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and six of the 'Favorite Prescription,' and is now perfectly cured. Please receive the heartiest thanks and blessings from my father and seven children for saving the life of dear mother. May God bless you and your Institution, is the wish of your friend."

Tens of thousands of women have found complete and permanent relief from obstinate and seemingly incurable disease by using the wonderful remedies referred to above. The "Golden Medical Discovery" possesses the peculiar property of nourishing and vitalizing the blood with the life-giving red corpuscles which build up healthy flesh and muscular strength.

In the special weaknesses and diseases of the feminine organs, the "Favorite Prescription" is a perfect and positive specific. It is the only scientific medicine prepared for that purpose by an educated physician and specialist in that particular field of practice.

For weak and nervous women these two medicines taken conjointly constitute the most marvelously successful course of treatment known to the medical profession.

For nearly 30 years Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., at the head of a splendid staff of associate specialists, graduates from the leading medical universities of America and Europe.

For $1.75 we will send the paper for the first year to a new subscriber and a copy of Palestine Photographed. This album contains 64 actual photographic reproductions of picturesque and historical places in the Holy Land on enameled pages, and is a thing of beauty. The descriptive foot notes are good and enhance the interest.

We regard this as a specially desirable premium.

GRANDPA'S CLOCK.

Have you ever seen my grandpa's clock,
That stands on the big hall stair?
It is taller far than any man,
And it strikes and ticks with care.
But strange, in the night it has often seemed,
That it talked to me, or else I dreamed.

I know when I forged a sly request
To take to school one day,
To be dismissed at a needed hour,
And then ran off to play,
I felt my teacher would track the lie:
And oh! that night, how the clock did sigh,—
"Tick, tock-teck tick,
"Wick—wicked lie!"

I begged, 'Old clock, don't preach so loud,
And with God's help, I'll try—
Truly—to be a better boy,
So stop that mournful sigh!"
Then I heard a joyful "tick, tick, tock!"
Be firm as a rock—firm as a rock,
Tick, tick, tock!"

I told the story to grandpa o'er,
And with loving look and mild,
He said, "The voice that you gave the clock
Was that of your conscience, child;
From the stain of sin let your heart be clear,
Then God will guard and you've naught fear."

—L. F. Bourne, in Every Other Sunday.

THE SPOILED BOY.

Harry Redfern was that most unhappy of creatures—a spoiled child. Ever since he was a baby, a host of relatives had loved him, and let him do as he pleased. But when he was no longer a baby, all this was changed.

Now Poor Harry had become a "real boy," they all said, and he was so much more rough and noisy, and even the very things he had done before, and which were thought "so smart," now were frowned upon and declared pert and bold and rude.

Harry came home one day looking quite miserable.

"Mamma," he said, "I must be an awful bad boy. Even Aunt Eleanor said I was. I never do anything right any more, and I heard Cousin Jean say: 'Harry isn't a bit cunning any more; he's horrid.' And yet I think I'm just the same."

Mamma drew the little fellow to her side.

"Just look at it this way, Harry," she said. It isn't that you're so different now: it's because you've often before been selfish and heedless. Don't you know how often mamma has told the truth—that you do not think about other people, only yourself? The aunties and cousins loved you, so they wouldn't see this; they let you go on: but it's getting too hard to bear now. They hoped you would get better, but when you didn't they didn't like it."

"But why didn't they help me be better?" asked Harry. "Why did they laugh at me then, and scold me now?"

"Well, dear," said mamma, they've been too kind to my boy to blame them, I think it would be the wisest plan to make yourself over. Let us try now, and ask God to help us; to make a kind, thoughtful boy: just the boy papa and mamma are trying hard to make."

The very next day was Saturday. Harry was invited, with a little friend, to spend the day with his favorite Aunt Helen. The boys were told they could play ball only in the big attic or out of doors. After awhile they tore downstairs in a wild chase from the attic. The rubber ball bounded out of Harry's pocket and rolled into the library. Harry picked it up. The temptation to throw it and hit his playmate in the hall overcame his scruples. "Just once," he said to his conscience, as he took aim. Such a crash and shiver as followed. Harry stood aghast as he saw Aunt Helen's beautiful vase on the floor with a long crack in it; while an inner vase, which held a branch of handsome pressed autumn leaves, lay broken in many pieces. Aunt Helen rushed in.

"Oh! anything but that," she cried: "my dearest friend in China sent me that."

All at once Harry flew out of the house without a word.

"That is all he cares!" said Aunt Helen as, she picked up the broken fragments. But as she sat writing, Harry burst into the room.

"Here," he panted; here is my bank full of money—for my bicycle—mamma said I might—to buy a vase. Oh! do take it, Aunt Helen."

His aunt's first impulse was to refuse. Then she decided upon a better way to help Harry to be more careful.

"Thank you, dear," she said; "I think you're a different Harry, for now you're willing to give up so much for Aunt Helen. We will go down and buy the vase this afternoon."

And this helped Harry more than anything else to be less heedless and more careful to better obey conscience.—Daisy Rhodes Campbell in Morning Star.

A BOY WHO WORKED UP.

One day many years ago a bright boy found employment in a photograph gallery in Nashville, Tenn. His wages were small, but he took good care of them, and in course of time he had saved up a snug little sum of money. One day a friend, less thrifty than he, came to him with a long face and asked for a loan of money, offered a book as security. Although the other knew there was little probability of his ever being repaid, he could not refuse the request.

"Here is the money; keep your book, and repay me when you can."

The grateful lad went away in such haste that he left the book behind. The kind youth with curiosity examined the volume. It was a work on astronomy, by Dick, and it so fascinated him that he sat up all night studying it. He had never seen anything which so filled him with delight. He determined to learn all that he could about the wonders of the heavens. He began thenceforth to read everything he could obtain relating to astronomy.

The next step was to buy a small spyglass, and night after night he spent most of the hours on the roof of his house, studying the stars. He secured, second hand, the tube of a larger spyglass, into which he fitted an eye-piece, and sent to Philadelphia for an object glass. By and by he obtained a five inch glass, which, as you know, is an instrument of considerable size.

Meanwhile he worked faithfully in the shop of the photographer, but his nights brought him rare delight: for he never wearied of tracing out the wonders and marvels of the worlds around us. With the aid of his large spyglass he discovered two comets before they were seen by any of the professional astronomers, whose superior instruments were continually roaming the heavens in search of the celestial wanderers. This exploit, you may well suppose, made the boy famous. He was invited by the professors in Vanderbilt University to go thither and see what he could do with their six-inch telescope. In the course of the following four years he discovered six comets.

He was next engaged by the Lick Observatory in California. With the aid of that magnificent thirty-six-inch refracting telescope, the largest ever made, he discovered eight comets, and last summer astonished the world by discovering the fifth satellite of Jupiter. He invented a new method of photographing the nebulae in the milky way, and has shown an originality approaching genius in his work in star photography.

Perhaps you have already guessed the name of this famous astronomer, which is Professor E. E. Barnard, of the Lick Observatory, and this is the story of how he worked up.—Chicago Record.

THINGS USEFUL.

Compote of Chestnuts: Remove the brown skins off about fifty chestnuts and put in boiling water until the inner skin comes off easily; then place in a copper sugar boiler, laying them flat on the bottom, cover with a syrup at 160 degrees Farenheit and let simmer for thirty minutes. When done strain the syrup and reduce to 30 degrees; before doing so, flavor with the rind of an orange. Place the chestnuts in a dish and strain the syrup over them.

Orange Charlotte: Line a charlotte-mold with sections of oranges. Put one-third of an ounce of gelatine into a basin with a little less than a teacupful of water, let it soak until soft, then pour over about the same quantity of boiling water and add eight ounces of sugar and juice of a lemon. Pass it through a strainer into another basin and add the pulp and juice of sufficient oranges to make one-half pint of it; add a little of the grated rind of an orange and pack the basin in ice to cool. Beat the whites of three eggs to a stiff froth, and when the orange mixture begins to thicken add them and beat until it is thick enough to drop from the whites. Pour into the mold, pack in ice, and when firm pour it out into a glass dish and serve.

Dried Apple Fruit Cake: Soak three cupfuls of dried apples over night in cold water enough to swell them, chop them in the morning and put on the fire with three cups of molasses, stew until almost soft, add a cupful of nice raisins and stew a few moments, when cold add three cupfuls of flour, one cupful of butter, three eggs and a teaspoonful of soda, bake in a steady oven. This will make two good-sized cakes.

CHRISTMAS.

So Christmas is here again!
While the house sleeps, quiet as death,
'Neath the midnight moon comes the waits' shrill tune,
And we listen and hold our breath.

The Christmas that never was—
On this foggy wintry air,
With clear, pale gleam, like the ghost of a dream,
It is painted everywhere.

The Christmas that might have been—
It is borne in the far off sound;
Down the empty street, with the tread of feet
That lie silent underground,

The Christmas that yet may be,
Like the Bethlehem star, leads kind;
Yet our life slips past, hour by hour, fast, fast,
Few before and many behind.

The Christmas we have and hold
With a tremulous, tender strain,
Half joy, half fears—be the psalm of the years,
"Grief passes, blessings remain!"

The Christmas that sure will come
Let us think of at fireside fair,
When church bells sound o'er one small green mound
Which the neighbors pass to prayer—

The Christmas that God will give
Long after all these are o'er,
When is day nor night, for the Lamb is our light,
And we live forevermore.

THE REV. WM. S. LACY, D. D.

The Rev. Wm. Sterling Lacy, D. D., was born in Raleigh, N. C., March 25th, 1842. He is the son of Rev. Drury Lacy, D. D., so well and favorably known in this State and Virginia. The subject of this sketch entered Davidson College in Sept. 1855, and graduated there in June, 1859. He entered Union Theological Seminary, Sept. 1859, but left there February, 1862, to enter the Confederate army. In the army of northern Virginia he served as a private soldier until August, 1863, when he became the chaplain of the 47th N. C. Regiment, and continued his service in that position until the close of the war. From 1865 to 1868 he was engaged in teaching school. Licensed by Roanoke Presbytery in April, 1862, he was ordained to the full work of the ministry in April, 1869, by Abingdon Presbytery, and was installed pastor of "Anchor of Hope," and "Cove" churches within the bounds of that Presbytery. In this charge he remained till May, 1873, when he was invited to Buffalo and Euphronia churches in Fayetteville Presbytery, N. C. He assumed charge of these churches in June, 1873, and remained their loved and honored pastor until May, 1888. From June, 1888, he has been the pastor of the Second Presbyterian church in Norfolk, Va., down to the present time. He received the title of D. D., from Davidson College in 1889. He has held many positions of trust and honor in the Church, and has ever approved himself competent and faithful. He was stated clerk of Abingdon Presbytery from 1870 to 1873. He was the treasurer of Fayetteville Presbytery for several years and stated clerk of the Synod of North Carolina from 1878 to 1886. He was stated clerk of Norfolk Presbytery from 1892 to 1896, and has recently been re-elected to that position. He has repeatedly represented his Presbytery in the General Assembly, and has ever been a working delegate. While a member of the Synod of North Carolina he was made a director of Union Theological Seminary, and after his removal to Norfolk the Synod of Virginia elected him to the same position. In the board of directors of this institution he is regular in attendance and efficient in work. One thus honored by varied positions in the Church must have excellent, natural gifts, superior attainments, and genial social qualities, securing the good will of his fellows. These were an important feature of the paper, were noted for elegant diction and felicity of expression, and won him the cordial regard of many friends. An old friend of the writer's who was not a professor of religion, nor very proficient in literary culture, used to say that "he always read every thing in the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN signed W. S. L. As a lecturer too on social and literary topics, Bro. Lacy has won distinction. His addresses on commencement occasions, as well as on the lecture platform, have commanded attention, and afforded delight. His subjects are ever clearly conceived, happily arranged and presented with that logical force and rhetorical finish, which never fail to impress, unlettered and cultured hearers. But it is not as a holder of office, or as a contributor to the musical or literary press, or as a lecturer on varied themes, that Bro. Lacy has best served his generation, and the Church of God. His most valuable and enduring work has been done as preacher and pastor. In both these relations he has been well known to the writer, and he can speak not from the testimony of others, but from personal knowledge. His preaching was always edifying to his own charge, and at Presbyterial meetings, was gladly welcomed by devout multitudes. He preached not himself but Christ, and loved to stand behind the cross, uplifted for saving sinners. As a preacher, he is lucid, logical, Scriptural, earnest, tender and effective. As a preacher he does not deliver discourses, hung on a Scripture text, like an elegant garment on a steel hook, and having about the same connection. But he expounds the Word and his sermon grows from the text as the blossoming plant from the germinating seed. In one species of sermonizing he specially excels, namely in what may be termed "Incident Preaching," or taking a Bible story, and developing and illustrating its moral lessons. As a pastor, Bro. Lacy was happy in winning the sympathy, the esteem, the confidence and the admiration of his people. He cared for not only their spiritual interests but for their intellectual, moral, educational and social welfare. He placed himself in intimate contact with the young of his charge, and exerted an important influence upon their intellectual dovelopment, literary tastes, social arrangements, and religious character. The charge in North Carolina in which he longest labored, still manifest a Christian intelligence, and a social refinement, which God honored him in fostering during many years. Bro. Lacy was married October 10th, 1888, to Miss Mary C. Shepherd of Jonesboro, N. C., and his wife still lives to gladden his home and cheer his labors. May his be "the path of the just that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

The punishment for refusing to use the talents given me is the loss of the talent itself. The opportunities will be taken away from him who neglects them. The unused limb grows weak; the still water dries up or becomes foul: the inactive mind loses its power. The loss of the talent begins in this life, and is gradual, that men may take warning and have opportunity to repent. But, finally, at the judgment day, the talent will be wholly and irrevocably taken away.—Peloubet.

THEN AND NOW.

One must be little observant, indeed, not to have seen that within the present century great changes have taken place in modes and methods and means of carrying on the work of the Kingdom of Christ in the world. These changes have been, perhaps especially notable during the past half century. During the century Sabbath-school work has largely supplemented, and we regret to say too often superseded, the parental training which was a distinguishing characteristic of the religious education of the 18th century, and which furnished the energy and force and the loyalty manifested during that period. We are not deprecating the establishment of Sabbath-schools. God rules and reigns and as His work requires new methods they must and will come into use. The thing to be deplored is that the good of the old, such is human infirmity, cannot be retained with the benefits and advantages of the new. No one believes that if Sabbath-schools should be abandoned that parental training would be restored. The Sabbath-schools are doing a blessed work, they must continue to do it—and the line of progress now is to have them do all they can and in the very best way they can. They are reaching thousands who would never be brought under gospel influences otherwise, and they do not furnish a sufficient reason for neglect of parental training. We might in noting changes refer to the neglect of family prayer for which there is really no compensation provided, nor the attempt of it. The changed methods of church work as applying to ways of raising money is very noticeable. We now appeal less to the merit of the object and to the duty than fifty years ago and depend more on artificial and sometimes utterly indefensible expedients. The grab-bag and the ring-cakes and the lottery are less in evidence just now, but the amateur theatricals and the humorous lectures, etc., are high in vogue. We say nothing of the multiplication of church societies and independent religious guilds. All acknowledge the good they do, and none can fail to see the harm they may do, and the harm they certainly will do, if disregard for the supremacy of church authority and church regulation and guidance, in accord with Scriptural principles, be admitted.

Church affairs are not conducted now as fifty years ago, and why? Man's nature has not changed. Sin is now what sin was then. The law of God is changeless. Immutability is an essential attribute of God himself and of the principles of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Man's duty to God and to his fellows is still, as revealed in the Scriptures, what it was in the earliest ages of the world. But the work of God under the providential dispensation of events, and in times and seasons under his hand, may cause to arise, if they do not necessitate, changes in ways and means of carrying on His work in the world. It being never to be forgotten that sin is mixed with all we do. Even into best services sin often enters and sometimes the services themselves—is it too much to say?—are sinful. To man belongs the discredit and the guilt—and to man alone.

But the preaching of this day and time is not what it was a century ago. Who, reverting to fifty years ago, fails to recall that the "terrors of the law" were then largely the theme of the pulpit. Sinners were alarmed and sought relief from their fears. Probably that preaching was too exclusively alarming in its character; a revulsion was caused and the pendulum swung to the other extreme. Who ever sings "Delay not! now? And so we note that the work of the Holy Spirit and His office and functions were permitted to become subordinate in the minds of the people. Under this remissness, in the minds of very many, the Holy Spirit came to be recognized and regarded, not as a person equal with the Father and the Son—thus constituting the Trinity of the Godhead—but merely as an influence emanating from God the Father and God the Son. Is not the lowered tone of spirituality as marked in the Church to-day as the extraordinary activity in work and effort? Doing is the order of the day, but the lack of spirituality is not because of it—the concurrence does not represent cause and effect. It would be sad indeed if it did: the activity need not be, should not be, abated, but it should be remembered that no might nor power of man avails aught where the Spirit of God is not working. The personal ministry of the Holy Spirit, in co-equality with the Father and the Son, needs to be recognized and emphasized in our Sabbath-schools and societies and pulpits—that all effort may be inspired and maintained and regulated by Him, that to Him with the Father and the Son—the Triune God—may be the glory and the honor and the praise now, henceforth and forevermore.

IT IS WELL that prayer should be definite, but all prayer cannot be specific, for to be so it must be founded on a just and adequate sense of need, and it is only too true that we know not what we should pray for as we ought. We have constant need that the Spirit should help our infirmities. We can always pray, and should, for forgiveness of our sins and for the grace and strength that the Holy Spirit confers. God will always answer prayer for the Holy Spirit and the prayer for the fullness of the Spirit is inclusive of all other blessings. To those who seek the Kingdom of God and His righteousness all else will be added.

SO GERMANY now gives out that the possession of Kiao Chou will be permanent. Russia and France it is understood demur not at the principle of the transaction but at the preference seemingly given Great Britain and Japan in communicating with them, or acquainting them with the design while it was withheld from the demurrants.

After all it seems simply a case fully illustrated in the matter of the highway robber who meeting an unarmed man compels him to stand and deliver, or the big boy who grabs the little one's marbles and moves off with them.

RUSSIA HAS obtained the approval of China to the wintering of the Chinese fleet at Port Arthur; China believing, or professing to believe, that this is done in her interest. Divested of euphuism it may be called, Russia taking permanent possession of Port Arthur. The British press seem to so regard it, and the claim is set up that China must now allow Britain similar privilege. Japan too must be taken into account and the plea is set up that China has only done for Russia what Japan had hitherto done for the Czar; still there is uneasiness that Japan will not take it so easily. France is in full accord with Russia and is glad to see Germany put in check. Altogether events of greatest importance and that may lead to gravest consequences are crowding into the closing days of '97. Does it mean the dismemberment and partition of China?

THERE ARE more things than Banquo's ghost that will not down. The Panama scandal seems to be one of them. A committee of the French Parliament has had it in hand to inquire into the dealing of members of Parliament in this connection. They reported last week and in consequence some of the members have been arrested.

ANDREW MURRAY'S books all are well worth reading, and more, are well worth taking to heart and acting upon. It is not necessary to commend his "Absolute Surrender" to those who have read the "Deeper Christian Life," "The Master's Indwelling" and the others; we cordially commend them all. They may be had from F. H. Revell Co., New York and Chicago.

THE FOLLOWING from the Presbyterian Committee of Publication Richmond, Va, is selfexplanatory:

REFINING THE GOLD.

BY REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D. D.

"There is a place for the gold where they refine it." This is as true now as it was in the time of Job. God has a great many refining pots for His children; for all is not gold that glitters. He sees so much of pride and self-will, and covetousness, and cowardice or unbelief, among professed Christians that they require the "fining-pot," and the furnace pretty often. Prosperity is not generally regarded as a state of severe trial, but it is so. The sunshiny days are the days that bring out the adders.

Yet a career of health and wealth and social prominence is not always hurtful to humble, devout, and unselfish piety. When I see certain rich merchants using their money for charitable purposes, and doing a good Sunday's work in a mission school; when I see women of wealth using their carriages for visitations of mercy to the squalid sufferers in the slums; then I perceive that God can trust some Christians with a large income. Let no one seek to own much money unless he is sure that the money will not own him.

Popularity is a severe trial that sometimes develops an awful amount of dross. It requires a good share of grace for a minister to see crowds of people before his pulpit, and to be run after for great occasions, without having his head grow dizzy. One of the best evidences that Spurgeon was solid bullion was that he went through the furnace test of prodigious popularity, and yet maintained both his staunch orthodoxy and deep humility. Is it not a sharp trial also for a minister to do honest hard work and preach faithful sermons, and yet receive small salary, and small popular appreciation? Yes; very true; but such will come by their dues in the next world. "My reward is with me," saith the Master, "to give to every man according as his work shall be."

Our Heavenly Father often uses adversity as a purifier. "When He hath tried me I shall come forth as gold," was what Job said after his possessions had been swept away. This keen wintry weather will kill off lots of vermin; so God sends wintry weather sometimes on His own people to kill off certain kinds of besetting sins. He lets them be cast down to prove whether they will cast Him off, or draw more closely to Him. Some of the most splendid displays of Christian character that I have ever seen have been made by those who have been suddenly reduced from large wealth to straitened circumstances. When the purse was emptied, the soul seemed to fill more full with Christ. A certain New York merchant was never more rich towards God than when he lost all his property during a general commercial crash, and handing his watch over to his asignee said, "There take that; I will not keep anything that can go to my creditors."

How often we ministers go into sick-rooms that are the fining-pots for the King's choicest gold. No sermons that we can deliver in the pulpit have more unction or eloquence than the testimonies of enduring patience or of joyful exultation that often come from the lips of bed-ridden sufferers. A pillow of pain can be a pulpit of power. Through weary days and nights of suffering the patient song is heard by the blessed Refiner;

"Pain's furnance-heat within me quivers
And all my heart in anguish shivers,
And yet I whisper, 'As God Will'
And in the hottest fire—hold still."

There may be many readers of this paragraph who are puzzled about God's dealings with them. Such sorely tried souls should remember who it is that is appointing for them the discipline through which they are passing. Let them remember that it is gold that is put into the refining-pot. As Miss Fletcher of Glasgow has pithily said, "Men refine gold, but don't refine pebble stones, or rubbish. It is wheat that they thrash, and not dockens or dandelions."

A Russian officer could not make his accounts come right; there was a heavy balance against him. In the rigid despotism of the empire he feared the consequences and the severe penalty if he could not make it good. Poring over the figures at his table one day, in his worry and despair he began scribbling. He wrote on the paper before him, "Who will make up this deficit?" He fell asleep. The Czar passed; he saw the officer, and, curious, read the scrap of writing; he seized the pen, and wrote underneath, "I, even I, Alexander." Who can pay the deficit of human sin? "I, even I," said Christ on the cross.—A. J Gordon, D. D.

It is well to remember that thistles, as well as bread, cast upon the water, return after many days.—Forward.

LETTER FROM DR. CHESTER.

OUR CHINA STATIONS.

Dr. John W. Davis of Soochow, from inherited ability, early training and long experience of the Chinese, has become an adept in dealing with them in a business way, and consequently was able to procure for the further trip up the canal a nice house boat on which we slept comfortably the night of Sept. 27th, and some good coolies who, with a small amount of coaxing, rowed us during the night the distance of "ten nines" 90 Li 30 miles to where we found Mr. McGinnis and his mother, and his sister, Mrs. Sykes, all dressed in Chinese clothes and waiting for us, with a good hot breakfast on the table and such a welcome as only missionaries know how to give and only travellers 10,000 miles from home can fully appreciate.

After breakfast we stepped across the street to receive a similar welcome from Dr. and Mrs. Worth. Both families are living in native houses outside of the city wall, fronting on a street eight feet wide and with the rear windows hanging over the bank of the Canal. They have been unable as yet to purchase any ground within the city and have no prospect of being able to do so. Consequently Wusih cannot yet be said to be "opened" as a station, and it is possible that the effort to open it may be abandoned for the present and its occupants moved to re-enforce some other point. Meanwhile they are carrying on the work as opportunity allows, healing the sick, and preaching the Gospel in a street chapel, and to those who gather at Dr. Worth's dispensary. Some of his surgical work has gained for him the reputation of being able to work miracles. On one occasion they brought a dead woman to the dispensary and insisted that he should attempt to restore her to life.

On the other hand if at any time an operation should prove fatal the consequences might be disastrous, in spite of the fact that in every serious case a contract is written between the missionary and the patient's family, stating that in case of a fatal termination the missionary is not to be held responsible.

Once when an operation was performed on a woman in which chloroform had to be given a crowd of people stood by watching her as she passed into insensibility, with an expression on their faces which plainly meant, "Now if she dies we will make an end of you." For a moment her pulse did stop beating, during which the feelings of Dr. Worth and Mr. McGinnis can be better imagined than described. But fortunately it returned, and the operation was a brilliant success.

One can see that the practice of surgery under these conditions requires not only the highest skill, but also the kind of courage that comes from the kind of faith that makes one wholly indifferent to personal consequences when working for the cause of Christ. No other human instrumentality is doing so much as our medical missions towards breaking down the bitter opposition of the Chinese to Christianity. But so much depends on the medical work being done successfully, that only those who have had the best training our schools and hospitals afford, and are furnished with the best possible equipment for surgical work, should be sent to undertake it. Five hundred dollars is the least amount that a medical missionary should have to supply himself with instruments.

As a convenient way of spending the day together the McGinnis family, Dr. and Mrs. Worth and the two lovely babies, Dr. Davis and I went aboard our houseboat, taking our dinner along, and rowed some distance up the canal. After dinner we went up a high hill to an old pagoda, abandoned and in ruins as all the pagodas now are.

We were followed, as usual, by an ever increasing crowd of curious natives. These make the outdoor atmosphere in which all our China missionaries must live, their only refuge being their homes enclosed in walled compounds. Such a home, wherever possible, every missionary should have, as a preventive of the nervous break down which must otherwise, sooner or later, come from the everlasting pressure of this curious, unsympathetic and generally hostile crowd.

The view from this pagoda hill is magnificent, on the one side, of the great lake 30 miles away and the mountains beyond, on the other of the great valley with its teaming hives of unevangelized people, and the smoke of a hundred villages, which seem to me to be in some respects a better field for our missionary work than the great cities to which it has been too much confined. It is necessary that our centres should be in the cities where the officials live, and that we be known to have governmental toleration and protection in the cities. Otherwise the village people will not give us a hearing. But this condition being fulfilled they are much less hostile than the city people, and afford much better material out of which to build up a self-sustaining church than the class to which we mainly have access in the cities. The official, as such, is required to take part in idolatrous worship; hence to be a Christian he must cease to be an official.

He is also, with few exceptions, glutted with ill-gotten gains, which, if he became a Christian, he would have to disgorge. Consequently, while some individuals of them may be reached by omnipotent grace, yet to the officials as a class we have as yet no access. To the so-called "Literati," that most contemptible species of the genus "fraud" now extant, the only desirable prospect in life is to become officials.

Therefore in my humble judgment, and in that of some much more competent judges, missionaries to that class under present conditions are a predestined failure.

Many of the tradesman and artisan classes are being reached, but they are very difficult to reach because they all belong to guilds, and are required to contribute to the support of heathen rites and temples, on penalty of expulsion from the guild in case of refusal. So that almost the only class to whom it may be said that we have unrestricted access in the cities is that of people unattached to any calling recognized as a legitimate and respectable element of the social system. It is the class among whom we do rescue work in our cities, but out of whom we do not expect to build up self-sustaining and aggressive churches.

But these conditions do not obtain to anything like the same extent in the farm and village life of China. Nor is the hostility among this class to the foreigner who comes "properly recommended" anything like so great. There is also a much sturdier and less corrupted type of character to be found among them.

Therefore it would seem that we would have much more to hope from a church composed of this class as an aggressive force, and as a leaven that would work upward and eventually change the conditions so as to make all classes in this great mission field accessible to the Gospel, which they must either receive or perish, nationally as well as individually.

After so long a time, having survived the ravages of "time, war, flood and fire" since the days of Abraham, the Chinese nation is now in a state of decadence, from the operation of three great national curses, official corruption, gambling, and opium smoking. The greatest of these is opium smoking. The smell of it is in all the air, and the pallor of it is on millions of faces.

The opium cure department in all the hospitals are crowded; but the physicians told me that those cured in this way almost never remain cured, unless they are also converted. On the other hand I saw five old men in Mr. Yu's congregation at Hangchow who, after having been opium smokers from twenty to thirty years, have now been consistent church members from three to five years.

For this and all the other evils that are now destroying this unhappy people, the remedy is not western civilization, railroads, education, nor any help that can come from man alone, but only that Gospel which is "the power of God unto salvation."

How cruel it will be, if we who hold this remedy in trust for them, shall not make haste to give it to them.

NOTES FROM CHINA.

Rev. H. C. DuBose, D. D., writing from Soochow, China, October 30th, 1897, with reference to Dr. Chester's visit, says: "Just after he left a brother put in a circular to give up Wusih, the Mission, however, will hardly listen to the proposition."

Latest News of Dr. Chester: The following is endorsed on the back of latest communication from Dr. Chester: "Reached Kobe all right November 13th, '97. Will take the China home, due San Francisco December 24th."

HOME AND SCHOOL.

MR. EDITOR:—Upon the results of the collection appointed by the General Assembly for the "Home and School" at Fredericksburg, Va., on Dec. 26th, 1897, depends the question of the continuance of this our only home for the orphans of our deceased Presbyterian ministers. There is a debt of $5,000, contracted necessarily, during the first two years of the "Home and School's" operation, which must be paid, and provision must be made for the future support of the work. The General Assembly, three years ago, adopted this institution and commended it to the churches. If it lives, it will no doubt be endowed, by wealthy persons, for it is a most attractive object of beneficence, but for the present its only hope of support is from the contributions of churches and individuals.

Shall we close this orphanage, and turn out upon the world our forty children now within its walls? This is the question to be answered by the Christmas collection. Surely every church and Sunday-school will come to the rescue. The "Home and School" is being conducted most economically. Only one servant is employed in the institution, the inmates doing all but the most menial work.

May the Lord open the hearts of His people to help care for these dear children.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY'S HOME MISSIONS.

CONTRIBUTE IN JANUARY.

The angels and redeemed saints in heaven serve and worship God not merely because it is duty, but because it is their delight. The very sum of their being is to render service and worship to glorify to enjoy God. It will be so with us, when by God's grace we shall enter there. It should be so with us now, here. This is not a begging article. Our God graciously offers to His children the opportunity to invest, in January, for Him a due proportion of what He has placed in their hands as His stewards. Let us enjoy the privilege to full measure of our ability. The opportunity is faintly outlined by such facts as these: In Arkansas 5,079 of our brethren are in the midst of about a million white people; in Texas $16,131 Presbyterians are in the midst of perhaps two and a half millions of white people. These brethren in many cases support their own churches and give to the missionary work around them, but unaided are wholly unable to cope with the vast demands of the great and rapidly growing population. In older Synods Presbyterian strength in many places is eight times as great in proportion to population, as it is out west. It is reported to us that there are 250 towns in Texas, with from 300 to 2,500 people, which numbers will probably be doubled in ten years, where Presbyterians are doing no work.

In the Indian Territory there is a mixed population, Indians and many poor white people, unsettled, migratory, but within one more generation they will constitute a settled population in the form of a State or States. Our five white, five Indian ministers, about fifteen teachers with an enrolment this year of 500 pupils, Indians and whites, with our Catechisms and the Bible taught daily, are planting the seed of God's Word and under His blessing great fruit may be expected in the salvation of souls and in the Christian character of that section through all future years.

In Florida, owing to the destruction of orange trees in 1894, many employees, thrown out of work moved away. One church, into which one minister had received 120 members, which gave $400 towards pastoral support now has three or four members. Other churches, a few, are nearly extinct, others reduced to half membership and to less than half financial ability leave our ministers in positive straits. In two or three years more, under God's blessing, orange trees will bear, crops will be diversified, population will return. We dare not suffer the ministers to be forced to abandon the churches in such a crisis.

Rev. H. B. Pratt and Rev. W. S. Scott missionaries to large numbers of Mexicans, who have come to Texas to stay, with Christian schools, must be sustained. Mr. Pratt spends four hours per day in training several Mexicans in Bible study, fitting them for missionary work among their people.

A dozen new evangelists are imperatively needed, if we are to do what our Church should do, at once in these fields. A dozen church buildings are badly needed. How much can you have the privilege of investing for your Lord, in this work in January? Put it into your church collection or you can remit to Mr. W. A. Powell, Atlanta, Ga., the Assembly's Treasurer.

J. N. CRAIG,
Secretary.

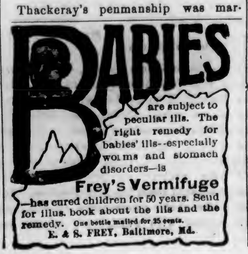
NO OLIVET?

Can no Olivet be found? Can Christian dwellers in the cities and towns discover no time or places for meditation, for prayer, for spiritual reading, for their Bibles, or for heart converse with their Savior? Yes, they may if they will resolutely determine so. The leading Christian merchant of New York was in the habit of rising early, and having a good half hour over his Bible and on his knees before he met his family for household worship; and then he went to his place of business with his face shining. Another one walked home for his noonday lunch with his family, and said that he thus caught time for good thought and secret prayer. Arthur Tappan had a private room for noonday devotions up in his warehouse; and some catch a little refreshment in the noon prayer-meeting. Others keep conscientiously a quiet evening hour for bathing their souls. No Christian can keep his religion alive in the constant whirl of worldly excitements. Daniel needed to have an Olivet in his chamber amid Babylon's roar and idolatries. Peter found his on a housetop in Joppa, and Martin Luther found his in that "upper room" at Wittenberg, which is still held sacred. Let every child of Jesus resolve that he or she will have some place and seasons for meeting their beloved Master alone; and they will go forth from such interviews with their hearts lightened and their strength renewed. Our Olivets will prepare us for that mount of heavenly glory where we shall see Jesus as He is.—Theodore L. Cuyler.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

Charles Scribner's Sons are to publish a complete edition of James Whitcomb Riley's prose and verse.

Among the recent acquisitions of the national portrait gallery in London are portraits of Sir Richard Burton by Lord Leighton, of William Morris by Watts, and of Coventry Patmore by Sargent.



Rose Amelia, countess of Wilbaix, is dead. She and her sister, the wife of Gen. Adam Badeau, who are relatives of the novelist, Eugene Sue, are said to have been the originals of Rose and Blanche in "The Wandering Jew."

Mrs. Robt. Louis Stevenson, is visiting in California She was born in Indiana and did much by her pen in this country and Europe to support her family before her marriage to Mr. Stevenson. The historic Samoan home of the poet, Vailima, is to be sold, the price asked being $20,000 The place has 600 acres of land, much of which is cleared and planted. The dwelling is a fine specimen of island architecture and the grounds have plenty of natural scenery.

At the sale in London on the 10th inst., of the library of the late Earl of Ashburnham, Caxton's translation of "A Book of the Hoole Lyf of Jason," from the French of Raoul Lefevre, one of the earliest productions of Caxton's press, having been published at Westminster about 1477, was bought by Mr. Pickering, the publisher, for £2,100. The copy is perfect and unique, Other Caxton publications sold for £600 and £960.

Thackeray's penmanship was marvelously neat, but so small that it could not always be read with comfort by any but microscopic eyes. Charles Dickens' writing was much less beautiful, but almost equally minute, and his habit of writing with blue ink upon blue paper, with frequent interlineations and cross lines, made his copy a burden alike to compositor and proof-reader. Douglass Jerrold jotted down his jokes upon little slips of blue paper in letter smaller than the type in which they were to be set. Capt. Marryat's handwriting was so fine that whenever the copyist rested from his labors he was obliged to stick a pin where he left off, in order to find the place again. Charlotte Bronte's handwriting appeared to have been traced with a needle.

FOREIGN MISSION COMMITTEE NOTES.

The Executive Committee of Foreign Missions met in the Secretary's office, Nashville, Tenn, Dec. 14th. Opened with Scripture reading and prayer.

Appropriations were made for the Japan, Korea and Mexico Missions, but reductions were made on salaries and other items as had been done in making appropriations for China and Brazil.

Miss Ella S. Cummins was transferred to C. Victoria, Mexico; the change to take place on her return to the field.

A letter from Rev. C. W. Butler, M. D., of the State of Pernambuco, Brazil, gave the following information, under date Nov. 23rd: "We see a goodly number of conversions from month to month. The demand for preachers and teachers is so much in excess of our ability to supply the need that we get sad when we see that the work of extension must soon stop."

Ordered that the Southern Brazil Mission be informed that the Committee does not feel justified in granting their request for $5,000 from sale of unencumbered Campinas property, to aid the Synod of Brazil in its efforts to establish its Seminary; but that the Committee will lay the matter before the General Assembly.

The report of Mr. Erskine Reed, Treasurer, showed $50.62 on hand Nov. 30th. The Committee was informed that more than $15,000 was still due the missions on appropriations for 1897; and that the first remittances for 1898 should have been made prior to the date of this meeting. Letters from missions were reported, showing serious inconvenience caused by delayed remittances; but the Executive Committee being satisfied that incurring debt in this emergency would only injure the work, acting as a sedative instead of removing the cause of trouble, were firm in their decision to avoid borrowing, to the last possible moment.

The Committee was informed that the Prayer Calendar for 1898 had been published, and was ready for sale.

Urgent and pathetic appeals were received from Mrs. S. R. Gammon and Miss Charlotte Kemper, of Lavras, Brazil, for some one to be sent to relieve Mrs. Gammon from school work, which had long been overtaxing her, on account of her other duties. A missionary of Southern Brazil offered $100 of her $400 salary to help defray the expense. The Committee was powerless to act, not having the necessary funds.

The following communication dated September 15th, 1897, was received from the China Mission:

"We wish especially to express to you at this time our appreciation of your efforts in bringing about the visit of our Secretary of Foreign Missions, to the China field. He has brought us into closer sympathy with you and your work and with your point of view as you look over the great world field. His presence and counsel during an important Conference and Mission meeting have been most helpful and we look forward to increased pleasure and profit in his expected visit among our stations. We are assured you have acted wisely and for the lasting welfare of our work and yours among this great people."

A request was received from the Korea Mission for the following reinforcements, which were considered an absolute necessity: For Na Ju district, Dr. C. C. Owen, one minister beside Dr. Owen, and one single lady. For Kun San station, one minister. Notice also, was sent of the election of Rev. Eugene Bell as Secretary of that mission.

Mr. H. Kent McKay, of Baltimore, Md., having sent in a request to have the comparative receipts of each month published in The Missionary, given by Presbyteries, and not as a total; on motion this request was granted.

Rev. Harry W. Myers in a communication dated Dec. 6th, informed the Committee of his expected departure for the East, sailing from San Francisco, Cal., on the Steamship "Gaelic' Dec. 7th. He was accompanied by Miss Mary S. Matthews and Mrs. Myers; Miss Matthews going to China and Mr. and Mrs Myers to Japan.

These missionaries had been intructed by the Committee, before the heavy decline in receipts, to proceed to their fields. Mr. Myers and Miss Matthews, having on these instructions, given up other work and made ready, the party was allowed to proceed.

Ordered that Dr. S. H. Chester, on his return, be requested to publish, in a somewhat brief form, an account of the missions he has visited.

Ordered that the Treasurer of the Executive Committee be instructed to forward money to the missions, pro rata, as fast as it comes in.

Candidates' papers docketed for consideration at this meeting were referred to the Directing Committee for more thorough examination; and to make recommendations on at the next meeting of the Executive Committee. It was suggested that hereafter candidates' papers be placed among the first items on the docket, in order to insure careful and thorough consideration.

The Committee adjourned, closing with prayer.

GOLD DUST.

Then let every heart keep its Christmas within,
Christ's pity for sorrow, Christ's hatred of sin,
Christ's care for the weakest, Christ's courage for right,
Christ's dread of the darkness, Christ's love of the light
Everywhere, everywhere, Christmas to-night.

—Phillips Brooks.

Swell the notes of the Christmas song,
Sound it through the earth abroad,
Glory to God!
Blessing and honor, thanks and laud!
Take the joy of the Christmas song!
Are not the tidings good and true?.
Peace to you!
And God's good will is ever new.

Singing down the ages comes the anthem sweet;
Caught from angel voices, we the hymn repeat;
Christ has come, our Saviour, Christ a King to reign,
Glory in the highest, peace, good-will to men.

ACADEMICAL AND INDUSTRIAL INSTITUTE, NORTH WILKSBORO, N C.

MR. EDITOR:—I beg space in your columns to give your readers a few facts about this school. We are in a flourishing condition, notwithstanding the great struggles through which we have had to pass. It is only a lack of means that prevents it from doing a work, though in its incipiency, second to none of its kind. We had the President of the Board of Directors, Rev. R. E. Caldwell, which is an earnest of great things for this institution, with us to-day, adjusting matters, and I need only say that he left us with things in a cheerful and hopeful condition, as the future of the A. and I. Institute will evince. Many are the white friends here who in the past stood by us, to cheer and wish the institute the greatest success. From my report (which is too long for these columns) to the Board of Directors, I take the following paragraph, which will be of interest to many of your readers.

At the beginning of the present school term the circumstances were much better than they were a year ago. Then we had neither household furniture, bedding, kitchen utensils, nor tableware, bread, vegetables nor hogs, in short we had to buy everything from the start, but now we have a good supply of bedding, kitchen utensils and tableware, plenty of potatoes, beans, peas, cabbages (five barrels of krout) turnips, beats and carrots in abundance, two hogs and some corn. By the use of a small cannery we have put up the following canned goods. Blackberries 583 two pound cans, huckleberries 293, peaches 79, beans 281, tomatoes 476 cans, making about 136 dozen, the value of which at present approximates $100. We have planted and have now growing a vigorous orchard of improved apple and peach trees, numbering more than 140 trees, also a few cherry and damson trees. During the summer we have erected from material upon the ground, a storage house, with a basement underneath of same dimensions, size 12x16 feet; in these we keep our products.

We have also dug and walled with stones taken from the land two basements under two rooms of the boys dwelling. These rooms can be used to do light work by the boys in the absence of the much needed shop. It is noteworthy to say that the stones, above alluded to, which were not only useless upon the land, but were cumbersome, have been converted into substantial good, and made to do lasting service. Thus enhancing the value of the property at a saving to the institute of more than $100 for brick.

But the greatest of all is the fact that we have with us a number of bright-eyed anxious-hearted boys and girls, who are eager, ready and willing to do any kind of work to enable them to fit themselves for usefulness. We have preaching ordinarily every Sabbath, Sunday-school regularly and prayer-meeting every Wednesday night; the Y. P. S. C. E. every Sabbath afternoon. The students show marked interest in all of these services. There are hopeful signs of several conversions to Christ during the session. We are preparing to have a week or ten days meeting early in the next year. We had a nice and delightful Thanksgiving with appropriate services. The County Supervisor of Public Schools, Maj. J. H. Foot addressed the school and patrons at the close of our exercises; which was enjoyed by all present. We are now preparing for Christmas exercises with well arranged program. I wish to say to our friends who have promised to send us boxes of clothing, that the season with present cold mornings reminds us of those promises and causes us to be continually on the lookout. Most all kinds of garments can be made to do service among the students.

Yours for the Master's work,
S. G. WALKER,
Superintendent.

LOSING BY SAVING.

Much of what we count failure and loss in our efforts to influence others in Christ's name, in our own spiritual struggles and disappointments, and in our every-day business affairs, is truly seed-sowing. To withhold it would not be to save it, but rather to endanger much besides—a prospective harvest. A man might about as well ligature his little finger to stop the circulation and save vitality, on the plea that the little finger is an unprofitable member, as to deny himself in certain lines, vote to retrench in the equipment of his Sunday-school, or seek to save for evangelistic or charitable work the money which the great religious gatherings held for counsel and inspiration cost. Just as surely as the atrophy of the finger would mean general loss of vitality and danger of mortification and blood poisoning, so does withholding in some things mean impaired efficiency and vastly less results. There are cases in which one must spend what he has to get more, on the penalty of losing it and a hundred-fold additional by trying to save it.—Sunday School Times.

THE CHOICE.

During a revival of religion in one of our great universities two students were awakened who were intimate friends. One evening they agreed to go and call upon one of the professors and ask for his advice. They came to his door, when one of the two stopped and said: "I believe I won't go in." His companion replied, "You can do as you please; but I need all the help that a man of experience can give; I am resolved to go in." There they parted—and for eternity! The one went in, opened his difficulties to the professor, received good counsel, and decided for Christ. He became an eminently useful minister of Christ. The other threw off all serious thought, drifted into "fast" associations, and ended his career as a sot. The one co-operated with the loving Spirit; the other quenched the Spirit, and shut the gateway of life against himself! My friend, your Bible is full of glorious encouragement to you. A pure life, a useful life, a happy life and an eternal life in the Father's House is now within your reach. The only time you are sure of is the present. There are two gates, and the two opposite roads into eternity. You must take one or the other! Beside that strait gate stands the Infinite Love saying to you: "I set before you death and life. Choose life!"—T. L. Cuyler.

GETTING TO WORK.

We cannot expect to be estimated solely according to our intentions. One cannot safely estimate himself by what he intends to do. A thousand of the best intentions will amount to nothing unless accompanied by some actual doing. One act rescued and set on its feet out of the land of dreamy intentions is worth more than all the perfect dreams which never become more than dreams. Perfect dreaming will not make perfect work. Only working will do that. There is a point beyond which all farther preparation in the way of thinking a thing over is useless, and at that point the only farther preparation worth speaking of is actually setting to work. A touch of firmness and reality which nothing else can give, is imparted to all the rest of a man's intentions when he definitely sets about the accomplishment of a single long-cherished purpose. Something quite new enters into his hand and his heart when he gets to work. It never comes before.—Sunday School Times.

A man has his place in the Church by virtue of the new birth. A goat can never become a sheep by being counted with or having his fellowship with the sheep. A bramble can never become an olive, or a thorn a vine, by simply growing in an orchard. So, also, a Judas can never become a true disciple, except by being born a disciple. "Ye must be born again."—Banner.

PEACE WITH GOD.

There is an unspeakably great privilege enjoyed by those who are made spiritually alive. They are possessed of a conscious delight as sure, and as thoroughly defined—while, at the same time, on a higher plane—as is the joy of intellectual and physical existence. To be at peace with God; to be able to pray and to take delight in prayer, and to realize that God bows himself in his grace to hear; to find comfort and strength in reading God's word, so that it is his own message to the soul, and his own balm that falls upon the heart; to be in fellowship with God's people in their high and exalted enjoyment; to feel assurance that the past is forgiven and that the future is bright with promise—in all of this there is a real and unmistakable experience that is full of peace and satisfaction. There is a joy of privilege and of fellowship with Christ which is the consummate joy of existence in the earthly life.—Herald and Presbyter.

SPURGEON AND RUSKIN.

Mr. Spurgeon used to give impromptu answers to students' questions, says the London Christian World. The questions and answers are now being published in the Sword and the Trowel. In the March number there is a reply to the question, "What is your view about the term 'eternal life?'" in which the following passages occur: Mr. Ruskin came to see me one day, many years ago, and amongst other things he said that the apostle Paul was a liar and that I was a fool! "Well," I replied, "let us keep the two things separate; so, first of all, tell me how you can prove that the apostle Paul was a liar." "He was no gentleman, and he was a liar, too,' answered Mr. Ruskin. "Oh, indeed!" I rejoined, "how do you make that out?" "Well, there was a Jewish gentleman came to him one day, and asked him a polite question, 'How are the dead raised up, and with what body do they come?' Paul began by saying to him, 'Thou fool,' which proved that the Apostle was no gentleman; and then he continued, 'That which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die'—which was a lie." "No," I answered, "it was not a lie; Paul was speaking the truth." "How do you prove that?" asked Mr. Ruskin. "Why," I replied, "very easily. What is death? Death is the resolution into its original elements of any compound substance which possessed life." Mr. Ruskin said, "That is the most extraordinary definition of death that I ever heard, but it is true." "Yes," I replied, "it is true; and that is what happens to the seed when it dies—it is resolved into its original elements, and the living germ which is within it becomes the centre and source of the new life that springs from it." "Then," asked Mr. Ruskin, "what do you mean when you talk of the death of the soul?" "I mean," I replied, "the separation of the soul from God; it was originally with God, and when it is separated from him it dies to God, that is its death, but that death is not non-existence. The separation of the soul from the body is the separation of that which quickened it from itself, and it falls back into its original condition." "Well," said Mr. Ruskin, "you have proved that Paul spoke the truth, but you have not proved him to be gentleman." "At all events," I answered, "the Apostle was as much a gentleman as you were just now when you called me a fool."—N. Y. Observer.

REV. J. HENRY SMITH, D. D.

This venerable and useful servant of God entered into rest, Monday morning, November 22d, 1897, in his happy home in Greensboro, N. C., with his wife and children about him. How greatly honored, how sincerely beloved and how deeply lamented—let the spontaneous tribute of affection and esteem from the church he so long and faithfully served, from the city in which he lived, from the State and the Synod to whose highest interests he had given so many years (nearly two score) of thought, study and rich experience—indeed from the whole Southern Church, and from Christians of all churches, let this loving, unaffected, and general and generous tribute of devotion and appreciative regard bear witness. How many hearts far away beat fast for grief, how many eyes that for years had not seen the loved face and form filled with tears, when the sad news reached them, "Dr. Smith is dead!"

But what a death! It is given to few of God's saints to have had such lavish and thoughtful attention during the weeks of expectancy, to have had the presence and devoted service of those dearest in life, and to have known such solace of human love and sympathy. How honored and how favored those, who heard the simple and sincere dying testimonies—the unabated affection for his people shown in his prayer for them—the evidence of unwavering confidence in the Saviour into whose hands he committed his spirit, so that he could say with almost his last breath :

"Cover my defenceless head
With the shadow of Thy wing."

"The chamber where the good man meets his fate,
Is privileged beyond the common walk
Of virtuous life, quite in the verge of heaven."

And so peacefully, as one whose work is done, he lay down to rest. "So He bringeth them into their desired haven."

Such an ideal death indeed became a life that might be also considered ideal.

Dr. Smith was the oldest son of Samuel R. and Margaret Smith, and was born in Lexington, Rockbridge county, Virginia, August 13th, 1820. He was prepared for college in his native town, and graduated from Washington College—now Washington and Lee University—June 29th, 1843. In the fall of the same year he entered Union Theological Seminary, Virginia, and taking the full course, received his certificate in 1846 and on the 24th of August of that year, was licensed by Lexington Presbytery, and transferred to West Hanover Presbytery. In September he took charge of the church at Pittsylvania Court House, Virginia, where he was ordained and installed July 31st, 1847. Being invited to take charge of Samuel Davies Institute in Halifax county, Virginia, as principal and professor of Greek and Latin, he went thither in the beginning of 1850, and conducted that institution with great success until 1854. At this time he was invited to Greensboro, N. C., and to Charlottesville, Virginia. Accepting the latter place, he preached at Charlottesville until 1859, when he accepted the renewed invitation to Greensboro and began his work there April 20th, 1859. Here he labored with great success, and ever widening usefulness until his death.

This is the brief record of an exceedingly busy, laborious, and eminently fruitful life.

I trust I shall be pardoned, if in making some estimate of its vast influence and inestimable value I speak with freedom and warmth. My personal love for my dear friend—one to whom I would defer as to a father, and to whom I could come as to a brother beloved—and my great admiration for his varied abilities and services may color my reckoning of his character and worth, and yet I am sure that those who knew him as I did, will agree with me in the details of measurement and could add much more.

Dr. Smith was a man of great natural abilities. He possessed a mind of fine grasp and admirably disciplined—logical, acute, analytic, broad and just. He was nice in his distinctions, accurate in his deductions, thorough in his mastery. It was not the least of his mental powers though not perhaps regarded as a part of mental power, that he had an insatiable love of learning, and was indefatigable in acquisition. He was not only a scholar but a student, and not only a student but a scholar. He was not content, if there were any department of knowelege bearing on his life-work, not to explore and study it, and to do more, to master it. So that in theology in all its branches, in mental and moral philosophy and kindred studies, in Biblical Introduction and Criticism, in the languages of the Scriptures, as well as in classic tongues, and also in the knowledge and use of the English language and literature, he was the peer of any of our professors whose life-work it is to know and teach these things. Thus it was that he was so "thoroughly furnished," and "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."

Indeed, Dr. Smith's conscientious diligence and intellectual industry would have rendered one of less native talent well equipped. It was a special characteristic of Dr. Smith's scholarship and attainment that he was both accurate and thorough. I remember once relating to him an incident I had heard my father tell of the scholarship of John Randolph of Roanoke, and as I faltered on a line of Virgil, not exactly certain as to the quotation, Dr. Smith instantly prompted me and referred to the book and line in the Æneid. When at another time venturing at family worship a remark as to the interpretation of a word from the significance of the Hebrew, after prayers he recalled the remark and showed me from the Hebrew word which he knew without the text before him, that I had erred. I told him whence I had gotten the idea, and that I had not carefully studied the passage. His reply in substance was : "Dig out the ore yourself, and your gold will be worth more to you."

He never wearied in study. And he was as indefatigable in his pastoral work. He visited with great attention to method, of course answering special demands. On my frequent visits to his study, I have been amazed at his attention to detail, and the careful systematic way he regulated his work. His memorandum-books showed every visit, every religious conversation, every prayer, in his methodical pastoral visitation. The name of every child baptized, of every one whose funeral he had conducted, of every one who had united with the church, of every one for whom he had performed the marriage ceremony the date of every service, sermon, visit or other pastoral duty performed were all recorded with utmost exactness. At any time he could turn and find the name and the date, for example, of any one who had joined the church under his ministry.

It was my great privilege to have been with him in times of religious interest in his church. I have preached during two seasons of this nature. It is sweet to think of those hallowed scenes

"When heaven comes down our souls to greet,
And glory crowns the mercy seat."

What I now wish to mention is Dr. Smith's tenderness and wisdom in dealing with inquirers. I remember with what gentleness and fatherly fidelity he would talk with timid girls and young people who would come to his study, how encouraging, how faithful! Just the right word said in the right spirit, it seemed to me.

Dr. Smith was not only a man of great native ability, wide, profound and elegant scholarship, untiring industry, wise, loving and patient as a pastor, but more than this and above all, he was a man of spiritual power. He was blessed with revival after revival in his own churches and he was much sought in protracted services and in seasons of religious interest in other churches, and his ministry was greatly honored by the Holy Spirit. He was a man of deep religious experience, with earnest convictions, and a positive creed. He had quick insight into the workings of the human heart specially under conviction. He had a most wonderful knowledge of the word, not as a student only but as a believer, and could make most apposite quotation and application of truth. I have often wondered at the power of his prayers after sermon, when without preaching, he would use the truth of the message so effectively. It was because "he endured as seeing Him who is invisible" and dwelt in communion with His Lord whom he lovingly served.

It was as preacher of the truth that Dr. Smith excelled. All his powers of mind, all his rich stores of knowledge, all his spiritual gifts and graces, all his intellectual and physical ability were made to contribute to this one great end. His great work was to preach. He prepared his discourses with scrupulous care. His sentences were finished with the skill and grace of the rhetorician. He drew lavishly on his accumulations of wide and varied study. He used with exquisite art apt citations of poetry and appropriate illustrations. He took the utmost pains in all the details of preparation, writing in full his discourse. Yet the sermon, work of thought and art as it was, was in his hands but a weapon, the sword of the Spirit which he used with masterly skill. He was one of the most solemn and convincing preachers to the conscience I ever heard. While he carried the fully written manuscript into the pulpit and read every word, his speaking was unfettered and most powerful. He had a strong, rich, full voice which he could use with magnificent effect. His articulation was admirable, his pronunciation faultless—so attentive was he to all details that contributed to this one end. He was a type and a model of a great preacher of the word.

His manner in the pulpit was most impressive. Dr. Smith was deeply moved with the preciousness and solemnity of the service of the sanctuary. His conduct of public worship was admirable and most fitting. "Let all things be done decently and in order" was a favorite guide to him. His reading of the hymn and the Scripture was luminous and impressive. His reception of members into the church, his administration of the sacraments of the church, his marriage ceremonies, his funeral services, were all so becoming, so appropriate, so beautiful, as to be always a source of comfort and instruction, and a model for the young ministers. How well Cowper describes him :

"Decent, solemn, chaste,
And natural in gesture; much impressed
Himself, as conscious of his awful charge,
And anxious mainly that the flock he feeds
May feel it too; affectionate in look
And tender in address, as well becomes
A messenger of grace to guilty men.

In the social and domestic circle Dr. Smith was the genial friend, the sunny-hearted companion, the affectionate husband and the wise and loving father. The sacred precincts of the family must not be invaded in these reminiscences—but among my most fragrant recollections are those connected with the happy home from which its honored head has been removed. It was indeed a happy home and Dr. Smith was as few men are a house-band. How faithful to a parent's responsibility he was, may be seen in the fact that of seven children reaching maturity all are Christians, and of five sons, three are honored ministers of the Word, and two are distinguished professors in collegiate institutions. Dr. Smith was always a welcome guest in every social circle. With a keen sense of humor, he was full of mirth, and enjoyed the companionship of quick-witted and cultivated friends. He was an admirable story-teller, and often kept a room bright with merriment. And even in such company, such was his store of beautiful thoughts and lines, he would let drop some delicate fancy, some exquisite gem of verse, that would be remembered after the echoes of laughter had died away.

Dr. Smith has been often and greatly honored by the Church. For more than thirty years he has been a most valued Director and Trustee of Union Theological Seminary. Repeatedly has he represented the Presbytery in the General Assembly and served as Chairman of important committees. His latest service was as Chairman of the Committee to arrange for the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the adoption of the Westminster Standards by the General Assembly—and the brilliant and successful execution of the Assembly's plan was largely due to his care and wisdom. This was an honor all the more notable because Dr. Smith was not a member of the General Assembly that nominated the Committee with himself as Chairman. It was a matter of general regret to all who attended the Charlotte Assembly and the Westminster Celebration, whether as commissioners or as visitors, that failing health prevented Dr. Smith from being present.

The long, industrious, honored and useful life has drawn to a close. Thousands have been converted under his ministry. What a greeting has he received on the shining shore! "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Dec. 15th, '97.

In these days of more or less great educational projects it may be difficult to arouse public interest in one that originated with George Washington, but nothing is impossible of accomplishment that has the earnest support of such influential and energetic women as those who have banded themselves together under the name of the George Washington Memorial Committee, which organized in this city last April for the purpose of carrying out the idea of George Washington for the establishment of a great National University in Washington, and which is now holding a series of meetings here to agree upon the best method of raising $250,000, to inaugurate the project by the erection of an "Administration building," to be used by the University of the United States. For many years the Senate has had a select committee on the University of the United States, and a bill for the establishment of the university was this week introduced by Senator Wellington, chairman of the Committee, just as a similar bill has been introduced in many preceding Congresses. This time the George Washington Memorial Committee intend to see if they cannot push the project further than the introduction of a bill. Owing to the condition of the government finances, it will be difficult to get favorable action from Congress upon any bill carrying a new appropriation, but, as I said, nothing is impossible which has the support that this bill has.

More beautiful words are seldom heard or read than those used by Dr. Hamlin over the remains of the late Gardner Greene Hubbard, who was this week laid to rest in beautiful Rock Creek cemetery. The following is from Dr. Hamlin's opening sentences: "Our Capital City has lost its first citizen in civil life; the world at large and the people have lost a benefactor. Science, philanthrophy, art, discovery, invention, have all been impoverished. Fraternal friendship and brotherly love have lost a noble exemplar. Family life has lost a model example from its midst. We have all suffered a personal loss in the man whose name we gather here to-day to pay a last sad tribute." His closing words were: "Who of us are not the poorer for his going, but the richer for his having lived with us? Good night, and may flights of angels sing thee to thy rest."

The average individual who is familiar with official life in Washington would probably say it was not calculated to improve our philanthropic instincts. Yet many officials have opportunities to be true philanthropists, in the broadest sense of the word, and some of them accept those opportunities. Among the latter is Hon. A. P. Greeley, Acting Commissioner of Patents, who personally conducted the investigation that resulted in breaking up the business of unprincipled men who robbed the inventors of the country while acting as their attorneys That was true philanthropy. Mr. Greely is now investigating complaints which have been sent to the Patent Office of swindlers who call themselves patent attorneys, who obtain money from those whose inventions have been patented in the United States, under the pretense of obtaining foreign patents and selling them for the inventor, knowing that valid foreign patents cannot be obtained for them, and that they cannot sell them. Mr. Greely's desire is to protect the inventors by driving dishonest men out of the business of soliciting patents, and that desire proves

HER GIFTS.

A dear little mother is waiting apart,
The mother of children three;
"My Lord," she cries, in the hush of her heart,
"Wilt Thou take a gift from me?
I have heard the angels sing Thy birth,
I have followed Thy shining star,
And here at the shrine of all the earth,
Lo, I and my children are!

"And all in the glow of the Christmas morn,
My gold to lay at Thy feet,
I am leading my darlings with care unworn,
With brows that are pure and sweet;
O, never had gems from the mines such worth
As the treasure to-day I bring
To the beautiful shrine of all the earth,
To the glorious Infant King!

"My children three, with their waving hair,
And the fearless look in their eyes—
They lisp Thy name in the vesper prayer,
And at matins when they rise;
Nothing they know of the dole and dearth
Of souls that with sin have striven,
They kneel at the shrine of all the earth—
'Of such is the kingdom of heaven.'"

They stand in the shadow of pine and fir;
They listen, and floating through
They catch the answer that's sent to her
Through a rift in the upper blue;
"Since the Christ-child came to the weary earth
No gifts are to Him so sweet
As the children's hearts, with their joy and mirth,
Lovingly brought to His feet!"

A DREAM OF CHRISTMAS.

It was Christmas Eve. I slept, and sleeping, dreamed that I was an angel. On exultant wing I flew "through the depths of the starry sky," it was such joy at last to be one of those "who do His pleasure."

Through the crystal air came distant earth sounds, and I knew that the bells were ringing in the Christmas morn. Nearer and nearer I drew to the abodes of men, and at last paused in my happy flight over one of their populous cities. Day was just breaking with unwonted splendor, and the earth children were waking from their slumbers Still the bells chimed, and my angel heart felt anew the wonder and the sweetness of the story they were telling, and I longed to know how much the sons of men did on this high day, "In His Name" who, so many years ago, "became Son of man," that He might make them "sons of God"

The busy hum of life increased, and unperceived I mingled with the throng, as they hurried to and fro. One I followed to his humble home. Little voices were singing of the Christ. Mother lips told the story of that Holy Child. Sweet was the carol of those youthful voices, and as the melody continued a wan but eager face pressed against the pane. The mother rose and opened the door.

"'In His Name,' little one, I bid you enter and join our Christmas feast."

"In whose name?" said the little child. Then the old sweet story from the manger to the Cross was told once more.

My ears never wearied of the tale, yet I turned to see what others were doing. Happy faces I saw many, and heard happy, cheery voices everywhere shouting "Merry Christmas." I had often watched them toiling, toiling, but to-day the weary load of care seemed lifted, as the busy feet ran on His errands.

I saw one man helping up his brother who had fallen, and when thanks came from the trembling lips he said, "I helped thee 'In His Name,' who long ago became a little child, for thee and me."

I entered a building over whose entrance was inscribed "The Name that is above every name." A throng of joyful children filled its many seats, and their youthful voices sang in jubilant notes,

Joy, joy, the bells ring loud and clear,
For Christ our Lord is near and dear,
Our hearts will never know a fear
On Christmas morning.

Out I passed into the crisp, cool air, and my eyes rested on a large building. "In His Name," it had been reared for His sick and suffering ones, and to-day, "in His name," willing feet were bringing gifts to His poor.

My heart throbbed with joy, and I thought, I will tell Him what is done. I will make glad His heart.

Back I went on my wonderful way. In my ears were the ringing of bells and the sweet sounds of praise, and in my heart was the message I had for Him.

Sweeter strains greeted me and I breathed purer air as I neared the Heavenly Land, and entering sought the Lord of the country. "Lord, dost thou know," I said, "how the sons of men remember Thee and Thy coming as a little child, to die on earth for their sakes?"

Then the Lord laid His pierced hand upon me and smiled, and I knew that He knew it all, and that His heart was glad.

I awoke, and my heart was sad because of the many that forget.—Abby C. Labaree, in Christian Intelligencer.

When a woman falls overboard she sometimes drowns when there is a life buoy just within a few strokes of her—all because she doesn't happen to see it. Sick people often perish in the same way. Help is within reach, but they don't know just where it is. They become discouraged and disgusted with taking medicines and give up in despair.

Mrs. Mary J. Stewart, of Saratoga, Santa Clara Co., Cal., in a letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I suffered for fourteen years with female weakness, nervousness and general debility, trying everything I could find to help me—all to no avail. Although I was thoroughly discouraged and disgusted with taking medicine when I heard of Dr. Pierce's medicines, I thought I would try once more to find relief. I took the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Favorite Prescription,' and too great praise cannot be given for the rapid relief they gave me. I am now free from the former troubles, and may God bless Dr. Pierce in all his undertakings to cure suffering humanity."

Thousands who had reached this forlorn and hopeless condition of body and mind have found new hope and rescue in the use of these marvelous remedies.

Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" is sent free in paper covers for 21 one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only; or, cloth-bound for 31 stamps. Address, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Rev. J. K. Thompson, of East Calais, Washington Co., Vt., writes concerning this great work: "I am charmed with the style and general subject matter of the entire work. I consider it a valuable addition to my carefully selected library. The purpose to set men right physically is a noble one. I am also pleased with the refined and at the same time fearless way in which you handle those delicate subjects pertaining to biology, thus making the work admirably fitted for the young."

CHRISTMAS CAROL.

There's a song in the air
There's a star in the sky!
There's a mother's deep prayer,
And a baby's low cry!
And the star rains its fire while the Beautiful sing,
For the manger of Bethlehem cradles a king.

There's a tumult of joy
O'er the wonderful birth,
For the virgin's sweet boy
Is the Lord of the earth,
Ah! the star rains its fire and the Beautiful sing,
For the manger of Bethlehem cradles a king?

In the light of that star
Lie the ages impearled;
And that song from afar
Has swept over the world,
Every hearth is aflame, and the beautiful sing
In the homes of the nations that Jesus is King.

We rejoice in the light,
And we echo the song
That comes down through the night
From the heavenly throng,
Ay! we shout to the lovely evangel they bring,
And we greet in His cradle our Saviour and King.

FRED'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF ONE—AND WHAT THEY DID.

One lovely day in November when it was more like spring than fall, two ladies were sitting on a broad veranda working and talking.

They were Mrs. Neil and Mrs. Lawton, and they were talking about mission work, and how to get people interested in missions.

Now, while they were talking Fred Lawton, who was the son of one of the ladies, was lying on the lawn near the porch, resting after a long spin on his bicycle and he could hear all that they said.

"What can we do about it? Our society is not composed of rich people, said Mrs. Neil."

"We can pray" replied Mrs. Lawton, with a bright smile and with a strong ring of faith in her voice.

"Yes, I know that, but don't you think that working and praying need to go hand in hand? Mrs. Neil's tones were rather doleful, and if Mrs. Lawton had not been such a cheery woman she would have been almost disheartened, for nearly all the members, including the President, talked the same way.

"Yes, my dear, they go together, but not always hand in hand, for I think praying goes ahead, gets directions and then points the way to working. I do not feel hopeless. Let us agree to do much praying tonight and until day after to-morrow to be shown how to stir up those who ought to work and to give. Our committee must not be allowed ever to fear debt. I feel that God will show us what to do."

In the meanwhile Fred Lawton was hearing all, and as he lay there, so still that his mother thought he was asleep, he was thinking to himself: "Why can't I do something for missions too?" Girls work and belong to societies. It seems strange that there are no more Boys' Mission Bands. I don't see why men and boys ought not to care for missions as well as women and girls. Jesus is just as much our Lord and Master, and has done as much for us, as He did for them."

You will see from these thoughts that were passing in Fred's mind, that he was a Christian. Yes, two years before, when he was twelve years old he had stood up and professed before God and men, that Jesus was his Saviour and had promised to follow Him. And he had tried to live as a Christian boy should. He read his Bible and prayed, and was a regular attendant at church and Sunday-school and prayer-meeting, but that may have been owing to his mother's faithful oversight. He remembered as he lay on the grass that he had never really done anything for Jesus.

Just then he recalled a story he had seen somewhere of a boy that asked his father who was a farmer, for money to put into the plate for missions, and his father, having an Irish potato in his hands, threw it to him and said:

"Take that! its all you'll get from me."

The boy took the potato, cut the slips and planted them in a piece of ground his father had allowed him for a garden, and from them he raised two bushels of very fine potatoes, and had enough left for a second planting. He got a good price for his potatoes, and was so encouraged that he planted more the next season, and made a great success of what he called his Missionary Potato Patch.

"I can't plant potatoes now thought Fred, I wonder what I can do instead?"

"What was it that whispered: "Chewing gum" in his ear just then? It must have been the good angel that we believe every one has.

Anyway, the next thing Fred said to himself was:

"Well, I can save about ten cents this week on chewing gum. I guess I can have a missionary society of one," and he laughed to himself at his own idea. "It will be like the boy that said he was head of his class, and when his father asked him how many there were in the class, he answered:

"Teacher and me!" I'll be President and Society too. I'll try planting potatoes in the spring if Uncle Tom will show me how, and in the meanwhile I'll watch out for a chance to make some money for my society." He had no sooner thought that, than he remembered what his mother had said about praying, going ahead and pointing out the way for working. His face grew more grave.

"I must ask God to help me too."

See how God was beginning to answer Mrs. Lawton's prayer already, by making Fred not only anxious to work for missions, but making him see the need of prayer too.

Dear Presbyterian: It has been a good long while since I wrote to you, and now I can write all by myself and not bother mother. I saw in your paper that there was a little girl wishing to know something about the "Missionary Game." I can tell her all about it. It is a very nice game to play with either four or twenty-four people "There are ninety-six cards in the pack arranged in twenty-four groups of four cards each," with the names of all our missionaries on them, the countries and stations where they live, A lady in Tampa Florida, Mrs. Barron Phillips got the game up. I played it myself. Mother got two packs just to see how the young people in the Missionary Soicety would like it and they were delighted with it. I am through my Shorter Catechism long, long ago, you know. I am studying "Scripture History" Mr. L. H. Wilson wrote and I like it.

him to be actuated by the spirit of true philanthrophy—a desire to benefit his fellows.

The Woman's Baptist Missionary Association, of the District of Columbia, held its quarterly meeting this week at the First Baptist church. In accordance with the rule alternating meetings between Foreign and Home Missions, this one was devoted to the former, including work among foreigners in the United States and Canada. There are fourteen churches represented in the association. Among the interesting addresses was that by Miss M. Bulhaimer, of Baltimore, who has labored among the Germans of that city for four years, and who has recently devoted one day in each week to working among the Germans in Washington; and the illustrated lecture by Dr. Sheldon Jackson, on "Religious Efforts in Alaska." His pictures told how the Alaskans and their surroundings look and his words told of their condition, mentally and physically, and of the sort of missionary work necessary to attract them.

The Washington Presbyterian Alliance, an organization for the promotion of church fellowship and extension, celebrated its eleventh anniversary by holding a meeting this week at the Western Presbyterian church. Hon John W. Foster, president of the alliance, presided, and Dr. Fiske, of Gunton Temple Memorial church, delivered an able address. The musical program was especially fine, consisting of the rendering by a large, selected choir of Bucks "Festival Te Deum," Gournods "King of Love," and Buck's "Fear Not Ye, O Israel."

The Keller Memorial Lutheran church was dedicated last Sunday. Three services were held, all crowded, and the collections to be applied to the church debt were in the neighborhood of $4,000. Among the out of town ministers who participated were Rev. C. Elvin Haupt, of Lancaster, Pa., a grandson of Dr. Benjamin Keller, after whom the Church is named; Rev. H. H. Weber, of York, Pa., General Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, and Rev. E. E. Baker, of Dayton Ohio. The new church, which in quite handsome, is located in the eastern section of the city.

THINGS USEFUL.

It is not generally known that rats cannot resist sunflower seeds. A trap baited with these seeds is the most effective method of catching them.

Lemon Tapioca.—Two tablespoonfuls tapioca soaked over night in half cupful of water. Add half cupful of cold water in the morning, the peeled rind of a lemon, and boil until clear. Then take out the rind, add the juice of the lemon extract, half cupful each of sugar and boiling water, a pinch of salt and boil. Mold and serve with sugar cream.

Tapioca Whip.—Soak three tablespoonfuls of fine tapioca in water for an hour. Drain thoroughly, add one quart of milk and cook in a double boiler until the tapioca looks clear. Separate the whites and yolks of four eggs; beat the yolks with four tablespoonfuls of sugar, add to the tapioca and stir until slightly thicker; whip the whites of two of the eggs to a stiff, dry froth and add to the tapioca, stirring over the fire for two minutes. Use teaspoonful of vanilla. Whip the two remaining whites to a stiff meringue with two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar, heap on top of the cold tapioca whip and serve.

A BACKWARD GLANCE.

For all the blessings of the past
That Thou hast on our pathway cast;
The Springtimes' dress of verdant green,
The Summer clothed in beauty's sheen
The Autumn glory everywhere
And Winter's gladness and good cheer;
For these we thank Thee, Lord, to day
And for a grateful heart we pray.

But not alone for these, oh Lord,
We thank Thee for Thy Open Word,
For noble lives, for generous deeds
For gracious words, and plenteous seeds
Of loving kindness sown by Thee
And which on every hand we see.

Nor would we now forget to count
The sighs and tears that frequent mount
Unto both lips and eyes, yea, Lord
And griefs that pierce us like a sword,
For these, and for all care and pain
We're grateful as the earth for rain.
Our hearts have learned at last to say;
"Bless us O, Lord, in Thine own way."

For as the months have rapid flown
Our faith and trust have stronger grown,
And when to Nature's book we turn
That we her lesson too may learn,
We find that not alone by sun
Is truest growth and beauty won,
But clouds and cold must have their day,
For growth and beauty come that way!

REV. JAMES PHILLIPS, D. D.

The life of a teacher has long been proverbially barren of incident, or of material to furnish a biographical memoir interesting to the public. If this be true even in these days of unparalleled opportunity for frequent change of scene and intercourse with the world, it is not easy to depict the seclusion and monotony of that life in the heart of North Carolina in the first half of the century now closing.

Yet there were then in various parts of the State men of this and other countries who loved the teacher's work regardless of its surroundings and gave their lives to it cheerfully, with no ambition beyond that of doing their duty as they understood it. We are not to estimate them, or their work and its results by the lights of the present day. What were their environments? What was required of them? What material had they to work upon? How were they assisted or opposed?

With the lives of some of those modest, laborious and faithful teachers, both in the University of North Carolina and outside of it, this present writer was long familiar, and without arrogating the ability to gauge and estimate them properly, or to take "large views", of their influence upon their time, I feel competent to say that they at least held out no false lights. What they loved and sought for and endeavored to impart was truth, the whole of it, and nothing else. Therefore we do them honor now. As a body those men were fully on a level with their age. Some of them were far in advance of it.

James Phillips, who gave forty-one years of uninterrupted and single-minded service to the University of North Carolina was born near London in 1792. His father was a clergyman of the Church of England and he was of course reared in that communion. His education he obtained partly at home and partly by his own strenuous efforts. He left his father's house at the age of seventeen, and fixed himself at Portsmouth, partly to find employment and partly to finish his education. Portsmouth was then, in the time of the great war with France, a great naval and military station crowded with military officers, intercourse with whom gave Mr. Phillips opportunity for acquiring considerable proficiency in military science, for which he retained a fondness during life. Here his strong natural taste for mathematics received a great impulse and development. In the eight or nine years he was at Portsmouth he was diligently preparing himself to be a teacher. In the year 1818, accompanied by an older brother he came to America, and established in Harlem, then a suburb of New York City, what soon proved to be a flourishing classical and mathematical school. There were at that time in New York a number of American and British mathematicians; among them were such men as McNulty, Ryan, Strong and Adrian. They had organized a Mathematical Club, of which Mr. Phillips became a member and was soon recognized as an enthusiastic student and a regular contributor to its literary and scientific publications.

In 1821, he married Miss Julia Vermeule of Plainfield, New Jersey. He seemed now happily located for life. His scientific associations he particularly prized. Suddenly his life was changed. His friend Dr. Adrian, then Professor in the college at New Brunswick, urged him in 1826, to apply for the Chair of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy at Chapel Hill, just then become vacant. The strongest inducement brought to bear was that in a University he would be able to concentrate his energies on the study and advancement of his favorite science as he could not do at the head of a school. Mr. Phillips applied, was elected and removed with his little family to Chapel Hill in May, and entered upon his duties in the University the following August. His first home was in the western half of the house now belonging to Mrs. Graves. After a few years he removed to that now occupied by Dr. Venable and there remained till his death.

The condition of the University at that time was far from prosperous and the appearance of things around was depressing. In after life he often spoke of the disappointment with which he surveyed the field. But for Dr. Caldwell's influence and sympathy he would not have remained. Dr. Caldwell was himself an ardent mathematician and a man of congenial tastes and temper. They formed a warm friendship. In the other members of the Faculty—Professors Andrews, Hentz, Hooper and Mitchell he found colleagues who would have shone in any college in America.

The new comer entered on his work cheerfully and with good resolution. Text-books being scarce, he prepared for the use of his classes treatises in Algebra, Trigonometry and Differential and Integral Calculus. He was especially fond of the French mathematicians and made many elegant translations from them for his own use. He gathered around him the great folios of the masters, La Place, La Sande, Delambre, Newton, Ferguson, Hutton. He wrote with great elegance and precision many elaborate lectures in Natural Philosophy delivered to his classes. Whatever he undertook to do he would do conscientiously. To the last day of his life he prepared and thought over every recitation he was to hear in college as carefully as if he himself was to recite it to a higher master.

The distance at which North Carolina lay in those days from the centres and stimulants of intellectual life, the difficulties of travel, the slowness of intercommunication were felt to be serious disadvantages to the handful of men who were struggling to hold a light aloft in the State. They gradually became isolated. Some of them gave it up and went where they found wider work and better co-operation than North Carolina had to give.

As a teacher Dr. Phillips' methods and manner to his pupils were largely determined by his own mental peculiarities. Above all things for himself and others he desired accuracy, truth, system and clear comprehension of first principles. To the habitually idle student, to one who was shirking, or who had been detected in vicious courses, he would be repellant, scarcely conceal-

THINGS USEFUL.

It is not generally known that rats cannot resist sunflower seeds. A trap baited with these seeds is the most effective method of catching them.

Lemon Tapioca.—Two tablespoonfuls tapioca soaked over night in half cupful of water. Add half cupful of cold water in the morning, the peeled rind of a lemon, and boil until clear. Then take out the rind, add the juice of the lemon extract, half cupful each of sugar and boiling water, a pinch of salt and boil. Mold and serve with sugar cream.

Tapioca Whip.—Soak three tablespoonfuls of fine tapioca in water for an hour. Drain thoroughly, add one quart of milk and cook in a double boiler until the tapioca looks clear. Separate the whites and yolks of four eggs; beat the yolks with four tablespoonfuls of sugar, add to the tapioca and stir until slightly thicker; whip the whites of two of the eggs to a stiff, dry froth and add to the tapioca, stirring over the fire for two minutes. Use teaspoonful of vanilla. Whip the two remaining whites to a stiff meringue with two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar, heap on top of the cold tapioca whip and serve.

IN PARTING.

We wish to say a word, in parting, as to the truth concerning consecration and its power in our lives through the life of Christ by the Holy Spirit. Two weeks ago we copied from the Baltimore Sun an article on "The Most Popular English hymn," from which we take this: "There is no doubt of the immense favor of "Rock of Ages," among English speaking religious people. Toplady, a Calvinistic vicar of an English parish, wrote it for the purpose of assailing John Wesley's doctrine of "entire sanctification," but he died without having the slightest idea that it was destined to immortality." We will take that hymn to express the truth for which we have contended and as a final residuum of the truth for which "The Keswick Movement" is testifying. That will show at once the mistake of critics who hold that the teaching at Keswick and by such men as Rev. F. B. Meyer, Rev. Geo. H. C. Macgregor and Rev. Andrew Murray is novel in the sense of being new or innovating.

Our friends who have taken fright at the tendencies of teaching by some who go to Keswick or even teach there, will certainly adopt, as they so long have loved and used, the lines of Toplady:

"Let the water and the blood,
"From thy wounded side which flowed;
"Be of sin the double cure,
"Cleanse me from its guilt and power.

And we will heartily agree to go with them in this. Here is the truth we hold and believe to be taught in the Scriptures. "The blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin." That is the blood of Christ shed for us made atonement such that all the redeemed are cleansed every moment from the guilt of sin. It is not meant that the blood of Christ in response to any act of faith, or consecration, or surrender will at once so triumph over sin or avail to destroy its pollution or obliterate or eradicate it that the believer could or should attain to entire sanctification, or sinless perfection. The blood cleanseth, is cleansing, from the guilt of all sin.

The Calvinist is correctly Calvinistic in doctrine to add the words "and power." This is part of "the double cure" provided by "the water and the blood," from the riven side of Christ. Water is the symbol of the presence and work of the Holy Ghost proceeding from the death of Christ. Our Lord made use of this symbolism, when he said to the Samaritan woman concerning the believer: "The water that I shall give him, shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life." Jno. iv. 14. The Evangelist John (vii. 29,) explains a similar saying of our Lord; "But this spake He of the Spirit, which they that believe on Him should receive." We all agree thus far. The only difference is as to the cleansing by the Spirit from the power of sin. We hold with Toplady that to hide self in the riven side of Christ is to secure the double cure from the guilt "and power" of sin. Zacharias declared that according to the oath to Abraham, God had visited and redeemed His people, "that we being delivered out of the hand (power) of our enemies, might serve Him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before Him all the days of our life." Luke i. 74, 75.

The Holy Spirit takes His abode in every believer at regeneration to continue and complete His consecration unto sanctification. That is but one part of His work. Our Lord breathed upon His disciples according to John xx. 22, and said, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost." That was seemingly a fulfillment of John xiv. Again at Pentecost the Holy Ghost came and they were all filled to bear testimony to Christ crucified, risen and ascended. Again Galatians iii, speaks of having begun in the Spirit, and being made perfect in the flesh, as the inconsistency of Galatian Christians. Now we seek to have the fulfillment of "the promise of the Spirit." Paul says "we may receive the promise of the Spirit through faith." Our understanding is that the Scriptures in such and similar passages teach that provision was made in the death of Christ not only that we might be cleansed by His blood from the guilt of sin, but by His life, ministered by the Holy Spirit we shall be saved from the power of sin. The danger lies in pressing this to mean cleansing from the presence of sin, and the differences of view arise as to how and on what conditions the Spirit cleanseth from the power of sin. We hold with the apostle in the whole context of Rom. vi. 1–14, which he closes with the words: "But yield yourselves unto God as those who are alive from the dead; and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God. For sin shall not have dominion over you; for ye are not under the law, but under grace."

VALEDICTORY.

With this issue will terminate the writer's connection with the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN. Something over twenty-three years ago at the call of God as we esteem it, we took up the work of management of this paper, and at the call of God, not less unmistakably made known, now we lay it down. We entered upon our duties with distrust and fear; we retire from them not without satisfaction, yet with deep regret. Satisfaction in the thought that others abler than we will take upon them the burden and the cares and the responsibilities and that the mission the paper is called to fulfill will be more efficiently promoted by the change.

It has been on the whole congenial work. Sometimes the shadows have been very dark and the nights at times seemed very long. But the clouds passed on and the gladsome light of the day appeared. The guiding hand of God was never absent though not always could that hand be seen, and friends, O, such friends! were always ready to help when help was sorely needed.

Within the past few weeks the letters received from friends, some of whom we had known and loved for long and some whose faces we have never seen, have sent such kindly messages, have expressed such sense of benefit received, have given such thanks to God for our poor service as have made us hope that during our editorial and other labors we have not lived in vain. Our heart goes out to them, for it was the blessing that was craved; to have some evidence that God had blessed these labors to the good of others.

But lest we should seem to take honor beyond what is due let us say that to others mainly the meed of praise or commendation belongs. We have never been without helpers, as we have said, helpers without whose help the paper had not been. To them under God let the praise be given.

To the brethren and the friends who have stood by the paper in sustaining its patronage, and in enriching its columns with their pens—to one and all we render our hearty thanks. It were impossible in twenty years service that no friction should occur, but now in parting we crave forgiveness of any whom we may have offended, and beg that all the love and service which has been extended to the PRESBYTERIAN in the past, and many fold more, may be given to those who take it in charge.

Invoking God's blessing upon the patrons, friends and readers of the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN, we give our closing word: Farewell!

REV. W. G. VARDELL, we learn from the Charlotte Observer, died on Thursday last at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Wm. J. Martin, in Davidson, N. C. Mr. Vardell's charges have been for many years churches near Charleston. His son, Rev. Charles G. Vardell, of Red Springs, another son and a daughter beside Mrs. Martin were at his bedside when he died.

The remains were taken to Summerville for interment.

MISCELLANIES OF REV. THOMAS E. PECK, D. D., LL.D., Vol. iii, Pp. 421. Price $3. Richmond, Va. Presbyterian Committee of Publication, Main Street.

This third volume completes the set of selected writings of the honored and beloved teacher and preacher of Union Seminary. There is added an index to the three volumes. This volume, with merit in general equal to the former which we have been pleased to commend in this paper, has especial value as a commentary on the Acts of the Apostles, and the class teaching of Professor Peck on this volume. With the sermons, and sermon sketches on other texts this volume is of exceptional value. It will be of permanent worth to every preacher and teacher of the Word. It is in style, binding and press work a companion of the other volumes of the set. In this Dr. Peck appears at his best and that is all that needs to be said.

MR. CHARLES F. BELL died in this city on Christmas Day—in the 60th year of his age. The large concourse at his funeral, of persons in all conditions of life attested the appreciation of his worth. He was not blessed with worldly wealth, nor called to lead large undertakings, but he was rich toward God and in an humble walk with Him he adorned the doctrine of His Lord and Saviour. He was the senior elder of St. Andrew's church and as testified by his pastor was one whose godly life taught more effectually than most eloquent sermons could. For very many years he had lived near the cross and his Christlike spirit and Christian counsel had been of greatest encouragement and help to the pastor and to his brethren of the session. To those who knew him less intimately he was known as frank and candid in his speech and manner yet always kind. The children loved him, and in the great congregation the fervor of his prayers and the humility of his deportment bespoke that he had been with Christ and learned of Him.

THE FAMILY ALTAR. This little book of 30 pages, price in cloth 20 cents, in paper 10 cents, is a valuable volume of "Helps and suggestions for family worship," by Annie E. Wilson. At the close are "Model Prayers" for twice a day, morning and evening for a week. This will be a great help to those who wish to hold family worship and are timid about praying. It is well that our Committee has prepared such a book at Richmond and at so small a cost. It will be of great value. We now recall an instance where the use of such a book enabled the husband to hold family worship and to grow into leading in prayer at the church prayer-meeting with great acceptance and blessing.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS, Publishers, New York, among their Heroes of the Nations justly class Robert E. Lee. He takes his place on the roll with Nelson, Napoleon, Gustavus Adolphus, Grant, Charles XII, Robert Bruce and others, and is not unclassed as a representative historical character with the others who were distinguished in the authoritative walks of civil life.

They did well—Putnam's Sons—to secure as the author of "Robert E. Lee and the Southern Confederacy," Dr. Henry Alexander White, Professor in Washington and Lee University. Entirely without asperity, but with proper plainness of speech Dr. White states those principles which were held by General Lee in common, almost universally in fact, with intelligent men of the South, and shows how these principles were perverted and the rights of the States of the South were over-ridden. Those chapters which treat of the course of General Lee towards the government during the days of reconstruction are exceedingly interesting. They represent his patriotism as allied with soundest political sagacity and dominated by the purest Christian principles. This part of the book it of itself enough to stamp the subject of it as a Christian hero, but the entire volume is a gracefully written and properly compacted sketch of the man who, of all the heroes of the Southern Confederacy, will stand through all time as the representative of its principles and the exemplar of its moral and heroic virtues.

THE "INTERESTING News from Africa," to be found on 6th page, was written by Mr. Verner on July 28th, and, as appears from the postmarks on the envelope, was forwarded by Bateau Poste the same day. It did not start from Leopoldsville until October 24th and Boma Nov. 2d. It reached us December 24th. The information is highly interesting nevertheless.

THE GREATER FOLLY.

Were a house to be in flames tomorrow, and were a mother to seize her gold, and her jewels, and her rings, and rush from the flames with them, and forget her infant slumbering in its cradle, she would neither be so inhuman nor so inconsistent as that man who cares for the toys of a day, and thinks nothing and cares nothing about a soul that stands in eternal jeopardy every hour if not justified and pardoned.—Selected.

The present time—youngest born of eternity, child and heir of all the past times with their good and evil, and parent of all the future—is ever a "new era" to the thinking man. * * * To know it, and what it bids us do, is ever the sum of knowledge for all of us.—Thomas Carlyle.

ing the disfavor with which he regarded him.

He was no doubt too much of a martinet in all his requirements. He was too vigorously exact, too needlessly minute; he wanted every step of a process, and to the average heedless and immature minds with which he had to deal, his methods were apt to be worrying and confusing.

In truth, Pedagogy, as we now call it had not then been reduced to a science. "Sweetness and light" had not been invoked in the school-rooms. Dr. Phillips believed in hard work, in unaided effort; in the wholesome influences of sustained thought on a given subject, as Englishmen have always been prone to do, he valued a victory the more for its having cost much blood. To him who would not strive for the mastery he was not an inspiring teacher. But he was always ready to help when he saw that real honest effort had failed. In such case he would spare no pains. Years after his death one of the most honored and useful ministers in the Episcopal Church declared on his last visit to Chapel Hill that he owed all he had accomplished in life to Dr. Phillips' severity in the class-room and his cordial encouragement and assistance outside of it.

Such vigorous discipline told well on superior minds and to the efficacy of his teaching he received from time to time high tribute from competent judges. It was the "survival of the fittest."

Dr. Phillips owed his first serious interest in religion to his intimacy with Dr. Caldwell who was a devout man though not an awakening preacher; and next, to the preaching of the Rev. Dr. Nettleton, a noted evangelist of the Presbyterian Church in the years 1830–'35. From this time he ceased to be a mere teacher of science. To the studies of the Professor he added the diligent perusal of religious works and the stiffest Calvinistic Theology. In this Dr. Caldwell was his guide, and to the Doctor's influence must be ascribed his departure from the Episcopal Church, (to which his adherence had long been merely nominal) and his connection with the Presbyterian. He soon became notably active in all Christian duties; in the prayer-meetings, Sunday-school and religious conferences his zeal and fervor were such that Dr. Hooper declared he put other Christian workers around to the blush, and gave a new tone to religious life in the community. Dr. Caldwell pronounceed that in his addresses he "eclipsed all the preachers."

It is to be noted that he at once turned his attention to the religious instruction of the colored people, many of whom had shared in the work of grace going on. He established a prayer-meeting and Sunday afternoon exercises for them. To the last of his life he declared that he loved to preach to that race and found them always among his best auditors. We who live sixty or more years thereafter may remark that in this especial work his mantle has fallen, not upon a son, but on a grandson and a great grandson who are now devoting themselves to this work, fired with the same zeal for the rescue and elevation of our colored brethren. Thus do our works follow us long after we ourselves are called to rest. Prof. Phillips, not feeling himself thoroughly prepared for so important a work somewhat reluctantly yielded to the unanimous counsel and entreaty of his friends in Orange Presbytery and entered the ministry as licentiate in 1833. This was at New Hope church. He was ordained at Hillsboro in 1835. He was never regularly in the pastoral office, but acted as a supply to various vacant churches in Orange county, and for a short time at Pittsboro. For the greater part of his ministerial life, he preached with great punctuality at New Hope. He became much attached to that steadygoing community, whose children he baptized for twenty-five years, and they heartily returned his affection. New Hope was the scene of his earliest labors. He knew the people who formed the congregation well, and valued them for the manly simplicity, intelligence, integrity and sobriety which to this day characterize their descendants. In the closing years of his life he acted as stated supply to the church in Chapel Hill, in the building up of which and the erection of its place of worship he had been largely instrumental.

Dr. Phillips' sermons were seldom written out, but his notes were full and precisely arranged. As he never once went to a college recitation without careful revision of the lesson, so he never preached without serious study of the subject. He enjoyed study—thought, marshalling of ideas, clinching of argument. Presbyterians love instructive preaching and Dr. Phillips always commanded their attention. "Yes, Doctor"—said a New Hope lady who had married and gone away, but returned to enjoy a communion season with her own people, "I have come back for a good meal of victuals."

His manner always possessed great warmth. He might be too long, but he was never dull. The animated pungent personal application rising often into real eloquence always reached and thrilled the soul.

No man more affectionately approved and adopted the forms and doctrines of the Presbyterian Church. He fed upon the masculine theology of John Calvin and never shunned to declare the whole counsel of God as that master hath interpreted it. In his later years he studied the English non-conformist divines rather to the inquiry of his own style of expression. That souls were blessed by his preaching and many brought into the kingdom there was ample evidence, not only during his life, but after his death. In every obituary notice of him enthusiastic reference was made to his gift in prayer—public and private. Warm, tender, heart-felt, he took you to the throne. Still, though thirty years have passed, in the ears of those who recall him sound the tones of his petitions for the abundant entrance and the everlating joy.

Dr. Phillips' life, after his entrance into the ministry, and thus undertaking double work, became more and more absorbed in his studies. Nothing was allowed to interfere with his severe application to the duties of his Professorship. The lives of very few teachers show such a record of unvarying punctuality and concentration.

After Dr. Caldwell's death his contributions to scientific journals gradually ceased, and relations with scholars abroad were suspended. His last visit to the Northern States was in 1851, when he was appointed visitor to West Point. For many years the light in his study window was noted as the last seen in the village at night. His vacations were spent in fulfilling appointment made for him by Presbytery and in attending ecclesiastical meetings. He would deplore a vacation in which he had been unable to meet such friends as Dr. Alex. Wilson, or Dr. Harding, or Dr. Lacy, or Wm. J. Bingham the elder.

Retired though he was in scholarly seclusion he was a sociable man. He loved a friend's face and a friendly chat and no man more enjoyed a hearty laugh. His tastes and personal habits were simple and self-denying. Aside from his library he spent little on himself while his hand and his purse were freely open to the calls of others.

To the last of his life he liked to take his cane and go down into the village of a Saturday morning and chat with the merchants in their stores, or call on an old neighbor. His relations with all men were hearty and kindly though he was not a talker nor ever curious about other men's matters. As he never asked advice he never liked to give it, being in many respects an Englishman and insular. Bluff, abrupt, he might often be in manner, but his heart of oak was sound. Little children loved him and claimed him for a playfellow. To women he was invariably courteous.

With ex-Gov. Swain, Dr. Caldwell's successor in the Presidency, Dr. Phillips' relations were not so intimate for some years, nor did he always approve of the Governor's policy in the management of the University. Latterly they grew into confidential intercourse, especially in religious matters. Gov. Swain, who survived the Dr. only about eighteen months, spoke on his death-bed of these conversations with affectionate warmth. He said that shortly before the Dr's. death he asked him how he knew himself to be Christian—a child of God? Adding that as to himself his best proof was that he loved to pray.

"Well, Governor"—replied the Dr. his eyes at once filling—"that is all that I can say. I too love to pray, and I do pray all the time."

The civil war swept off the whole body of the students of the University and all the young men then in the Faculty. The elders stood in their lot, sharing in all the griefs and privations of the time. The days of reconstruction were still darker, and while the University in common with the whole Southern country was struggling to regain its feet in poverty, dismay and humiliation, Dr. Phillips was suddenly summoned to come up higher. On a black March morning in 1867, while on the rostrum in the University chapel waiting for the students to assemble for morning prayers, with his class-room key and Peirce's Plane and Solid Geometry in his hand, he fell from his chair to the floor and died without a struggle, surrounded by the boys. They took him in their arms to his home and laid him down in his library.

"Dead he lay among his books
The peace of God, in all his looks."

On the 16th of March he was interred in the Chapel Hill cemetery, Rev. Dr. Hepburn of the University conducting the services. His wife and son Charles now rest beside him.

We may repeat the closing words of Gov. Swain's obituary of him: "A better, braver, nobler man I have never known."

The above sketch has been largely compiled from a memorial address delivered in the University Chapel by Dr. Hepburn and from various obituary notices which appeared at the time. The likeness furnished is from an engraving of an old portrait painted by the late Wm Garl Browne when Dr. Phillips was about sixty years old.

THE MINISTER'S RESPONSIBILITY.

BY REV. J. E. WINECOFF.

There is a growing tendency to measure the efficiency of a minister by the number of names which he adds to the roll of communicants. In the Christian Observer, a discussion has been going on for nearly two months over the figures of Rev. J. A. Vance, "That 1,241 of our 2,812 churches report not a single addition on profession of faith during an entire year." The majority of these articles, coming from different parts of the country, accord with the belief that the ministers in charge are "mainly responsible for this failure;" that "where souls are not brought to Christ, the pastor has not done his duty in personal efforts among the people."

All such talk is unscriptural, un-Presbyterian and contrary to the experience of many an earnest minister, and it may be fruitful of great evil in the Church. It is one thing to receive members on "profession" of faith, and another thing to receive members on a genuine faith; and all will admit that unconverted souls can do more harm in the church than out of the church.

It is rather startling, and somewhat alarming, to hear Presbyterians intimating that men are responsible for the conversion of souls. The responsibility which God has laid on the shoulders of men may be learned in such passages as these: "Preach the Word, be instant in season, out of season;" "Declare the whole counsel of God;" be "Thoroughly furnished;" "Study to show thyself approved of God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed." But as to the result, after this has been done, that is a responsibility which God has reserved to Himself.

And, in order that we may be encouraged still to go forward without murmuring, when there have been no visible results of our labors, God has said, "The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, * * * and they shall turn away their ears from the truth;" nevertheless, "Speak unto them * * * whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear."

The last eight or ten years mark an era in the Presbyterian Church, for aggressive work. Her ministers have been "coming down off of their stilts and "mixing" with the people, in a way they had not formerly done. Why, then, do we just now hear this great wail about the deadness in the Church? and why this reasoning from effect to cause, (instead of looking at the facts) and arriving at the conclusion that ministers have not done their duty?

How can so many of us overlook the fact that, owing to this very aggressive movement, many small churches have been organized, which could not be sufficiently cared for, and around which there was very little Presbyterian material left? It will require time for some of these churches to manifest a marked progress. The timber will first have to be grown; and Presbyterian timber is something which cannot be grown in a year.

But if ministers are "responsible" for any apathy in the Church, it may be in a way that we have not been thinking of. It is possible that we are suffering a reaction due to the methods which some of us had adopted in order to add members on "profession" of faith.

Not long since, the writer asked an intelligent young man if he was a member of the church. "Yes; but I made a great mistake when I joined the church," was the answer. "Why, how was that?" "I went in under excitement." "But do you not feel like living up to the profession you made?" "No; I feel disgusted with the whole affair."

If all persons would speak their minds as freely as this young man did, we should doubtless find that there are thousands in the Church, who were received under a momentary impulse and now, under a natural reaction, are feeling "disgusted with the whole affair;" and it would not be quite so serious, if this reaction affected the individuals only, but it must necessarily affect the whole Church. It is dangerous to work up a community to a pitch of physical enthusiasm which cannot be sustained. The reaction will follow inevitably, and leave the church in a lower state of apathy, than it had been before.

We use to boast that the Presbyterian Church was a Church which made progress by a steady, and certain, growth, and not by fits and starts interspersed with lamentable relapses: but it is to be feared that the time for such a boast is beginning to pass away.

And here it is that we may find, if we look carefully, the greatest sin that lies at the door of the ministry. If there is really anything alarming in the state of the Church, it is probably due mainly to a burden of unregenerated members which she is carrying. This may be killing her. Of course, the ministry cannot be blamed for all this: but an inordinate desire to receive members—a desire which would use questionable and unscriptural methods to gain this end—will go a long way toward drawing persons into the Church, whose hearts have not been renewed by the Holy Spirit.

Thus the present drift, towards judging the work of a minister by the number of members he adds to the church on profession of faith, would tend to multiply in the churches the forces which are killing her; it would spur on men to an effort to create life in the Church with human inventions which will be most effective—in adding dead weights.

Here is the way it may work after awhile, if we do not call a halt. Rev. Obadiah Newschool has been laboring in a field where environment has been against him, and into which it was his misfortune to enter in the seed time, instead of the harvest time. His countenance now wears a troubled expression. What is it that is destroying his peace. "Am I 'approved of God?'" No; such a question has not entered his mind for a quite a while. But he remembers that eleven whole months have passed since there has been an addition to his church. He has talked to the young people about joining the church, and has smiled and frowned upon them, until they begin to shun his presence, and he is almost in despair.

But on the next Sabbath the Rev. Newschool is seated in a meeting of the session, after having made an affectionate and eloquent appeal, from the pulpit for additions to the church. His eyes brighten, and, it we mistake not, the tears are about to start, as a young man presents himself before the bench, "Ah!" thinks the minister, "my reputation is saved; I shall not be counted out entirely." And if he could speak out the thoughts of his heart, he would say something like this: "You want to connect yourself with the church? Well, that will not be a hard matter. It will be easy to get a 'profession' out of you. We'll make your examination very light, for we don't intend to let you get out of here until your name is enrolled and we can report a number added on profession of faith during the past year."

We hope that this picture is overdrawn, even for the remotest future; but really, of all the alarming things in the present state of the Church, this tendency to count the work of a minister for nothing unless he is continually adding names to the list of members, is most alarming. There is already too great an eagerness to welcome new members, almost regardless of whether they stand the tests of faith or not, so each one counts for a unit when we come to make out our reports.

Let us pull down this new standard, and put back the Divine standard of ministerial requirement, that we may be "approved of God," whether we gain the praise of men, or not. Our aggressive movement is in the right direction; but it will be attended with serious evils, unless we take along with it some of our old methods of caution.

THE ASSEMBLY'S FORM OF BEQUEST.

I do hereby give and bequeath to the Trustees of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States (popularly known as the Southern Presbyterian Church) the sum of ..... Dollars for the benefit of there name cause to which the legacy is given.]

All remittances for the Presbyterian Orphans' Home at Barium Springs, N.C., should be made to P. M. Brown, treasurer, Charlotte, N. C.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Mt. Airy:—Rev. M. W. Doggett, D. D., of Burlington, came here Nov. 23d, and held a series of meetings in the Presbyterian church for nine days, holding two services a day. Although we had some bad weather, yet the services were well attended. Dr. Doggett preached with great power. His sermons were clear and simple. Christians were revived, and five made a profession of their faith in Christ, and three joined our church. We hope and pray that the seed that has been sown may yield an abundant harvest. To God be all the praise.

Greenville:—At the recent dedication services of the church here the sermon was preached by Rev. J. N. H. Summerell, the founder and first pastor of the church but now of Anderson, S. C.

Charlotte:—Fifty-seven persons have been added to the membership of the First Presbyterian church during the present year. Rev. Dr. J. R. Howerton, pastor.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Enoree:—Services conducted by Rev. S. C. Todd resulted in twenty confessions of faith. Six persons united with the Presbyterian church by profession of faith and two by letter. Upon the arrival of Rev. W. L. Boggs, evangelist of Enoree Presbytery, Dr. J. H. Allan, and Mr. H. McKee were ordained and installed elders. This church which has been without a pastor since early spring will soon have regular preaching.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Royal Church, Fayette County:—On Sunday, December 5th, six persons were received into this church, four of them upon profession. This made a pleasant close to the eighteen months' pastorate of the Rev. H. W. McLaughlin, during which time this church has received forty-five members. Royal and Fire Creek churches, which are now left vacant by the removal of Mr. McLaughlin to Hampton, Va., where he has accepted a call, are in a healthy condition, and expect to call a pastor at once.—Central Presbyterian.

MISSISSIPPI.

Greenville:—Rev John W. Primrose, D. D., writes: Have just returned from Synod of Mississippi, held at Munroe, La. The pastor of the church there Dr. Bowen was made moderator. The Presbytery of Central Mississippi met at same time and place (15th), myself moderator. The hospstality and people reminded me of the Old North State. There were only about sixty present. Central Mississippi Presbytery meets in the spring at Jackson; the Synod next fall at Vicksburg Dr. Palmer does not now through infirmity of age attend the courts.

MISSOURI.

Deer Park:—Messrs. J. A. Thomas and Harvey Robinson were ordained and installed deacons on Sunday the 12th inst. Rev. C. E. Hickok, pastor.

St. Louis:—Last Sunday, Dec. 12th, was a high day in the People's Church. It witnessed the entrance of the congregation into their new house of worship, the dedication of the building, and the installation of the pastor-elect, the Rev. J. M. Spencer. Dr. Cannon preached the dedication sermon, and other parts of the service were by brethren of the Northern Presbyterian Church, Drs. Brandt, Martin and Niccolls, the last named of whom offered the prayer of dedication. At the installation, Dr. Gorin presided and propounded the constitutional questions, Dr. F. W. Sneed, of the Northern Church, preached the sermon by request, Rev. S. I. Lindsay charged the pastor, and Ruling Elder T. S. McPheeters the people. These services were witnessed by crowded audiences composed largely of members of Northern and Southern churches who are deeply interested in this work among the churchless multitude in the eastern end of the city.—Trans Mississippi Presbyterian.

GENERAL.

Rev. W. W. Taylor, the oldest Presbyterian minister in the State of Delaware died in Wilmington on the 26th inst., aged 86 years.

Four memorial windows valued at $1,000 each were destroyed in Grace church, New York, on the 23d by the explosion of the chemicals in a photographer's flash-light apparatus.

The Northern Church seems to be counting on the Independent African Church, as surely to fall to them.

HAMPDEN SIDNEY NOTES.

The first term of the session '97-'98 of Union Theological Seminary has reached a successful termination. With one or two exceptions, good health has prevailed among professors and students alike. The first monthly conference of faculty and students was held the evening of the 22d inst. It was led by Dr. Moore. The subject of the conference was, the Gospel minister's department in the pulpit and among the people, including correctness, and decency, and simplicity of manners in the sanctuary of God and in the homes of the people. These conferences, restricted as they are to the seminaries, will doubtless prove of untold value to all interested.

The holiday season is upon us Quite a number of the students have left the hill. Our Junior Professor of Hebrew, W. L. Lingle, left last week for home to spend several days in well-earned rest. We are now prepared to say that this is the last Christmas season Union will spend at Hampden Sidney. Doubtless, this time next year, the students and their "friends" will be strolling up and down Broad and Main streets in Richmond gazing with characteristic "Samanthy-at-Saratoga" stare at the holiday wonders on display in the shop windows of the Old Dominion capital city.

TESTIMONIAL.

The following testimonial was adopted by the congregation of the Fayetteville Presbyterian church and sent to us for publication.

Resolved, That the congregation of the Presbyterian church of Fayetteville, N. C., regret that our former pastor, Rev. A. J. McKelway, has felt it to be his duty to accept work which will necessitate his leaving our community, and that the Presbytery of Fayetteville in its wisdom has acquiesced in his request, and dissolved the pastoral relation heretofore existing between him and this congregation.

We had hoped that he might remain with us, and now that he is about to leave us, we wish him success and pray God's blessing upon his labors, in whatever part of the Lord's vineyard he may work. We gratefully remember how ably and faithfully he has served as pastor of this church, his zeal in the cause of his Master and our Master, and we recognize great good as resulting therefrom, and hope the good influences which have been started through his labors in this community and vicinity may continue to bear fruit for the heavenly garners.

DR. LACY'S ARTICLE.

Will you allow me to express my endorsation of Dr. Lacy's article on the late Dr. Smith. It is a noble tribute of a warm heart and clear intellect to one who richly deserved it. Dr. Smith's scholarship and preaching were alike vigorous, who can estimate the good his fine preaching has accomplished. Sunday after Sunday, what an amount of religious truth, enriched by a large culture and reading, and urged upon his hearers by an earnest, fervent declamation was poured out in a rich, full-flowing stream from his pulpit. He not only sowed seed which in years to come will bring forth fruit, "but reaped largely of his own sowing.

He made all his study and reading flow through his sermons. This kept him fresh and thoughtful. There was no letting down in his work, the average was alway high. His people were instructed, built up, developed No man was more at home in the pulpit; he belonged there; it was his natural sphere, his throne and he reigned there as one born to the purple, he ever "Let us now" says the author of Ecclesiasticus "praise famous men. The Lord hath wrought great glory by them. Leaders of the people by their counsels, and by their knowledge of learning meet for the people, were eloquent in their instructions. Their bodies are buried in peace, but their name liveth evermore. The people will tell of their wisdom and the congregation alive will show forth their praise."—Amen and amen.

LETTER FROM DR. CHESTER.

OUR CHINA STATIONS.

On the afternoon of Sept. 29th Dr. Davis and I bade farewell to the friends at Wushi and proceeded by another night's journey on our house-boat to where we found Mr. Woodbridge awaiting us, having come down for that purpose the night before from Sinchang. This was the place where we tried last year the experiment of a "mission to the higher classes," Mr. Woodbridge having been sent there by the Mission on the invitation of several wealthy young men who offered to support him, in part, in return for instruction in English. It was hoped that this would afford an opportunity of reaching them with gospel truth. They treated Mr. Woodbridge with great kindness, and all of them were won to a friendly attitude towards foreigners.

But as to the hope for spiritual results the experiment proved but another verification of the saying, "How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the Kingdom of God." Especially is this saying true in China, where most of those who have riches are either officials, or the sons of officials, and their riches have been acquired as the wages of oppression.

Mr. Woodbridge found himself so hampered and restricted by his relation to these young men, rather than aided, in his opportunities for real gospel work, that he did not ask to be sent back to Changchow another year, and the Mission did not deem it wise to send him. We may still hope however, that some of the seed sown there will bring forth fruit in days to come; and the time may come when the friendship of these young men will be worth all the time and labor expended on them.

Learning of our arrival in the city, one of them, Mr. Liu Sze Chen, sent a servant to our boat to invite us to dine with him. As a mark of very special courtesy he came himself part of the way to meet us. His house is a large one, with a very handsome interior, from a Chinese standpoint. We passed through six doorways from the front before reaching our reception room. When seated Mr. Liu handed Dr. Davis and me each a present, pre-eminently appropriate for travelers in China, of a fine tooth comb. They were of ornamental design however, and given us as samples of an industry for which Changchow is famous.

An uncle of Mr. Liu, came in and spent the day with us, who was said to be a bitter anti-foreigner. But his behaviour towards the last showed plainly that Dr. Davis and Mr. Woodbridge had quite won him over. I had to limit my conversation mostly to the nephew who could talk a little English. Our dining table was covered with spotless linen, and five "boys" with shiny white aprons stood around to serve us. The following dishes were served in the order mentioned, and averaging about two to a course:—Watermelon seed, peanuts, confections, limed eggs, ham, chicken, shrimps, duck, fried fish, shark fins (a very costly delicacy), mushrooms and giblets, stewed tendons, roast pig, soft bones, pea soup, vegetables (various) meat soup, steamed bread, mince pie and last of all—rice. The cooking of most of these dishes was unsurpassed. Tea was served in the sitting room before dinner and boiling water after dinner. Instead of finger bowls we were handed small towels wrung out of perfumed hot water. On retiring we were presented with boutonnieres, and stopped and shook hands with our host at the threshhold of each of the six doors leading to the street.

Changchow has the widest streets and generally the most decent appearance of any Chinese city I have seen. But there is nobody in it yet who will sell any land to a foreigner, so that our efforts to establish a station there for general mission work have all proven unavailing.

Another night's travel on our house-boat brought us to where Mr. and Mrs. Haden now hold the fort, expecting to be reinforced soon by Dr. and Mrs. Hull. The Hadens live in a native house, which has been somewhat modernized and made reasonably comfortable. Arrangements have also been made for letting air and sunshine into it, which is seldom practicable with Chinese houses. It was on the back porch of this house that Messrs. Haden and Little sat, with the magistrate, while search was being made for the body of the child they had been accused of killing and burying in their back yard. When the body, which had been put there by the Chinamen who organized the mob was found, the magistrate ordered it carried back through the crowd, which of course roused them to fury. The escape of the missionaries was made possible by a series of most remarkable special providences, which need not be related, as the story has already been fully told in our Church papers and in The Missionary.

We took a wheelbarrow ride to the fort on the top of the hill three miles away, where they found refuge. From this hill top we had another view of the Yangtse valley, with its swarming multitudes of unevangelized farmers and villagers, and of not less than a million graves, covering all the surrounding hills, of those who, while the Churches have been "playing at Missions," have gone forever beyond the reach of evangelization. Instead of occasional cemeteries, every hill in China is a cemetery, every mulberry grove is full of unburied coffins, and "one is never out of sight of a living Chinaman nor of the grave of a dead one."

Mr. Haden carries on dispensary work at Kiangyin in the mornings, and he and Mr. Little visit and preach both in the city and country in the afternoons. There is one convert who is being trained for a helper, and a number of inquirers. More than a year has passed since the riot with no sign of further disturbance, and the outlook for a prosperous work is quite promising. Yet the workers here are still surrounded with difficulties, and they ask for a special interest in the prayers of the Church at home.

There is no life so humble that if it be true and genuinely human and obedient to God, it may not hope to shed some of his light. There is no life so meagre that the greatest and wisest of us can afford to despise it. We cannot know at what moment it may flash forth with the life of God.

The Beginners of a Nation is the title given by Mr. Eggleston to His History of the Source and Rise of the Earliest English Settlements in America with special reference to the Life and Character of the People. Well has the author carried out his plan, and having the usual account of all the events attending colonization, he carries the reader in his charming manner to the days of the early 17th century and places him in touch with the life of that time, giving the cause and effect of the early explorations and settlements. As the title indicates, this work though complete, in itself, is the initial volume of a series treating of Life in the United States. Price $1.50 in board cover. Messrs. D. Appleton & Co., New York.

Is it not when we come out of ourselves and do something for some other one: when we forget to seek after our own pleasure and seek it for another; when we are lost to our own comfort and find it for those around us—is it not then that we are making happiest the day?

KING OF MY HEART.

"My kingdom is not of this world."
"The kingdom of God is within you."

King of my heart, to Thee alone
I bend the knee. Thou art my own,
There's none on earth, and none in heaven
But Thee, to whom my praise is given,
Hozanna loud! Hozanna high!
To Him who lives, though born to die.

King of my heart, enthroned within,
Subdue the world, the tempter, sin.
Shall these vile foes awake my fears?
No, conquering Prince, Thou reignest here.
Hozanna loud! Hozanna high!
To Him who brings salvation nigh.

King of my heart, Thy sceptre's love,
Let Thy blest Spirit from above
Comfort, uphold, transform, refine,
And sweetly tell me, I am Thine.
Hozanna loud! Hozanna high!
Let heart and voice in praises vie.

King of my heart, dark is the way
That leads to realms of perfect day,
Guide, strengthen, keep, reign Thou in me,
Till I am called to reign with Thee.
Hozanna loud! Hozanna high!
Till the glad anthem rend the sky.

ONE MORE ATTEMPT.

The people of God seem to have grown callous. They seem to have ceased to feel the force of appeals. For this reason we are reluctant to make another; but, for the want of something better to do, we send this forth with a prayer that God may prosper it.

There are two hundred thousand Presbyterian communicants in the South. They are living in comfort, the majority of them in the enjoyment of plenty, and thousands of them are surrounded with luxuries. Th y have sent out a little handful of missionaries to the heathen world by way of carrying out the great commission with which their divine Master intrusted them. To support this little handful of missionaries requires that they contribute annually an average of seventy cents per member. This is the scale on which their work is at present projected. This is the extent of the obligation which they have assumed. After thirty years of development, the work has gradually reached this point where it levies a tax of seventy cents per member in order to its support. By thirty years of earnest, faithful preaching and pleading, the Church has been induced to enlarge its work to this dimension. Seventy cents per annum to prove their loving loyalty to Christ! Seventy cents per annum to show their compassion for dying heathen!

This does not seem a large sum, considering that it is given to the Christ who died for us, and for the purpose of saving our own flesh and blood. But it now seems that the Church has repented of being so extravagant. The two hundred thousand communicants are letting their little handful of missionaries cry in vain for the seventy cents. Hear this voice from Brazil: "We are all out of money. Our appropriations have been reduced, and again reduced, so that it is a constant fight with us to keep what work we have commenced going on, and to live." And this from Japan: "I have simply to state that our treasury is in a most depleted condition. If the steamer due here on the 9th inst., "does not bring us a good draft," on New York, I do not know what we shall do." The "steamer due on the 9th inst., did not bring them 'a good draft,' and we know not what they have done.

Hear a still more pathetic voice: "It is with regret that I write you my first letter in a strain of complaint. In case I do not get some money soon, my name will suffer, to the detriment of the Gospel, I have to pay four salaries, and I do not know whence I shall get money to make the next payment. I have borrowed and borrowed until I am ashamed. I am still hesitating to telegraph for money. What shall I do?" Poor man! He deludes himself with the hope that a telegram might bring money. Hear just one more voice from out of the darkness: "There are no sympathizing bankers or capitalists here to whom we can go, in our straits, for help, as you Christian brethren can do in the United States. On the contrary, when remittances from the Committee are delayed, the men with whom I deal are ready to think something is wrong, and will not trust us. I have borrowed a little money, but now that is all gone.

"Besides being deprived of means to supply daily wants, I can do no itinerating. I have planned a long journey into the interior at the end of this month, to preach to some people who have Bibles, but who have never heard the voice of a minister of the Gospel. They are to send horses for me, a journey of five days, and I fear I shall have to send them back, for I cannot leave my family unprovided for, nor travel without money. Will not the Committee please see if some means cannot be devised so that we may have our funds on time? These long delays are becoming so frequent that my work is suffering from it."

This poor brother is deluding himself with the pleasing hope that the Committee can devise some means to get his funds to him on time. But the Committee cannot devise means to get his funds to him at all. The two hundred thousand members who were expected to pay seventy cents apiece are not doing it. They have shut off the supply. More than one thousand churches, aggregating thirty thousand members, have not given a cent. They do not even pretend to recognize any obligation to obey the Christ whose name they bear. Apparently, they do not know that the Southern Presbyterian Church, to which they nominally belong, has any missionaries in foreign lands. Thousands of communicants in other churches give nothing. They listen to earnest appeals based on the solemn words of Christ, and then go out and say they do not believe in Foreign Missions. They need to be told plainly that they do not believe in Christ. But, counting out those who have neve confessed their obligation to take part in this work, enough remain to care for our small work and our few workers. Brethren, we can, if we will, pay our missionaries their meagre salaries when they are due, and furnish them money to carry on their work without interruption. Our failure is not due to our poverty, nor to the yellow fever, nor to the low price of cotton; our failure is our sin. Not the low state of prices, but the low state of piety, is the root of our trouble. Notwithstanding the chronic cry of hard times, we can buy what we want. Every kind of disaster serves as an argument for diminishing the receipts of our missionary treasury. Our greatest need is not better times, but better hearts; not more means, but less meanness.

We shall not try to add to the pathos of the voices which come to us across the seas. The urgency of the case is sufficiently disclosed by the fact that we are already behind with the appropriations promised to our missionaries to the extent of $15,000, and the receipts constantly dwindling.

Along with this statement of the case we send a request that every heart that loves Christ, and is alive to the claims of his cause, join with us in earnest and persevering prayer that God would quicken the spiritual life of the Southern Presbyterian Church. If only God would revive us, deepening in us a loyal devotion to our dear Master, and making us feel the constraint of His love, this shameful record which we are making would be changed. He will revive us if we unite our hearts in prayer. Shall we not do this? We are invited by all the evangelical churches the world over to unite with them in observing Friday, January 7th, as a day of special prayer for Foreign Missions. We ask that you do this. Oh, let us humble ourselves before God, confess our shortcomings, and plead with Him for a great blessing! Then let all our ministers, on Sabbath, January 9th, preach on the duty and privilege of bearing witness "unto the uttermost parts of the earth." If only we can be faithful, our God will yet be gracious.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

A Scotch visitor to the Carlyles, in Cheyne Row, was much struck with the sound-proof room which the sage had contrived for himself in the attic, lighted from the top, and where no sight or sound from outside could penetrate. "My certes, this is fine!" cried the old friend, with unconscious sarcasm. "Here ye may write and study all the rest of your life and no human being be one bit the wiser."—San Francisco Argonaut.

The bodies of Voltaire and Rousseau were again exhumed on December 18th, at the Pantheon, in order to settle a long standing controversy as to their authenticity. The remains of Voltaire were well preserved and markedly resemble Houdon's statue. Of the body of Rousseau only the skeleton remained.

Appletons' Popular Science Monthly for January will contain an instructive article on Science and Morals by the eminent French chemist, M. P. E. Berthelot. M. Berthelot contends that morals have grown out of science, and that, instead of their being based on religion, the latter is really the outgrowth of an ethical theory built up unconsciously for scientific data.

Prof. Maurice Bloomfield, of the Johns Hopkins University, is engaged in a work that is certain to attract the interest of scholars of the East all over the world. He has obtained the consent of the library authorities of the University of Tuebingen to reproduce photographically a unique manuscript of the Atharva-Veda. Prof. Bloomfield has devoted a considerable share of his scientific labors to the study of the Atharva-Veda. An English translation of it from his pen has recently been published by the Clarendon press, in Oxford. Some years ago he published as the fourteenth volume of the Journal of the American Oriental Society one of the most important texts of that veda, the so-called Sutra of Kaushika, and both himself and his pupils have been active in the interpretation and criticism of those difficult texts.

The manuscript which he will reproduce is known as the Kashmirian Atharva-Veda, and was discovered through the efforts of the late Prof. Rudolf von Roth. The manuscript is written on birchbark in the Kashmirian, the so-called Sharada character, and it said by scholars that, in the entire domain of Indian manuscript tradition, there is no single manuscript which claims so much interest as this unique one on birchbark.

Prof. Rudolph von Roth, as early as 1856, was led by a remark of the traveler Baron von Huegel to the belief that a new version of Atharva-Veda might be found in Kashmir. Baron von Huegel, in his work, "Kashmir und das Reich der Siek," remarked that the Brahmins of Kashmir belonged to the Atterwan, or, as the said, Atterman Veda, and upon the strength of this statement Prof. von Roth induced the authorities of the British government in India to institute a search in the inaccessible earthly paradise in the hope of finding a new version of the Atharva-Veda. His prophetic surmise came true most brilliantly. In 1875 His Highness the late Maharaja of Jammu and Kashmir, Ranbir Singh, had this manuscript sent to Sir William Muir, the then lieutenant governor of the Northwest Provinces, by whom it was in turn dispatched to Prof. von Roth. The latter, after publishing a stirring account of its discovery, character and contents in a famous tract, guarded it until his recent death; it has now passed into the possession of the University Library of Tuebingen, whose greatest and priceless treasure it forms.

It consists of 237 leaves (written on both sides) of about 20 by 25 centimeters in size. Repeated search and persistent inquiries have conclusively shown that no other original manuscript of this veda is likely to turn up. The manuscript is absolutely unique.

Some time ago Dr. Bloomfield wrote to Prof. Garbe, the successor of Prof von Roth, at Tuebingen, and he received an enthusiastic offer to send the manuscript to this country if Dr. Bloomfield would reproduce it, and now the work is to be published by the Johns Hopkins University under the careful supervision of Dr. Bloomfield. Only two hundred numbered copies will be issued.

Kashmir, where the manuscript was discovered, is the land of poetry and beauty. It is called the "Earthly Paradise," and formerly was the summer resort of the Mogul emperors. The latter had built a great roadway from Delhi, the capital of the empire, to Kashmir, and every year the royal household traveled in state across the Himalaya mountains to this glorious country to enjoy the balmy air and glorious scenery.—Baltimore Sun.

The Daughters of the Parsonage by Belle V. Chisolm is a charming story for girls—one calculated to interest and to ennoble. It is bright and full of life and will make an excellent addition to the home and Sunday school library. The book is strongly and attractively bound in red, gold and black. Presbyterian Board of Publication, Philadelphia.

We note among the numbers of the Colportage Library published by The Bible Institute Colportage Association, Chicago, the old favorite and beautiful and pathetic story by Mrs. O. F. Fitt, East Northfield, Mass.

The Missionary Calendar of Prayer for '98 has been received. Those who have had this handbook of our missionaries and mission stations fully appreciate its merits, but to those who have not yet had this pleasure we most heartily recommend it. The illustrations are excellent, the selections most appropriate and the general information extensive. We especially note the feature of giving not only the date and stations of our missionaries, but their native State and the maiden name and home of our married lady workers. This Calendar is edited by Rev. D. C. Rankin and published by the Committee of Foreign Missions. Price in ornamental cover 75 cents. Send orders to Mr. Erskine Reed, Treasurer, P. O. Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston, have issued Tennyson's Idyls of the King in two volumes most conveniently arranged with excellent engraving of the author, clear type and strongly bound, in green and gold. These works are edited by Wm. J Rolfe Litt. D., formerly Head Master of the High School, Cambridge, Mass., whose notes will be found of incalculable benefit in the reading of the poems.

In Knights of the Round Table, we have most charmingly told the stories of Arthur Guinevere, Percivale, the Seige Perilous, the Holy Grail and others that have never ceased to thrill the soul from centuries back to the present day and the author, William Henry Frost by his interesting and tasteful style, the illustrator, Sidney Richmond Burleigh, by his attractive and artistic pictures and the publishers Messrs. PUZZLE DEPARTMENT.

Answers for Dec. 16th.

In saying farewell to our little friends we wish to thank them all for their interest in this department and especially would we remember our three little faithfuls—Cornie and Myrtle Wilkinson and Maggie Hall. May the information gained in searching out these questions and answers be but a beginning of knowledge to be acquired of the Bible in latter years and may these boys and girls ever have a warm love for their church paper and be true to it from whatever point it may be issued.

To our correspondents in the Letter-Box we wish many happy and useful years of life.

THE OUTLOOK FOR MISSIONS IN CHINA.

The following article appears in the current number of the Methodist Review, over the signature of Dr. John Stevens. The editor of the Review commends it to the notice of his readers in a footnote:

To every foreigner resident in China who has an open eye to the course of events it is apparent that a great change is taking place in the attitude of the Chinese, and particularly of the official classes, towards missionaries and their work. Whereas formerly the mandarins were almost altogether contemptuous or else actively hostile, many of them are now looking to missionaries as a possible means of help and benefit to their country. Here and there, it is true, a man is still found who shows the old spirit of proud superiority and antagonism, but such men are becoming fewer and their influence is evidently declining. In saying this we must not be understood to suggest that the officials are at all desirous that Christianity may spread and triumph. It is extremely probable that, with rare exceptions, they are more or less indifferent with regard to the Gospel and the Church. But they recognize that Western people have both knowledge and power, in which China is sadly lacking, and they look to the missionaries with something of the feeling with which the impotent man at the gate of the temple looked to Peter and John. They hope to receive something from the missionarics, but have little inkling of the true character and magnitude of the blessings which these bring in the name of Jesus Christ.

With the masses of the people it is different. The missionaries have now for many years been in close contact with them over a large part of the empire. Consequently they better appreciate the true object of the many-sided activity of the Church, and their quickened interest must be regarded as, in a considerable degree, an interest in Christianity itself.

The signs of these two movements, the one among the officials and literati and the other among the people, are manifold. Mention may be made of some of the most important and striking. (1.) The increase in the number of converts and inquirers is extraordinary. In Fukien province, and in the very neighborhood of the massacre of 1895, no less than twenty thousand inquirers presented themselves last year in connection with the three missions working there. Of these some five thousand have been accepted for Church membership. Dr. Griffith John, who has been working in Hupeh for thirty-five years, says that the increase of the last few months is unprecedented, and that the character of the converts is such as to inspire confidence. Similar statements might be made of other provinces, notably Shantung and Manchuria. Even in Hunan, the most bitterly anti-foreign of all the provinces, there are now at least two devoted companies of Christians. (2.) The demand for Bibles and Bible portions, as well as for Christian books and tracts shows a remarkable advance. The American Bible Society circulated last year no less than 396,088 copies of the Scriptures, in whole or in part, and of these only some two per cent were donated. The sales of the British and Foreign and of the National Bible Society of Scotland have also been phenomenal. The enlarged success of the tract societies can be no more than named here. As an indication of what they are doing it may be stated that the Central Society, working from Hankow, circulated last year nearly a million and a half of their publications. Other and kindred societies, such as the Society for the Diffusion of Christian and General Knowledge, and the Educational Society of China, have also felt the sweep of the flowing tide, and have contributed not a little to its force and volume. (3.) Medical and school work are now in high favor. In some instances officials of the highest rank have appealed to the missionaries to aid them in establishing institutions for the instruction of Chinese youth in Western knowledge, and many of the mission schools are crowded.

If it is asked by what means this great and significant change has been brought about, the answer is plain. In the good providence of God the late war with Japan was made a potent agency in opening the eyes of the ruling classes to the weakness and need of their country. Much of the prejudice and opposition of former years have been disarmed by the influence of Christian literature, the beneficent and self-denying work of missionary physicians, the teaching in Christian colleges and schools, missionary interviews with mandarins, and not least, the pure and devoted lives of missionaries and their families.

The Christian Church has a great and effectual door opened of God in the China of today. True, there are yet many adversaries in the land. It is perhaps not improbable that there will yet be many days of trial and persecution, both for foreign workers and native Christians, in some parts of this wide field. But, notwithstanding, the times may be said to be ripe for a more determined and more aggressive effort on the part of the Church. A truly magnificent opportunity is now afforded to well-equipped Christian physicians, teachers and preachers. Will not the Church hear the voice of God in the present condition of affairs, and send forth and sustain such laborers as are needed for the ingathering of the Lord's harvest in China? The country has long been known as the Celestial Empire. To Christian eyes it is manifestly ruled, not by its rightful King, but by the prince of darkness. Now is the time when an unparalleled opportunity is afforded the Church to bring the Kingdom of God near to the people, through the manifestation of the Truth.

INTERESTING NEWS FROM AFRICA.

As I presume that accounts of various kinds will be appearing in the papers about the incident of the killing of some of my people near the junction of the Kassai and Lulua rivers, I send you this short statement of the principal facts in order to let it appear as soon as possible, as it may take more time to prepare the full statement than I can spare before the next mail departs. I sent a partial statement to my mother, but it was abruptly interrupted and terminated.

1. The attack was by the Bena Luidi, a tribe which had been incensed against the white man by the past actions of the State government. The tribe is not one in which present missionary work is being done.

2. The affair occurred on the occasion of my going down to the head of navigation in the dry season of the rivers, to arrange about the forwarding to their destination of cargo delivered there by the river-steamers. We have no steamer of our own, and I used canoes. The mission had no canoes previously, and I had bought two, as we needed them, I believed, on account of the very restless and disturbed condition of the country about us, because of the revolt of the Batetete under Barow Dhanis. In case of a general rising a canoe even might be useful; we have nothing else.

3. The two canoes in which we travelled that day kept near together pretty well all day; but on the occasion of the attack, some bends in the river hid the rear canoe from sight: and it was treacherously attacked and fired into by the Bena Luidi who had been hidden in the bush along the river-bank, and either did not see or feared to attack the first boat. As they used poisoned arrows it was a noiseless battle. Our whole expedition counted only three guns, and the attack must evidently have been so quiet that it either confused or killed our people before they used the guns they had. So the first knowledge or suspicion we had of the fate of the other boat was when it failed to appear. When we went to seek them, the Luidi all ran away. One man however escaped, and it was from him we learned the particulars as above and as I shall later send them. He afterwards died from a poisoned arrow wound.

4. The treacherous character of these Luidi may be judged from the fact that on the sand-bank where we awaited the other boat, before we knew of the attack, a poisoned arrow was picked up, just behind where I passed, by one of the boys. I would never have known of it but for the fact, and gave no importance to the incident until we learned the fact of the fight. The people say that the Luidi fire arrows high into the air with such precision that they come down and alight on the object aimed at with terrific force. A scratch, however, from one of these fearful arrows is death. I presume the arrow was fired from the bush on shore, in hopes that I might be quietly despatched, and then they could get the rest of the people. An open attack might provoke the gun, which, in the white man's hand, they seem to fear in a curiously superstitious way.

The death of my people so near at hand, and yet without my knowledge or ability to succor them, was an awful thing. I cannot tell how I have suffered. They were principally my faithful hammock men and their wives. A curious fact is that none of the original Luebo station people were in that boat.

We are here in the midst of such things. But let not our people fear, rather let the brave come out to help. My people died en route to help get the missionaries' food and clothing up to them. Surely will not our people come out to these darkened souls and show that the great Church will not allow the fidelity of such poor untutored heathen to put them to shame?

DONNELL.—Samuel Thomas Donnell, died at his father's home, near McLeansville, N. C., the 10th of December, 1897, at the age of twenty-four years, eleven months and fifteen days.

He was the third and last son of Thos. B. and Martha J. Donnell, his two brothers having preceded him to the home on high. For the last eight months, he was afflicted with a pulmonary trouble, which took him off on the above mentioned day. In his long sickness, he was always bright and cheerful. Aware of his physical condition, he was perfectly resigned to the Lord's will, and prepared to answer His call: "Come up higher." He was a child of the Covenant, and professed his faith in Christ more than nine years ago, before he was sixteen years old. He lived "soberly, righteously and godly, in this present world." His death is, in some respects, afflicting, but, in others, comforting, to his aged father and mother, and his four sisters, and other loved ones, and many friends. They sorrow, but not "as others which have no hope." Believing that "Jesus died and rose again," they believe also, that "them which sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him."

ROBERT VANCE HOUSTON.

Born Oct. 20th, 1861, died Dec. 14th. 1897. That is a simple record, but there is much in it. It speaks of a young mother rejoicing over her first-born, and now, in her advancing years and widowhood, burying her eldest son. It speaks of the young wife, so soon left a widow, with only her little boy to comfort her in her loneliness. It speaks of a wider circle of brothers and sisters left to mourn. But the Christian's hope robs death of his terror. For several years "Vance" had been a member of the church of his fathers: and of late especially has given evidence, that he had "set his house in order," and 'prepared to meet his God." Calmly and bravely he met death, commending his young wife and child to the mercies of his Father in Heaven.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Dec. 22d '97.

Among the sermons in advocacy of peace preached in Washington churches the Sunday before Christmas, in response to the request of the International Peace Society, was one by Dr. Parsons, pastor of the Church of the Reformation, concluding with the following beautiful language and sentiments: "God's ideal state is not impossible. The Bible foretells it. The poets sing of it as a time when cruelty shall end. This is the flower of Christian sentiment. We all stand for it as we read our Bibles, as we read history, and know the horrors of war. We look forward to it as we look for the coming of Christmastide, which is some day to—

Ring out the thousand wars of old,
Ring in the thousand years of peace;
Ring in the valiant men and free,
The larger heart, the kindlier hand;
Ring out the darkness of the land,
Ring in the Christ that is to be."

One of a series of meetings under the auspices of the National Bureau of Reform was held this week in Luther Place Memorial church, and was presided over by ex-Civil Service Commissioner Lyman. Mr. Lyman explained that the purpose of this and other meetings to follow was to get the public interested in the reform legislation asked of Congress. Dr. Crafts, president of the bureau, spoke on the family and the Sabbath, laying emphasis upon the fact that purity and sacredness of the family relations were the most marked differences between the most enlightened Christian civilization and the highest yet attained by the heathen. Bishop Satterlee on "Marriage and Divorce," especially advocating the bill which has been introduced in Congress providing for one uniform divorce law for the entire country. He said that the present easy methods of obtaining divorce were rapidly breaking up the most sacred ties of the family, and that the popular ideas of marriage were constantly getting lower and lower. He said that during his entire career as a minister he had made it a rule to refuse to marry any couple secretly and had always informed his people that if they wished him to marry them it must be done in presence of their relatives and friends; also he had invariably advised those who had sought his advice in their domestic troubles against divorce, telling them that it was better for the individual to suffer in silence than to disrupt the ties of home and family. Representative Ellis, of Oregon, author of the bill to prohibit the sale of liquor in the Capitol building; also to prohibit its sale in any building owned or controlled by the United States and upon any government reservation, spoke on the evils of intemperance. He said the presence of saloons in the Capitol building made a bad impression upon visitors to Washington, and that the law-makers of the United States should set a better example to the public than that of permitting two saloons to be conducted in the building in which the laws were made. He said that in his long experience as a prosecuting officer in the courts he had found that more than one-half of the divorces applied for could be directly traced to intoxication, and expressed the opinion that if the saloons were abolished the percentage of divorces would decrease one-half. He also added that he was in favor of legislation prohibiting the smoking of cigarettes in public places, because they were offensive to him, as he believed them to be to more than one-half of the people of the United States.

Although not new, the following incident, said by a gentleman who lives in Washington to have occurred when the late Henry Ward Beecher and Col. Robert G. Ingersoll were accidentally thrown together at a mutual friend's house, is good enough to repeat. After the conversation had been general for awhile, somebody introduced religion. Col. Ingersoll proceeded to favor the company with his atheistic views, which were combatted by several. Mr. Beecher said nothing, until he was asked if he had nothing to say on the subject. Then, drawing himself to an erect attitude, he replied: "Nothing; in fact, if you will excuse me for changing the conversation I will say that while you gentlemen were talking, my mind was bent on a most deplorable spectacle which I witnessed to day, "What was it?" inquired Col. Ingersoll. "Why," replied Mr. Beecher, "as I was walking down town to-day, I saw a poor man slowly and carefully picking his way through a cesspool of mud, in the endeavor to cross the street. He had just reached the middle of the filth when a big bully, himself all bespattered with mud, rushed up to him, jerked the crutches from under the unfortunate man, and left him sprawling and quite helpless in the pool of liquid dirt, which almost engulfed him." "What a brute he was!" exclaimed Col. Ingersoll, and the explanation was echoed by all present. "Yes," said Mr. Beecher, shaking his long, white hair back from his forehead, and pointing his finger at Ingersoll, "yes, Col. Ingersoll, and you are the man." The human soul is lame, but Christianity gives crutches to it to pass the highway of life. It is your teaching that knocks the crutches from under it, and leaves a helpless and rudderless wreck in the slough of despond. If robbing the human soul of its only support on this earth—religion—be your profession, why, ply it to your heart's content. It requires an architect to erect a building; an incendiary may reduce it ashes."

For those who keep this Christmas tide
Beyond all pain and sin,
Beyond the reach of ill or hurt
Thy heavenly courts within,
We thank thee, Lord, though still our eyes
Are dim with longing tears,
And yearning arms can scarcely wait
The slow march of the years.

For those who still with us abide
Are anxious fears and cares,
So many pitfalls lurk unseen,
So many hidden snares,
To those who in the Home-land dwell,
No harm can e'er betide;
We thank thee, Lord, for all our own
Safe on the other side.

THE FIRST WOMAN'S CLUB.

The first woman's club founded in America, or at least the first about which we have authentic information, was held in the city of Penn 102 years ago, under the name of "The Female Society for the Relief and Improvement of the Poor. According to the Philadelphia Ledger, it was begun and organized by a Quaker spinster, Anne Parrish, who was born in 1760, and died just before the nineteenth century began, at the end of the year 1800. The society consisted first of twenty three young, accomplished women of the best families, who met every week to go about among the poor and the needy. When the city was visited by the yellow fever, shortly after the formation of the club, the mettle of its members was tried and found to ring true; while most who had the means fled from the town, these twenty three Quaker women stayed with Anne Parrish and fought the plague, raising money, visiting the dying, clothing the well, and comforting the bereaved. From that time to the present the society has endured and continued in the work thus early initiated; the granddaughters and great granddaughters of the first founders, who have inherited the club membership along with their Quaker traditions, and their fine old family names that still count in Philadelphia society, are now preparing to celebrate the club's 102d birthday. The membership is passed down through the eldest daughter, and the methods are not altered from those first chosen; there is no President or Vice-President, the only officers being two clerks, a treasurer, and a committee of thirteen; the prominent work of the club is the maintenance of a "house of industry," where nearly a hundred old Quaker women of indigent circumstances go daily to sew, knit, and mend in comfortable quarters, in the house on North Seventh Street which the club has lodged in since the middle of the century. The women are paid good wages for their work, and are given a good meal in the middle of the day, besides being provided with easy chairs while they work. The society women provide them with sewing, and bachelors send thither for their mending.

For the first time in its history Yale University has a Japanese girl as a student. She is Miss Yoshi Yamaguchi, and, with her brother, Leiich Yamaguchi, came from Kioto, Japan. Both are graduates of the Doshisha University, one of the leading colleges of Japan. The brother has entered Yale to study economics, and the sister will pursue the courses in English and music in the new post-graduate department.

A NOTABLE MONUMENT.

The first Southern woman to have her name engraved upon a monument as the designer, says the New Orleans States, is Miss Virginia Montgomery, a native of Alabama, but a resident of New Orleans, "who has long held a foremost place in the art world of the Southern metropolis." The monument that is to be built after Miss Montgomery's design, it is explained briefly, is to be erected in San Antonio, Texas, as a Confederate memorial and is to be a very handsome tribute to the Confederate cause. The material will be the same stone that was used in building the State capitol at Austin.

Miss Montgomery submitted the design to the Bernard E. Bee Chapter, of San Antonio, in an open competition with many accomplished artists, and hardly dared, as she says, to hope for success. Her design was accepted, however, and is much praised for its beauty. The artist has herself explained this feature of it in acknowledging some of the compliments to her work. She said: "It ought to have beauty, for I worked at the drawing with all the Southern woman's love for the Lost Cause surging through my heart and mind. The subject was so tender and dear that it could hardly help making beauty."—Baltimore Sun.

There is still a yoke and a burden. The rest of heaven is not a quiescent state, but it is the pleasant exercise of the faculties developed here. As Fairbairn beautifully says: "Surely the idea is inadmissable, that an instrument wrought up at so much expense to a polished fitness for service, is destined to be suspended forever on palace walls of heaven, as a glittering bauble, no more to make proof of its temper?"

The physical existence of mankind is something like an account in a ledger. Health on one side—disease on the other. All the pure air, good food, rational exercise and sound sleep go on one side of the account. It sums up health and strength. On the other side, are bad air, poor food, overwork and worry That foots up weakness and disease.

When your appetite or sleep is disturbed; when the stomach and liver are not working properly, of the bowels are not in regular condition; you are losing vitality and strength; figures are going down on the wrong side of the ledger. Unless this is stopped and the other side of the account is built up, you'll soon be a physical bankrupt

The most profitable account a sick man can open in his Ledger of Life is with Dr Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a wonderful and scientific tonic which imparts a direct and healthy stimulus to the entire nutritive organism. It strengthens the digestive fluids and the liver, and enables the blood-making organs to produce pure, red, highly-vitalized blood.

It is not a mere temporary exhilarator. It feeds the constitution with genuine, permanent power. It writes big, round sums on the health side of the account, and wipes out the figures of weakness and disease. It animates the vital forces and builds up healthy flesh, muscular energy and nerve-force.

For nearly 30 years Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y. His formulas are everywhere recognized as the most effective remedies in the world. His "Pleasant Pellets" are the most perfect and scientific cure for constipation ever invented. They are not violent in their action, but perfectly sure, and at the same time comfortable. Their great reputation has called out a score of imitations, which druggists sometimes try to substitute, but there is nothing "just as good."

NEW YEAR'S EVE.

The passing bell for the dying year
Rings through the silence far and near,
With solemn dirge-notes, soft and low,
Tolling a requiem sad and slow

For swiftly passing time!
Dying! dying! dying!
Ring out the bells in mournful rhyme!
Flying! flying! flying!
Singeth a sad voice, softly sighing,
The voice of fleeting time!

Hark! far away in the old church-tower,
The clock is striking the midnight hour!"
Merrily now ring out the bells,
Filling the air with joyous swells.

To greet the new-born time!
Ringing! ringing! ringing!
Thrilling the world with their mirthful chimes,
Merrily ringing,
The birth of a new year joyously singing,
The birth of hopeful time.

FRED'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF ONE.

[CONCLUSION.]

Fred found that just as soon as he began to work for Foreign Missions, he began to want to know more about what his own church was doing for missions, and he began to read The Missionary, and the bits of news about mission work that were scattered through the papers

All this time he was finding ways to make his missionary money and to lay it up.

"Mother," he said one evening, 'let me saw wood for you on Saturday, and pay me just what you pay Uncle Lewis."

Mrs. Lawton thought for awhile, then she said:

"Well dear, once in a way I will, but I could'nt do it regularly, because that would be taking old Lewis's actual living from him; for you know, he supports himself by sawing wood; but, as he saws for other people, I could give you the sawing occasionally."

So the next Saturday Fred earned his money by sawing.

It was not any easy thing to give up the whole of his Saturday morning to this work especially when two or three boys were standing around and tempting him to stop and play.

"What makes you so awfully industrious any how Lawton?" asked of the boys.

"Earnin' his Christmas money I bet," said another.

Still Fred kept on sawing. Some boys would have been afraid to tell for fear of being laughed at, but Fred Lawton was not a coward, and the boys all knew that.

"I say Lawton, what's the use of being so mysterious? What's up?"

"I don't mean to be mysterious, but I don't think I'm bound to tell everything.

Then Fred thought: "May be if I tell them they will begin to work too." He remembered a favorite verse of his mother's: "Provoking each other unto love and good works."

He stopped sawing, and raising his flushed face, said pleasantly:

"Well boys if you must know, I'm trying to make some money to give for Foreign Missions. Women and girls work and have societies, and mission bands and I don't see why boys can't do so too. "And since I have begun to work I find I want to know something about what I am working for, and I tell you some of the best stories I ever read, are the lives of missionaries. Talk about heroes in battles! they don't stand any where near some of those brave fellows that have lost their lives in the effort to tell the heathen about Jesus."

The boys looked at him in astonishment, Fred would have been astonished at himself if he had taken time to think of what he had said.

"Where did you read about them?" asked one boy with some interest.

Fred answered quickly:

If you would like to read something about missions I will lend you my Missionary or some books whenever you want them?

The boys were hardly ready for that yet, and began quickly to talk of something else, but the seed was sown; and when they went away a thought struck Fred, that made him run to the house very promptly when the dinner bell rang.

"Mother I have a new idea that I would like to tell you about sometime," he said at the tabie.

"Well, come to me just before supper and I will hear what it is."

Just before it was time to light the lamps was a favorite time for their chats. Fred loved these talks and this evening he was particularly willing to come in.

"Here you are my boy. Now for your idea," said his mother, as he cuddled down at the floor at her knee.

He soon told his mother of the talk with the boys in the morning, and especially that one of them had asked where he could read about the brave missionaries.

"And I thought, mother, that this was the way God meant me to do mission work. I might have a sort of circulating library of mission books, among the boys and that when they read of the wonderful lands, and the brave lives of the missionaries, they may get interested and give too."

"Why yes!" exclaimed Mrs. Lawton clapping her hands, "and who knows but that some day you will have a regularly organized Boys' Mission Band? And now, we must go to work and look for some very interesting books, "Mackay of Uganda, or The Life of Allan Gardner, or our own Samuel Lapsley."

Fred did lend the boys some numbers of his missionary and some books. At first only two or three cared for them, but the number increased to six, and with Mrs. Lawton's encouragement and help they formed the F. M. R. Circle and are all reading, and working and giving to the great cause of Foreign Missions. And this is what Fred's Missionary Society of One did!

THE BEES POCKETS

Bees are wonderful little creatures. They are the most useful of all the insects that fly. They are about an inch long. All summer long they are busy making wax and honey, and storing them for future use. They know all of the flowers in our gardens, and they know when it is going to rain, and when she sun will shine. They are kind to their children, the young bees.

Do you know how bees make bread? They have two little pockets upon their thighs which make very nice side-pockets, just such as we should want to hold things What do you think they do with these pockets? They put their little heads into the flowers and get the sweet juice for honey. In doing this they cover themselves with the yellow dust, called pollen, which you have often seen in flowers. They have slender, pointed hairs upon their heads, and upon their legs they have hard yellow hairs, which you can easily see. These hairs make a sort of comb which the bees use in cleaning the pollen from their heads. First they take their fore-feet and brush the pollen very carefully from their heads on to their middle feet, and from them to their hind feet. From there it is safely packed in these little pockets on their thighs. As soon as they have filled the pockets they fly away home and put the pollen in a safe place in the hive to make into bread to feed their babies.—Adapted

A CHRISTMAS LEGEND IN BELGIUM.

The children of Belgium have a charming Christmas legend about Santa Claus pony. They always place their wooden sabots on the window ledge stuffed full of oats, hay and fodder for the "dear Christmas pony." In the early morning they run on tiptoe to look, and behold the hay is all gone, and the shoes are brimming over with toys and sweetmeats! Then the children clap their hands with glee and wish they could only have waked in time to see the pony munching his oats. That would have been such fun!—Ella F. Mosby in St. Nicholas.

FOREIGN.

Dr. M. F. de Campos Sailes, governor of the state of San Paulo, who is the nominee for President of Brazil, has planned a tour of the United States for the purpose of studying our system of government and our institutions. Although the elections in Brazil are not held until March next, his nomination is equivalent to election. The inauguration will not take place until next September. His visit will probably have an important bearing on a future reciprocity treaty between the United States and Brazil. No negotiations have yet begun with Brazil on this subject, mainly because the present administration there desires to leave the matter for the new President to deal with.

Dispatches from Yokohama state that Count Matsoukata, the premier, and Admiral the Marquis Saiga Tsugumichi, minister of marine, have resigned. It is probable that Marquis Ito will be the new premier.

The Pope's encyclical on the Manitoba school question was published at Rome on the 24th. After recalling the religious history of Canada and eulogizing its scholastic institutions, he expresses regret at the decisions taken seven years ago in Manitoba relative to the Catholic schools, and points out the rights of Catholics, according to the federal agreement.

The Pope condemns a school system based on religious neutrality, praises the zeal the bishops have displayed on the question, regrets that the Catholics are not equally united, owing to political passions, and admits that the authorities have done something to diminish the inconveniences of Manitoba school legislation, but declares this to be inadequate, and exhorts Catholics to persist in claiming all their rights, though they must not refuse any partial reparations obtainable, with the view to reduce the perils of the education of youth.

In conclusion the encyclical says that in the event of these being unobtainable Catholics should provide their own schools, and adopt, under the guidance of their bishops, a programme of study consistent with their religion and all literary and scientific progress.

THINGS USEFUL.

That squeeze of lemon improves scrambled eggs, and it should be added while they are cooking.

* * *

When you suspect what you are cooking has been scorched because you have neglected it for just one moment too long, lift the vessel holding the food from the fire and stand it in a pan of water for a few minutes. In almost every case the scorched taste will entirely disappear.

* * *

Celery Vinegar: Celery vinegar is useful for flavoring, and may be made of pieces of celery covered with some pure cider vinegar, or the celery seeds may be used. If the seeds are to be used, cover one ounce of celery seed with one quart of pure cider vinegar, and let it stand two weeks, shaking it every day. It will then be ready for use.

* * *

Sardine Croquettes: Remove the skin from one box of sardines; with a silver spoon mash the sardines to a paste, adding a tablespoonful of lemon juice. Stir in one cup of bread crumbs, the white of one egg, a teaspoonful of salt; a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce and a dash of pepper. Form this into small balls, dip in egg and bread crumbs, and fry in smoking hot fat. Serve with sauce Hollamlaise.
